Welcome to the Yale Center for International and Area Studies.

For more than half a century, YCIAS has been at the forefront of international education, training generations of academic, political, business, and nonprofit leaders, as well as citizens from all corners of the world. Today, we continue to offer a wide range of opportunities for students to explore and learn about international and regional affairs, both within and across a wide array of academic disciplines.

YCIAS is Yale’s gateway to the world. Its rich array of research projects, graduate programs, and undergraduate majors provides a locus for research and teaching of international affairs, societies, and cultures around the world.

The scholars and teachers at YCIAS have made tremendous contributions to our understanding of the world, and have trained generations of students, many of whom are now at the top of their fields. These range from development economics to government and diplomacy, environmental activism, and the understanding and promotion of global health.

YCIAS endeavors to make understanding the world outside the borders of the United States, and the role of the United States in the world, an integral part of both a liberal arts education for undergraduates and research and professional training for graduate students. We strive to help students learn from and inform the interconnected communities in which we live: local, national, regional, and global.

I hope that all students, whether in graduate, professional, or Yale College programs, will find the YCIAS Bulletin a helpful guide as they plan their course of study at Yale.

Overview

The Yale Center for International and Area Studies (YCIAS) is Yale University’s focal point for encouraging and coordinating teaching and research on international affairs, societies, and cultures around the world. It draws its strength by tapping the interests and combining the intellectual resources of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and of the professional schools. YCIAS seeks to make understanding the world outside the borders of the United States, and the role of the United States in the world, an integral part of liberal education and professional training at the University. YCIAS provides six undergraduate majors, including four focused on world regions: African, East Asian, Latin American, and Russian and East European Studies. Two others are focused globally, one on International Studies and the other on Ethnicity, Race, and Migration. At the graduate level, YCIAS provides four master’s degree programs. Three are regionally focused on African, East Asian, and European and Russian Studies and one is globally focused on International Relations. YCIAS also sponsors six graduate certificates of concentration through its Councils on African, European, International Affairs, Latin American and Iberian, and Middle East Studies. Language training is an integral component of each of the sixteen degree and certificate programs. In total, 250 – 300 students are enrolled in these degree programs in any given year.

Beyond the ten degree programs and other curricular contributions, YCIAS has twenty-three interdisciplinary faculty councils, centers, committees and programs. These provide opportunities for scholarly research and intellectual innovation and encourage faculty and student interchange for undergraduates as well as graduate and professional students. The home of one of the oldest interdisciplinary programs in International Relations, YCIAS is a founding member of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs (APSIA), along with Columbia, Georgetown, Princeton, Tufts, and other institutions.

YCIAS extracurricular programs deepen and extend this research-teaching nexus of faculty and students at Yale, with over 500 lectures, conferences, workshops, roundtables, symposia and film and art events each year. Virtually all of these are open to the community at large. Its annual flagship lectures, the Coca-Cola World Fund Lecture and the George Herbert Walker, Jr. Lecture in International Studies, bring a number of prominent scholars and political figures to the Yale campus. YCIAS reaches a large academic and public audience with a variety of publications including journals, monographs, working papers and books. Its Program in International Educational Resources (PIER) reaches out to the larger public, especially targeting educators at the primary and secondary (K–12) as well as college levels, with professional and curricular development training programs and services, in addition to teaching materials and electronic resources.

The number of international faculty visitors to YCIAS has also increased dramatically over the past years. In cooperation with several special externally-funded programs facilitating exchanges, YCIAS has brought more than sixty scholars each year from a range of disciplines and numerous countries to join the Yale community for periods ranging from six weeks to a full academic year. In addition to research, they collectively teach more than forty courses annually.

An enduring commitment of YCIAS is to enable students to spend time abroad to undertake research and other academically-oriented international and area studies-related activities. In the 2003–2004, funds totaling just over $2.3 million supported 415 Yale students, 55 percent graduate/professional and 45 percent undergraduates.

The Fox International Fellowship Program is a two-way exchange between Yale and eight partner universities—Moscow State University, Free University of Berlin, Cambridge University, Tokyo University, Fudan University, Institut d'études de Politiques de Paris, El Colegio de México, and Jawaharlal Nehru University. The fellowship is designed to promote the development of individual relationships and understanding among future leaders on which world peace depends. The intention is for the Fox International Fellowship Program to expand in the coming years to achieve worldwide status and coverage, adding other equally distinguished universities in other countries.

Additionally, YCIAS is increasing its capacity to provide fellowships for graduate and professional students to come from various parts of the world to pursue a degree at Yale. YCIAS has provided matching funds to federal grants such as the Muskie Fellowships that bring students from the former Soviet Union to pursue graduate and professional degrees at Yale. Through its success in federal grant programs, YCIAS is able to support fourteen to sixteen U.S. citizens enrolled in advanced degree programs with intensive language study through the Higher Education Act’s Title VI, Foreign Language and Area Studies Fellowships. Other foundation sources provide similar, if smaller, portions of fellowship support targeted at graduate and professional students pursuing internationally oriented degrees or joint degrees between International Relations and one of the professional schools.

YCIAS is not a school, and all its faculty have joint appointments in other units of the University. We work with roughly 250 faculty across the University in any given year and support fifteen ladder faculty positions, as well as more than sixty visiting scholars in different arts and sciences fields. In the last three years, YCIAS has also appointed many ongoing language and adjunct faculty to multi-year appointments in specific languages and international fields. Additionally, three international, interdisciplinary professorships were created in 2002 by the University at YCIAS. The new professorships are unique in that faculty from throughout the University are consulted to identify top scholars who can hold cutting-edge joint professorship appointments between arts and science departments and/or professional schools and departments. To date, two have been endowed—the William K. Lanman, Jr. Professor of International Studies and the Leitner Professor of Law, Politics, and International Studies.

The efforts by YCIAS to inspire and support cross-disciplinary conversation and debate have been aided significantly by its venue, Henry R. Luce Hall. Made possible by an extraordinary gift from the Luce Foundation, Luce Hall provides YCIAS with 40,000 square feet of elegant, yet practical, class and seminar space, an auditorium and common room, and offices for staff, faculty, and visiting scholars.
History

Yale’s prominence in international and area studies has its roots in the earliest days of the University, when early missionaries trained at Yale worked in Asia and around the world. Yale established one of the first faculty chairs in a non-western language, Sanskrit, the root language of much of contemporary South Asia. The seeds of a proud Latin Americanist tradition were planted in the early 1900s, with the appointment of Hiram Bingham in 1906 as a professor of history and archaeology who subsequently brought Machu Picchu and Incan civilization to Western attention. At the very beginning of the twentieth century, Yale awarded one of the first U.S. Ph.D.s to an Asian-born scholar, Ken-ichi Asakawa, who later became a distinguished professor of Japanese history and languages at Yale, retiring in 1942. There was an institutional presence for international area studies at Yale as early as the 1930s. Yale’s growing scholarly strength in international relations paralleled area studies in the interwar years with the then highly-innovative and interdisciplinary Institute for International Relations, which was supported by the Rockefeller Foundation, as well as corporate and alumni sponsors. The Institute established the first interdisciplinary Ph.D. program at Yale.

During World War II, these disparate strengths were combined into a formidable set of training programs, geared largely to the needs of the U.S. military in the languages, culture, history, and economics of different parts of the world. After the war, these programs grew into a variety of freestanding interdisciplinary faculty councils with notable strengths in East Asia, Southeast Asia, and Russia and Eastern Europe. Area studies and international relations efforts at Yale enjoyed support from major foundations, notably the Carnegie Corporation and, after its founding in the 1950s, the Ford Foundation. Faculty with interests in Africa formed a council in 1958. With the passage of the National Defense Education Act in 1958, these language and area studies programs also received additional support from the federal government.

In the early 1960s, the University created the Concilium on International and Area Studies. The Concilium’s main purpose was to combine and coordinate the efforts of the area studies councils and the remaining activities of the former Institute of International Relations. In the 1970s, the Middle Eastern Studies Council and the Canadian Studies Committee were established within the Concilium. In the early 1980s, the Concilium was further bolstered and given its current name, the Yale Center for International and Area Studies. In the early 1990s, under the directorship of Gaddis Smith, Larned Professor of History, YCIAS launched the South Asian Studies Committee, the International Affairs Council, two new undergraduate majors, and several research initiatives. However, dispersal across campus in four different buildings hampered the overall activities of YCIAS. By the end of Professor Smith’s directorship, YCIAS and the University had solved the space problem and YCIAS moved into Henry R. Luce Hall in 1995, well positioned for dramatic growth of its programs. Since 1996, under the leadership of Gustav Ranis, Frank Altschul Professor of International Economics, the YCIAS programs have expanded and deepened. The interdisciplinary councils and committees, both in international and area studies, were revitalized while taking up the challenge of addressing problems comparatively across world regions. At the same time, YCIAS developed a variety of special interdisciplinary research programs and initiatives to address a range of emerging issues of global, international, and national scope including, for example, Crossing Borders, Globalization and Self-Determination, Central Asia, and the Center for the Study of Globalization. In July 2004, Ian Shapiro, Sterling Professor of Political Science and chair of the department, succeeded Professor Ranis.
Research Initiative: Intellectual Priorities for a Global Era

From its genesis in the middle of the last century, the Yale Center for International and Area Studies has been the University's primary vehicle for encouraging interdisciplinary, international, and area-focused research and teaching. The constituent councils, committees, centers, and programs have made tremendous contributions to our understanding of the world and have trained generations of scholars. Now, with so many of the world’s most intractable and immediate problems requiring collaborative, interdisciplinary, and regionally expert inquiry, YCIA S intends to refocus its activities, so that all dimensions of these inquiries—research, teaching, convening, and publishing—will concentrate on the three substantive areas outlined below. These topics are not intended to be the preserve of, nor exclusive to, any particular academic discipline or geographic area. Rather, they are intended to complement and draw on the existing intellectual and financial resources resident in YCIA S. One hallmark of these inquiries will be a conscious emphasis on the global implications of these topics.

IDENTITY, SECURITY, AND CONFLICT

Religious, national, racial, ethnic, and other identities are among the most powerful sources of human motivation. They structure much human conflict, and they are integral to the age-old human search for meaning and security. Identities have proved more resistant to the forces of modernization and globalization than many influential theories predict, and they are not easily accounted for by the dominant explanatory models in the social sciences. Moreover, their normative dimensions are complex, because they often live in tension with widely held commitments to democracy and individual freedom. Nor are the various types of identity obviously alike, despite the common scholarly tendency to classify them together. We seek to illuminate identities from multiple disciplinary perspectives, account for their similarities, differences, and resilience, and explore their implications for the study of security and conflict—sub-national, national, and international.

DEMOCRACY: PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE

The last quarter of the twentieth century saw the advent of democracy in more than a third of the world’s countries. Yet the great majority of the earth’s population continues to be governed by undemocratic regimes. Moreover, the histories of fascism and communism remind us that democracy can often be a vulnerable achievement. Some of the newest democracies have already collapsed; others are creeping toward authoritarianism. In the older democracies, organized interests, urban blight, and violence at home and abroad challenge institutional capacities in unprecedented ways. The very idea of democratic citizenship is hotly contested. Some see it as a universal right, others as little more than a coveted ticket to membership in an exclusive club. There is no reason to assume that democracy’s survival, let alone its spread, is guaranteed. Yale seeks to advance our understanding of how to create and sustain democracy, how the tensions between democracy and other goods—notably efficiency and liberty—are best managed, and how established democracies can renew themselves in the face of internal and external challenges.

JUSTICE AND DISTRIBUTION: LOCAL, NATIONAL, REGIONAL, GLOBAL

In an era of unprecedented global integration—of markets, information, technology, and travel—the political organization of the world remains centered on nation states. As the main organs of political accountability and collective enforcement, national governments remain the central focus of demands for justice and redistribution. Governments confront many limits to their effectiveness in such a world, along with profound moral dilemmas. Should international courts and transnational legislative bodies be strengthened, and if so, how and at what cost? To whom will they be accountable? How should demands to reduce inequities within countries be viewed if the predictable result is to increase inequities across borders? When public goods like clean air must be provided globally, how can national governments—often in competition with one another for power and influence and under massive pressure from private interests—do the providing and the regulating? Yale seeks to study these moral and practical dilemmas from multiple disciplinary vantage points.
International and Area Studies Councils and Committees

COMMITTEE ON CANADIAN STUDIES

Building on three centuries of close ties with Canada, Yale continues to play a significant role in the development of Canadian Studies in the U.S., and has graduated the second highest number of Canadians among American universities. The Canadian Studies Committee annually brings a distinguished Canadian academician to the campus each year as the Bicentennial Visiting Professor, due to a generous gift from the Canadian Government to Yale University in 1976. In addition, the Committee offers a number of dynamic conferences, film screenings, and special courses, such as a comparative Canadian and Australian history offering.

COUNCIL ON AFRICAN STUDIES

African studies at Yale began in the late eighteenth century with study of African languages. Yale was one of the first universities to incorporate African studies into its mainstream curriculum prior to World War II. Today, the Council serves as a National Resource Center for African Studies. As the home for the undergraduate major, Master’s Degree in African Studies, Graduate Certificate of Concentration in African Studies, and the Program in African Languages — including programs in Swahili, Yoruba, and Zulu — the African Studies Council is an interdisciplinary humanities and social sciences program that nurtures a community of Africanist scholars and provides training to individuals who are specializing in African topics.

Students enter the intellectually stimulating B.A. and M.A. programs with a variety of experiences and backgrounds, and find the curriculum to be an excellent first step toward an academic career or as a supplement to professional training. An important component of these programs is that they are multinational as well as multidisciplinary. Students’ interests reflect this diversity as they focus on South, West, East, or North Africa, with concentrations ranging from political science to arts and literature, economics and religion.

COUNCIL ON EAST ASIAN STUDIES

The formal study of East Asia at Yale dates back to 1878, and for more than a century East Asian Studies has expanded and evolved into a comprehensive program of study that plays an essential role in the existing structure of the University. The Council on East Asian Studies (CEAS) was founded in 1961 and for over forty years has promoted education about East Asia both in the college curriculum and through lectures, workshops, conferences, cultural events, and educational activities open to faculty, students, and the general public. CEAS coordinates approximately 100 activities each year, providing an important forum for academic exploration and lively discussion as an integral part of the study of China, Japan, and Korea.
With more than twenty core faculty and fifteen language faculty forming CEAS, it is Yale’s most extensive program in area studies. East Asian Studies faculty members teach across the social science and humanities departments. National interest and University commitment have contributed to expanded course offerings and rising student enrollments. More than 150 courses on East Asia are offered each year.

As part of the University’s continuing desire to provide students with an education filled with international vision and richness, an undergraduate major and a Master’s Degree program are offered at Yale in East Asian Studies. The interdisciplinary emphasis of the Council encourages collaborative linkages across fields and departments and contributes to diversity across the curriculum and in the classroom. Study and research in East Asian Studies at Yale are supported by one of the finest library collections in the country. The Chinese, Japanese, and Korean language print resources in the library constitute one of the oldest and largest collections found outside of East Asia.

CEAS is committed to providing leadership in the study and understanding of East Asia on campus and in the region through support of educational and outreach activities with emphasis on joint endeavors across institutions both regionally and internationally.

COUNCIL ON LATIN AMERICAN AND IBERIAN STUDIES

Established in 1962 with a B.A. granting major, the Council on Latin American and Iberian Studies continues a long tradition of Yale collaborations in Latin America, Spain and Portugal. The council also offers a Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Latin American and Iberian Studies to graduate and professional students at Yale. It was recently recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as one of sixteen National Resource Centers. With over sixteen affiliated faculty, the council works to strengthen intellectual exchange and innovation through a broad array of courses, cultural events, scholarly lectures, international conferences, and academic research. It offers travel fellowships to undergraduate and graduate students, hosts visiting scholars, supports faculty curriculum development, and sponsors the advancement of resources for language teaching in Spanish, Portuguese and Nahuatl. The Council promotes linkages with other U.S., Latin American and Iberian organizations to bolster cooperation and understanding of these interconnected regions. Through a comprehensive outreach program, the Council works with local, regional and national K-16 educators and students as well as members of Latino community organizations, cultural centers, business and media to develop and implement programs, services, and resources designed to advance understanding of regional issues.

COUNCIL ON MIDDLE EAST STUDIES

As the Middle East remains one of the world’s most volatile regions, the Middle East Studies Council continues its role as an academic platform where students and faculty can debate the myriad contemporary, historical, political and cultural issues of relevance to the Middle East and North Africa. As a National Resource Center for Middle East Studies, the Council has been pivotal in the organization of major international conferences on wide-ranging topics — such as the region's relations with the U.S. and the state of the Middle Eastern environment. The council offers a Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Modern Middleast Studies to graduate and professional students at Yale. It also offers courses in Turkish and advanced Persian to round out the full complement of courses in the major languages of the region. In addition to research and educational efforts, the Council offers an annual lecture series, publications, travel fellowships, and support for a collection in the Yale Library.

COUNCIL ON SOUTHEAST ASIA STUDIES

Students with interests in Southeast Asia, including Burma (Myanmar), Cambodia, East Timor, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam, may turn to the Southeast Asia Studies Council, whose mission is to promote research, education, and intellectual exchange on the politics, cultures and economies of the region, both historical and contemporary. In addition to contributing to one of the best library collections on Southeast Asia in the country, the Council coordinates and sponsors a variety of activities, including a year-long seminar series, special lectures, conferences, film series, cultural programs, research and/or language study fellowships, and monograph publications. The Council also supports study of the region's diverse languages, including full-time instruction in both Indonesian and Vietnamese, and a variety of directed independent language study programs depending on interest and availability, in Burmese, Dutch, Khmer, Tagalog, and Thai.

EUROPEAN STUDIES COUNCIL

As a National Resource Center for European Studies for several years, the European Studies Council supports individual and group research projects, conferences, film series, symposia, workshops, courses, and community outreach as they relate to the study of Eastern and Western Europe. European Studies includes an undergraduate major and Master's Degree program in European and Russian Studies and strongly supports the disciplinary and interdisciplinary study of Western Europe, as well as Russia and Eastern Europe, and their interaction. Additionally, the council offers students in the University's graduate and other professional degree programs the opportunity to obtain a Graduate Certificate in European Studies. European Studies is also the home of active programs in European Union Studies and Hellenic Studies, which offers instruction in modern Greek language, literature, and culture.

Students have the opportunity to gain insight into such diverse topics as labor migration within Europe, the changing role of socialist parties, transnational tendencies in literature and the arts, and Europe's relations with other world regions. Areas of special focus include the European Union, Poland, Greece, the Balkans, and the states of the former Soviet Union.
INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS COUNCIL

The International Affairs Council was founded in 1995 to nurture degree programs, scholarship, and outreach with a strong interdisciplinary and policy-oriented international focus. The programmatic interests of the council focus on development policy, security studies, and the teaching of international issues.

The council administers the Master’s Degree in International Relations. The fifty to sixty students in this program combine fundamental training in core disciplines of international relations with an individualized concentration with relevance to current international issues. Open to all graduate and professional students at Yale, the International Affairs Council also provides two Graduate Certificates of Concentration, one in International Development Studies and a second in International Security Studies.

At the undergraduate level, the council administers the International Studies (IS) degree, which is designed for the 150 students who seek to combine the discipline-based requirements of a first major with an understanding drawn from several disciplines of the global transformations in their interconnected socioeconomic, environmental, political, and cultural dimensions.

SOUTH ASIAN STUDIES COUNCIL

The Council on South Asian Studies promotes the University’s teaching and scholarship on all aspects of South Asia and its diasporas. Drawing on faculty from across the University, the Council’s members annually offer as many as 40 courses in the humanities, social sciences, and languages of South Asia, including Hindi and Tamil.

The Council brings together faculty and students by organizing lectures, performances, and discussions with visiting scholars, artists, and public figures. Travel fellowships awarded by the Council allow students to pursue research and social service in South Asia. Through efforts such as its annual Gandhi Lecture, the South Asia Humanities Festival, and the Twentieth Century Seminar, the Council creates a space to consider the values and perspectives of South Asia in world affairs and in the academy.
Special Programs and Initiatives

ETHNICITY, RACE, AND MIGRATION

The program in Ethnicity, Race, and Migration enables students to combine a disciplinary requirement of a first major with an interdisciplinary, comparative study of forces that have created a multicultural, multiethnic, and multiracial world.

The major emphasizes familiarity with the intellectual traditions and debates surrounding the concepts of ethnicity, nationality, and race; grounding in both the history of migration and its contemporary manifestations; and knowledge of the cultures, structures, and peoples formed by these migrations.

EUROPEAN UNION STUDIES PROGRAM

This program examines the many aspects of the European Union: its past development, its current institutions and operations, and its future evolution. Visiting scholars and Yale faculty, as well as graduate and undergraduate students, consider the program one of the most influential centers for timely research on this dynamic region. Program elements include a scholar-in-residence, short-term scholarly exchanges, faculty/graduate student workshops, graduate and undergraduate student research grants, a Web site, and working paper series.

FOX INTERNATIONAL FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

Begun as an exchange between Yale and Moscow State in 1989, the Fox Fellowships are intended to identify and develop future leaders who will contribute to decisions affecting global policies and international relations. On average, fourteen graduate students and graduating seniors from elite universities in Moscow, Berlin, Shanghai, Paris, Tokyo, Cambridge, and Mexico City come to Yale to do independent research each year, while the same number of Yale students travel abroad to the fellowship’s sister schools.

The Fox Fellows are selected on the basis of intellect, character, and demonstrated leadership and are expected to focus on fields with the most practical connections to promoting world peace and international understanding — including politics, contemporary history, economics, international relations, law, management, and finance.

GENOCIDE STUDIES PROGRAM

The horrors of genocide need to be studied and understood in order that such atrocities can one day be eradicated. The Genocide Studies Program (GSP) seeks to put worldwide genocidal events into comparative context and to make them more comprehensible, in the hope that research will yield potential “markers,” or telltale signs, to enable the prevention of future disasters before they gain momentum.
Begun in 1998 as an expansion of Yale’s Cambodian Genocide Program, the GSP today conducts research, weekly seminars and conferences on comparative, interdisciplinary, historical, and policy issues relating to the phenomenon of genocide; provides training to researchers from afflicted regions; and maintains a highly praised Web site and genocide database.

GILDER LEHRMAN CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF SLAVERY, RESISTANCE, AND ABOLITION

How did the Atlantic slave system come about, and how was it ultimately destroyed? What were the roles of slavery, slave resistance, and abolition in the founding of the modern, trans-Atlantic world? These and other related topics are investigated and discussed in depth at the Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition. The center’s mission is to foster an improved understanding of slavery in the United States, Brazil, and the Caribbean by encouraging interaction and exchange among research scholars, and by promoting public knowledge through publications, educational outreach, and conferences. The center’s annual Frederick Douglass Book Prize is one of the most prestigious in the field.

HELLENIC STUDIES PROGRAM

This program offers courses on post-classical Greece, the history of the Balkans including Byzantine civilization, and modern Greece as a European Union member, as well as modern Greek language courses that incorporate contemporary Greek culture and history. Study options available to students wishing to immerse themselves in Greek culture include full-year and term-long language study fellowships in Greece for undergraduate, graduate, and professional students, and a full complement of conferences and multimedia language materials.

GEORG WALTER LEITNER PROGRAM IN INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE POLITICAL ECONOMY

International political economy is one of the most critical and fastest-growing areas of inquiry in the social sciences today, which has made the Leitner Program one of the most popular and important YCIAS initiatives. The program focuses on developing innovative activities and collaborations among faculty and students in the departments of Economics, Political Science, and Law to reflect the increasing synergies of these disciplines worldwide. The many activities offered by the Leitner Program include faculty research, curriculum development, a Web site, graduate and undergraduate student research fellowships, undergraduate senior essay assistance, and short-term visiting scholars who present relevant interdisciplinary work to the Yale community.
PROGRAM IN AGRARIAN STUDIES

One of the best-known and most admired interdisciplinary programs in the social sciences in the country, the Program in Agrarian Studies was begun in 1991 as an experimental effort to reshape how a new generation of scholars understands rural life and society. The program combines social science research with popular knowledge and reasoning about poverty, subsistence, cultivation, justice, art, law, property, ritual life, cooperation, resource use, and state action. The core of the program’s activities is a weekly colloquium organized around an annual theme, where participants focus on the study of papers written by invited specialists. In addition, the Program in Agrarian Studies appoints six postdoctoral fellows annually, offers a popular, team-taught graduate seminar, and supports student research.

PROGRAM ON ORDER, CONFLICT, AND VIOLENCE

The Program on Order, Conflict, and Violence is a new interdisciplinary research program headquartered at the YCIAS and supported by YCIAS, the Institution for Social and Policy Studies (ISPS), and the department of Political Science. Established in 2004, its mission is to promote innovative research on questions related to the rise and collapse of order, including the material and non-material origins and consequences of polarization; the causes of the breakdown, emergence, and consolidation of local, national, or transnational political order; the determinants of strategies, types, and consequences of group conflict; and the likelihood of their violent escalation. The Program on Order, Conflict, and Violence seeks to straddle existing boundaries by fostering pioneering and rigorous theoretical and empirical research on human conflict in all its dimensions; its goal is to make Yale the preeminent institution for cutting-edge research on these issues. It offers residential research fellowships and will organize various activities, including lectures, speaker series, workshops, and conferences.

PROGRAMS IN INTERNATIONAL EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES (PIER)

Programs in International Educational Resources (PIER) at YCIAS draws on Yale University’s extensive resources to develop and implement programs, services, and resources designed to advance understanding of international and world regional issues through outreach to education, business, media, and the public. PIER has professionals who focus on Africa, East Asia, Europe, Latin America, the Middle East, and International Affairs.

PIER provides a wide range of programs and services, including intensive Summer Institutes, professional development workshops, production and evaluation of educational materials, curriculum development, and a Resource Center, as well as a lending library of videos, textbooks, and other materials. PIER also provides training and consulting services and programs for companies that do business internationally.
UNIVERSAL STUDIES

The end of the Cold War, transition to democracy, ethnic conflict and civil war, economic migrants and political refugees, environmental degradation — all of these universal issues, and more, are testing the United Nations, its member states, and international nongovernmental organizations. United Nations Studies at Yale, established in 1993, is a policy-relevant think-tank designed to study these and other key issues concerning the future of the UN and to serve as a source of ideas about the role of international organizations in transforming the international system.

Combining high-level policy makers with academic analysts, the program conducts a range of research programs, conferences, and workshops with activities including faculty and graduate student seminars, new courses for existing degree programs, support for graduate student and faculty research, and policy and organizational recommendations useful to the UN, other organizations, and governments.

YALE CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF GLOBALIZATION

The Yale Center for the Study of Globalization opened its doors in September of 2001 and has, since its inception, supported the study of globalization both within the University and through collaborations with institutions and organizations outside the University.

The center is devoted to examining the impact of its increasingly integrated world on individuals, communities, and nations and its purpose is to support the creation and dissemination of ideas for seizing the opportunities and overcoming the challenges resulting from globalization’s impact on the world’s people and places. In the course of its work, the center aims to encourage the generation of ideas and concrete proposals that will result in enabling the poorest and weakest peoples to participate in the opportunities presented by globalization. The center also sees as part of its mission the study of problems that, even if they do not result directly from globalization, are global in nature and can therefore be effectively addressed only through international cooperation.

The center serves the Yale University community by fostering interdisciplinary activities on campus that are designed to explore the many aspects of globalization as well as to assist in Yale’s effort to become a more international institution.
UNDERGRADUATE COURSE LISTINGS

Official Yale College course information is found at the Yale Online Course Information Web site, www.yale.edu/courseinfo. Official Yale College program information is found in the Yale College Programs of Study, www.yale.edu/ycpo/ycps.

The Organization of the Listings

The councils and programs offering undergraduate majors are presented first, followed by the other YCIAS area studies councils and committees.

In the listings for councils that offer majors, courses under each major’s designation are listed first, followed by relevant courses in other non-language fields (history, political science, for example), and lastly, by language and literature courses.

Within each major’s listing, “relevant courses in other departments” are listed alphabetically by department. In the councils and committees that do not administer an undergraduate major, all listings are made alphabetically by department.

The program in African Studies enables students to undertake interdisciplinary study of the arts, history, cultures, politics, and development of Africa. As a foundation, students in the program gain a cross-disciplinary exposure to Africa. In the junior and senior years, students develop analytical ability and focus their studies on research in a particular discipline such as anthropology, art history, economics, history, languages and literatures, political science, or sociology.

African Studies offers training of special interest to those considering admission to graduate or professional schools, or careers in education, journalism, law, business management, city planning, politics, psychology, international relations, creative writing, or social work. The interdisciplinary structure of the program offers students an opportunity to satisfy the increasingly rigorous expectations of admissions committees and prospective employers for a broad liberal arts perspective that complements specialized knowledge of a field.

Requirements of the major. The program in African Studies consists of thirteen term courses including (1) a basic course in African history and one in anthropology; (2) two years of an African language (Arabic, Kiswahili, Yorùbá, or isiZulu), unless waived by examination; (3) four term courses in one of the following disciplines: anthropology; art history; economics; history; languages and literatures; political science; sociology; or an interdisciplinary program such as African American Studies, Ethnicity, Race, and Migration, or Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies; and (4) the junior seminar on research methods, AFST 401a. Students are expected to focus their studies on research in a particular discipline.

The required courses represent the core of the program and are intended to expose the student both to the interdisciplinary nature of African studies and to the methodologies currently being brought to bear on the study of African cultures and societies. Students are encouraged to include upper-level courses, especially those centering on research and methodology.

Senior requirement. Students have the option of writing a senior essay, AFST 491a or b, under the guidance of a faculty member in the discipline of concentration and taking the senior seminar, AFST 464a, or taking the senior seminar and an additional senior seminar in another department in lieu of writing a senior essay.

Language requirement. African Studies majors are required to complete two years of college-level study of an African language or the equivalent, and they are encouraged to continue beyond this level. For the language requirement to be waived, students must pass a proficiency test of reading and communicative competence administered through the Center for Language Study. Students should begin their language study as soon as possible.

Program in African Languages. The language program offers instruction in three major languages from sub-Saharan Africa: Kiswahili (eastern and central Africa), Yorùbá (West Africa), and isiZulu (southern Africa). African language courses emphasize communicative competence, using multimedia materials that focus on the contemporary African context. Course sequences are designed to enable students to achieve advanced competence in all skill areas by the end of the third year, and students are encouraged to spend one summer or term in Africa during their language study.

Noncredit instruction in other African languages is available by application through the Directed Independent Language Study program at the Center for Language Study. Contact the director of the Program in African Languages for information.

Procedure. Students planning to major in African Studies should consult the director of undergraduate studies as soon as possible.

In the East Asian Studies major, students concentrate on either China or Japan and organize their work in the humanities or the social sciences. The major offers a liberal education by providing a degree of mastery of a significant field of learning. At the same time, it serves as excellent preparation for graduate study or for business and professional careers in which an understanding of East Asia is essential.

The major. The major in East Asian Studies is interdisciplinary, and students typically select classes from a wide variety of disciplines. The proposed course of study must be approved by the director of undergraduate studies.

Prerequisite to the major is CHNS 115 or JAPN 115 or the equivalent. Beyond the prerequisite, the major consists of thirteen term courses, which may include up to six taken in a preapproved program of study abroad, normally Yale’s Junior Year or Term Abroad. Required courses are intermediate Chinese (CHNS 130) or Japanese (JAPN 140) and third-year Chinese or Japanese. Six term credits must be taken in East Asian language courses. Beyond the language requirement, the major consists of seven additional required courses, six in the country of concentration and one outside it. Of the six courses in the country of concentration, one must be in the premodern period, at least two must be seminars, and one is the senior requirement (a senior seminar or senior directed research project). These courses are normally taken at Yale during the academic year, but with prior approval of the director of undergraduate studies the requirement may be fulfilled through successful course work undertaken elsewhere.

Senior requirement. All students must satisfy a senior requirement undertaken during the senior year. This requirement can be met in one of two ways. Students may take one seminar in the country of concentration, culminating in a term paper. Alternatively, students may undertake a one-credit, two-term senior research project in EAST 491 culminating in an essay.

Upon entering the major, students are expected to draw up intellectually coherent sequences of courses in consultation with the director of undergraduate studies. They must consult with the director of undergraduate studies each term concerning their course schedules. They should identify as soon as possible a faculty adviser in the area of their specialization.

Requirements of the Major

Prerequisite: CHNS 115 or JAPN 115 (or equivalent)
Number of courses: Thirteen term courses beyond prerequisite (including the senior requirement), of which up to six may be earned in pre-approved study abroad
Specific courses required: CHNS 130, 150, or JAPN 140, 150, or equivalent
Distribution of courses: A total of seven courses on East Asia, of which six are in, and one is outside, the area of concentration (China or Japan). One of the area of concentration courses must be in the pre-modern era and two must be seminars.
Senior requirement: One senior-year seminar culminating in a term paper or a one-credit, two-term senior research project in EAST 491

The program in Ethnicity, Race, and Migration enables students to combine a disciplinary requirement of a first major with an interdisciplinary, comparative study of forces that have created a multicultural, multiethnic, and multiracial world.

The major emphasizes familiarity with the intellectual traditions and debates surrounding the concepts of ethnicity, nationality, and race; grounding in both the history of migration and its contemporary manifestations; and knowledge of the cultures, structures, and peoples formed by these migrations.

Second major: Ethnicity, Race, and Migration can be taken only as a second major. Students combine Ethnicity, Race, and Migration with a major that coordinates with research into ethnicity and migration. They should consult the director of undergraduate studies early in their academic careers about other departments that meet this criterion. Departments or programs that already have concentrations of courses dealing with ethnic issues—African American Studies, African Studies, American Studies, Anthropology, English, History, Literature, Political Science, Sociology, and Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies—are particularly appropriate, but a student may choose any traditional discipline that provides the tools for a rigorous senior project in Ethnicity, Race, and Migration. Course selections and choices of linked majors must be approved by the appropriate directors of undergraduate studies.

In working out programs for their two majors, students should note that, in accordance with the academic regulations concerning two majors (see “Two Majors” in chapter III, Yale College Programs of Study), each major must be completed independently, with no more than two term courses overlapping. This overlap must not be in the senior essay or senior project unless the essay or project is unusually substantial and represents at least the equivalent of the minimum essay or project requirement of the one major in addition to the minimum essay or project requirement of the other major.

Permission to complete two majors must be secured from the Committee on Honors and Academic Standing; forms are available from the residential college deans. Assistance in completing the form is available from the director of undergraduate studies in Ethnicity, Race, and Migration.

Requirements of the major. In addition to fulfilling the requirements of the other major, a student must complete twelve term courses, including the senior seminar and the senior essay or project. There are no prerequisites, but students are expected to have competence in the foreign language related to their area of concentration.

Introductory course. ER&M 200a offers an introduction to the issues and disciplines involved in the study of ethnicity, race, and migration, and should be taken early in the student’s major, preferably during the sophomore year.

Area of concentration. In consultation with the director of undergraduate studies, each student defines an area of concentration consisting of six term courses including the one-term senior essay or project.

Distributional requirements. In order to acquire a comparative sense of ethnicity, race, and migration, each student is expected to take at least two courses in each of two distinct geographic areas. To gain familiarity with different perspectives on these issues, each student must also take at least one course from each of the following four fields: theoretical perspectives; structures of international migration; the politics and economics of ethnicity; and the history and cultures of peoples.

As a multidisciplinary program, Ethnicity, Race, and Migration draws on the resources of other departments and programs in the University. The following listing of courses is meant to be suggestive only; it is neither restrictive nor exhaustive. Students are encouraged to examine the offerings of other departments in both the humanities and the social sciences, as well as residential college seminars, for additional relevant courses. The stated area of concentration of each student determines the relevance and acceptability of other courses.
Senior requirement. Students must take the senior colloquium (ER&M 491a) on theoretical and methodological issues and complete a one-term senior essay or project (ER&M 492b).

The program in International Studies is designed for students who seek to combine the discipline-based requirements of a first major with an understanding drawn from several disciplines of the transformations occurring on this planet in their interconnected socioeconomic, environmental, political, and cultural dimensions. No student may major in International Studies by itself; it must be a second major. The number of students accepted into this major is limited.

The interdisciplinary nature of the International Studies major requires mastery at an advanced level in one modern foreign language or intermediate-level proficiency in two foreign languages; courses in introductory economics (both macro- and microeconomics); and familiarity with the history, society, or politics of at least one country or region other than the United States. Students are also required to take one 300-level course in each of five areas that provide alternative lenses for analyzing international affairs: analytic tools, statecraft and power, ethnicity and culture, political economy, and science and technology. The capstone of the International Studies major is the two-term senior seminar course, in which a group of students and a faculty member study topics connected to a single broad theme and/or a region of the world.

Students contemplating applying to the International Studies major should elect courses during the freshman and sophomore years with an awareness of the foreign language and economics requirements of the major. Admission to the major takes place during the sophomore year. Application forms are available in the office of the undergraduate registrar, 210 LUCE, and online at www.yale.edu/ycias/iac/is_ba.htm.

International Studies and the student’s first major should have a coherent relationship expressive of well-conceived concentrations of interest. Close and continuous consultation between the student, the director of undergraduate studies, and appropriate faculty members is extremely important. Students should note that, in accordance with the academic regulations concerning two majors (see “Two Majors” in chapter III, Yale College Programs of Study), each major must be completed independently of the other, with no more than two term courses overlapping. Although senior essays or projects may, with permission of both directors of undergraduate studies, be coordinated, they may not overlap in course credits earned.

Permission to complete two majors must be secured from the Committee on Honors and Academic Standing. Application forms are available from the residential college deans and from the director of undergraduate studies in International Studies. Forms must be submitted prior to the student’s final term.

Requirements of the major. In addition to fulfilling the requirements of the primary major, a student choosing International Studies as a second major must complete eleven term courses, including the senior seminar, and meet the major’s language requirement. Up to two courses in the major may be taken on a Credit/D/Fail basis. Students are expected to choose their courses from the following categories:

1. One term course chosen from either INTS 171a, International Ideas and Institutions: Foundations, or 172b, International Ideas and Institutions: Contemporary Challenges.

2. Five 300-level term courses, one in each of the following areas: analytic tools, statecraft and power, ethnicity and culture, political economy, and science and technology. Only specifically designated courses, announced at the beginning of each term, will be accepted as fulfilling this requirement. Substitutions may be accepted under special circumstances and with the approval of the director of undergraduate studies.

3. One term course in microeconomics and one in macroeconomics.

4. One term course in the history, culture, or politics of a region or country other than the United States.

5. One two-term senior seminar course (the senior requirement).

Language requirement. Majors in International Studies must demonstrate advanced ability in one, or competence in two, modern languages other than English. This requirement is normally met by the completion of two terms of advanced courses in one language or courses in two languages at the intermediate level. Grades in language courses do not count toward Distinction in the Major.

Senior requirement. Each student takes a two-term senior seminar course. Senior seminars are yearlong working groups of about fifteen students directed by a faculty member and organized around a unifying theme or topic selected to reflect student and faculty interests. Each group produces a set of closely related, article-length research papers, with each student’s paper comprising the senior essay. Senior essays should draw on foreign language as well as English sources.

Senior seminars vary from year to year. The topics for 2004–2005 are indicated in the titles of the senior seminars below.

Requirements of the Major

International Studies can be taken only as a second major. Specific course selection and choices of linked majors should be made in consultation with the student’s International Studies faculty adviser and the director of undergraduate studies.

Prerequisites: None

Number of courses: Eleven (including senior seminar; excluding language requirement)

Distribution of courses: One term course each in micro- and macroeconomics; either INTS 171a or 172b; one course in the history, culture, or politics of a country or region other than the U.S.; one course from each of five subject areas

Language requirement: Advanced ability in one, or competence in two, modern languages other than English

Senior requirement: Two-term senior seminar

The major in Latin American Studies is designed to further understanding of the societies and cultures of Latin America as viewed from regional and global perspectives. The Latin American Studies major builds on a foundation of language and literature, history, history of art, theater studies, humanities, and the social sciences; its faculty is drawn from many departments and professional schools of the University.

The major: The major in Latin American Studies is interdisciplinary. With two goals in mind — intellectual coherence and individual growth — the student proposes a course of study that must satisfy the requirements listed below. The proposed course of study must be approved by the director of undergraduate studies. Though all students choose courses in both the humanities and the social sciences, they are expected to concentrate on one or the other.
Prerequisite to the major is knowledge of the two dominant languages of the region, Spanish and Portuguese. Depending on their interests, students select one language for two years of instruction and the other for one. Other languages necessary for research may in appropriate circumstances be substituted for the second language with the consent of the director of undergraduate studies. Students are encouraged to meet the language requirements as early as possible. Courses used to satisfy the language prerequisite may not be counted toward the major.

The major itself requires twelve term courses: one introductory required course (ANTH 207b), eight courses related to Latin America from departmental offerings or the list of electives below, two further electives, and the senior essay (LAST 491a or b). In addition to ANTH 207b, students are required to take eight Latin American content courses as follows: two courses in the social sciences (anthropology, economics, political science, or sociology), two courses in history, two courses in Spanish American or Brazilian literatures beyond the language requirement, one course in history of art or theater studies, and a starred seminar. Recommended courses are HIST 355a, LAST 314b, SPAN 266a, and 267b. Students are also required to complete two elective courses, preferably seminars, and the senior essay.

Students must enroll in three seminars or upper-level courses during their junior and senior years. For a list of starred seminars students should consult the director of undergraduate studies. Elective seminars must be approved by the director of undergraduate studies.

The senior essay is a research paper written usually in one term (LAST 491a or b). Students choose their own topics, which may derive from research done in an earlier course. The essay is planned in advance in consultation with a qualified adviser and a second reader. In preparing the senior essay, students may undertake field research in Latin America. Support for research is available to recipients of an Albert Bildner Travel Prize, for which application should be made in the spring of the junior year.

Students are strongly encouraged to take advantage of study abroad opportunities during summers or through the Junior Year or Term Abroad program.

Requirements of the Major

Prerequisites: Two years of one language (Spanish or Portuguese), one year of the other language
Number of courses: Twelve term courses beyond prerequisites (including the senior essay)
Distribution of courses: Eight courses related to Latin America in specified fields, of which one is a starred seminar from approved list, taken in junior or senior year; two electives; three seminars or upper-level courses in junior and senior years
Specific course required: ANTH 207b
Senior requirement: Senior essay (LAST 491a or b)
Courses

The major in Russian and East European Studies, administered by the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures, offers an interdisciplinary approach to the study of a broad region: Russia, Ukraine, Belarus, the Caucasus, and Central Asia; Poland, Hungary, the Czech and Slovak Republics, and other regions in east central Europe; and the Balkans. The program is appropriate for students considering careers in international public policy, diplomacy, or business, and for those wishing to continue academic work.

Languages. A full understanding of the area demands a knowledge of its languages. Students must demonstrate either proficiency in Russian or intermediate-level ability in an East European language. Students may demonstrate proficiency in Russian by (1) completing fourth-year Russian (RUSS 141b); (2) passing a written examination to demonstrate equivalent ability; or (3) completing a literature course taught in Russian and approved by the director of undergraduate studies. Students may demonstrate intermediate-level ability in an East European language by (1) completing a two-year sequence in an East European language (currently Czech or Serbian and Croatian; students interested in studying other East European languages should contact the director of undergraduate studies); or (2) by passing a language examination demonstrating equivalent competence. Students are encouraged to learn more than one language.

Course requirements. Thirteen term courses taken for a grade are required for the major. Students must take RSEE 390a and one from RSEE 284a, HIST 290a, or HIST 291b. All East European language courses and third- and fourth-year Russian courses count toward the major. Elective courses are chosen from an annual list of offerings, in consultation with the director of undergraduate studies. Electives must include at least one course in a social science. Complete descriptions of courses originating in other programs appear in those departmental listings. Other undergraduate courses relevant to Russian and East European Studies, including residential college seminars, may also count toward the major if approved by the director of undergraduate studies. Qualified students may elect pertinent courses in the Graduate School with the permission of the instructor, the director of graduate studies, and the director of undergraduate studies.

Senior requirement. Every major must write a senior essay. At the beginning of the first term of the senior year, students enroll in RSEE 490 and arrange for a faculty member to serve as senior adviser. By the third Friday of October, senior majors submit a detailed prospectus of the essay, with bibliography, to the adviser. A draft of at least ten pages of the senior essay, or a detailed outline of the entire essay, is due to the adviser by the last day of reading period in the first term. The student provides the adviser with a form that the adviser signs to notify the director of undergraduate studies that the first-term requirements have been met. Failure to meet these requirements results in loss of credit for the first term of the course. The senior essay takes the form of a substantial article, no longer than 13,000 words of text, excluding footnotes and bibliography. The essay is due on the second Friday in April, in triplicate, in the Russian and East European Studies office. A member of the faculty other than the student’s adviser grades the essay.

Study and travel. Students should be aware of opportunities for study and travel in Russia and eastern Europe. The director of undergraduate studies can provide information on these programs and facilitate enrollment. Those students who spend all or part of the academic year in the region participating in established academic programs usually receive Yale College credit. Students are strongly encouraged to take advantage of study abroad opportunities during summers or through the Junior Year or Term Abroad program. Students wishing to travel abroad as part of the major should consult the director of undergraduate studies by October 1.

M.A. program. The European and Russian Studies program does not offer the simultaneous award of the B.A. and M.A. degrees. However, undergraduate students in Yale College are eligible to complete the M.A. in European and Russian Studies (with conconcentration on Russia and Eastern Europe) in one year of graduate work if they begin the program in the third and fourth undergraduate years. Students interested in this option must complete eight graduate courses in the area by the time of the completion of the bachelor’s degree. Only two courses may be counted toward both graduate and undergraduate degrees. Successful completion of graduate courses while still an undergraduate does not guarantee admission into the M.A. program.

The Council on Southeast Asia Studies oversees an interdisciplinary program that brings together faculty and students sharing an interest in Southeast Asia and supplements the undergraduate curriculum with an annual seminar series, periodic conferences, and special lectures. Yale does not offer a degree in Southeast Asia studies. Majors in any department may consult with Council faculty regarding a senior essay on a Southeast Asian topic, and in certain circumstances it may be possible for students who have a special interest in the region to explore the possibility of a Special Divisional Major. Students planning to undertake field research or language study in Southeast Asia may apply to the Council for summer fellowship support.

Courses featuring Southeast Asian content are offered within a variety of departments each year, including Anthropology, Economics, History, History of Art, Political Science, and Forestry & Environmental Studies. A list of courses for the current year can be obtained through the Council office or Web site: www.yale.edu/seas/Courses.htm. Yale maintains extensive library and research collections on Southeast Asia.

Language instruction is offered in two Southeast Asian languages, Indonesian and Vietnamese. The Council on Southeast Asia Studies supports language tables and tutoring in other Southeast Asian languages by special arrangement.

Fields of Study
African Studies considers the arts, history, cultures, languages, literatures, politics, religions, and societies of Africa as well as issues concerning development, health, and the environment. Considerable flexibility and choice of areas of concentration are offered because students entering the program may have differing academic backgrounds and career plans. Enrollment in the M.A. program in African Studies provides students with the opportunity to register for the many African studies courses offered in the various departments of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the professional schools.

The Program in African Studies also offers two interdisciplinary seminars to create dialogue and to integrate approaches across disciplines. In addition to the M.A. degree program, the Council on African Studies offers students in the University’s doctoral and other professional degree programs the chance to obtain a Graduate Certificate of Concentration in African Studies by fulfilling a supplementary curriculum. Joint degrees are possible with the approval of the M.A. in African Studies and the relevant officials in the Schools of Forestry & Environmental Studies, Epidemiology and Public Health, Law, and Management.

The African collections of the Yale libraries together represent one of the largest holdings on Africa found in North America. The University now possesses over 220,000 volumes including, but not limited to, government documents, art catalogues, photographs, manuscripts, correspondence, and theses, many published in Africa.

Special Admissions Requirement
The GRE General Test is required.

Special Requirements for the M.A. Degree
The Yale University Master of Arts degree program in African Studies was instituted in 1986. The two-year interdisciplinary, graduate-level curriculum is intended for students who will later continue in a Ph.D. program or a professional school, or for those who will enter business, government service, or another career in which a sound knowledge of Africa is essential or valuable. A student may choose one of the following areas of concentration: history; anthropology; political science; economics; sociology; arts and literatures; languages and linguistics; religion; environmental and developmental studies.

The program requires sixteen courses: two compulsory introductory interdisciplinary seminars, Research Methods in African Studies (AFST 501a) and Africa and the Disciplines (AFST 764a), four courses of instruction in an African language, four courses in one of the above areas of concentration, four other approved courses offered in the Graduate School or professional schools, and two terms of directed reading and research (AFST 900a or b) during which students will complete the required thesis. A student who is able to demonstrate advanced proficiency in an African language may have the language requirement waived and substitute four other approved courses. The choice of courses must be approved by the director of graduate studies, Ann Biersteker, and students should consult with her as soon as possible in the first term.

The Master’s Thesis
The master’s thesis is based upon research on a topic approved by the director of graduate studies and advised by a faculty member with expertise or specialized competence in the chosen topic.
Special Requirements for the Graduate Certificate of Concentration in African Studies

The Certificate in African Studies enables graduate and professional school students in fields other than African Studies to demonstrate interdisciplinary area expertise, language proficiency, and research competence in African Studies. The certificate program is intended to complement existing fields of studies in other M.A. and Ph.D. programs and to provide the equivalent of such specialization for students in departments and schools without Africa-related fields of study. The certificate program is designed to be completed within the time span of a normal Ph.D. residence. Professional school students and M.A. students in the Graduate School may require an additional term of registration to complete the certificate requirements depending on the requirements of specific programs.

The certificate program includes interdisciplinary course work, language study, and research components. The specific requirements are:

1. Successful completion of at least six courses in African Studies from at least two departments or schools, one of which is a core course in African Studies (AFST 764a, Africa and the Disciplines, or AFST 501a, Research Methods in African Studies).

2. Demonstration of proficiency in an African language.

3. Evidence of research expertise in African Studies. Research expertise may be demonstrated by completion of an interdisciplinary thesis, dissertation prospectus, or dissertation or by completion of a substantive research seminar paper or the equivalent as approved by the faculty adviser.

The certificate courses and research work should be planned to demonstrate clearly fulfillment of the goals of the certificate. Certificate candidates should design their course schedules in consultation with the director of graduate studies for African Studies. Ideally, students should declare their intention to complete the certificate requirements early in their program at Yale. Graduate and professional school students who intend to complete the certificate program must declare their intention to do so no later than their penultimate term of enrollment. For general guidelines, see the YCIAS section (under Research Institutes) in this bulletin.

Program in African Languages

The language program offers instruction in three major languages from sub-Saharan Africa: Kiswahili (eastern and central Africa), Yorùbá (west Africa), and isiZulu (southern Africa). Language-related courses and language courses for professionals are also offered. African language courses emphasize communicative competence, and instructors use multimedia materials that focus on the contemporary African context. Course sequences are designed to enable students to achieve advanced competence in all skill areas by the end of the third year, and the African Language program encourages students to spend one summer or term in Africa during their language study.
Noncredited instruction in other African languages is available by application through the Directed Independent Language Study program at the Center for Language Study. Contact the director of the Program in African Languages.

Program materials are available upon request from the Director of Graduate Studies, Council on African Studies, Yale University, PO Box 208206, New Haven CT 06520-8206; e-mail, african.studies@yale.edu.

Ph.D. Fields of Study

The Council of African Studies does not award a Ph.D. However, on occasion, some students will use the CAS Master's Program as a stepping-stone to a Ph.D. program. Usually this path is chosen when the student aspires toward a doctorate but is not certain of the field through which to pursue it. The broad-based nature of the CAS program allows the student time to explore before deciding on a specific field.

A number of Ph.D. programs at Yale offer Africa-focused fields of study. For information on these programs contact the following departments:

- Anthropology
- French
- History
- History of Art
- Linguistics

Joint Programs

Through agreements YCIAS has negotiated with the professional schools, CAS now offers joint master's degrees with the following: the Law School, the School of Management, the School of Forestry & Environmental Studies, and Epidemiology and Public Health. Application must be made to both the Graduate School and to the appropriate Professional School, with notation made on each application that this is to be considered for the joint degree program. Contact the African Studies DGS for up-to-date information.

Fields of Study
The Master of Arts program in East Asian Studies offers a concentrated course of study designed to provide a broad understanding of Chinese or Japanese history, culture, contemporary society, politics, and economy. This program is designed for students wishing to go on to the doctorate in one of the disciplines listed above, as well as for those students seeking a terminal M.A. degree before entering the business world, the media, government service, or a professional school.

Course of Study for the M.A. Degree
The program is designed to be completed by successfully taking eight courses approved for graduate credit by the director of graduate studies over the course of one academic year. Normally, students entering the program are expected to have already completed the equivalent of at least two years of Chinese or Japanese language, so that the three-year language requirement can be completed in the two terms spent at Yale. A program of study for completion of the degree in one year consists of at least eight term courses that normally include two terms of language study at Yale's third-year level (unless the language requirement has already been met through previous study) and six other term courses selected from the current year's offerings of advanced language courses and lecture courses or seminars in any relevant subject area, with the approval of the director of graduate studies.

Special Requirements for the M.A. Degree
Students must earn two Honors grades ("H") over the course of their two terms at Yale. Honors grades earned in any Chinese or Japanese language class cannot be counted toward satisfying this requirement, except with the permission of the director of graduate studies.

Course of Study for the Joint Degree in East Asian Studies and Management
The joint master's degree program in East Asian Studies and Management is designed for students considering careers in public or private organizations that deal with East Asia. Normally a three-year program, it awards a master's degree in business administration and a Master of Arts degree in East Asian studies.

Special Requirements for the Joint Degree
The East Asian component of this degree is the same as that of the regular M.A. program except that the time period for the completion of the degree is extended to accommodate work at the School of Management. The Management component of this degree requires joint-degree candidates to complete thirteen courses at the School of Management. These include nine in the disciplines essential to management and three in integrative management courses.

The European Studies Council formulates and implements new curricular and research programs reflective of current developments in Europe. The geographical scope of the council’s activities extends from Ireland to the lands of the former Soviet Union. Its definition represents a concept of Europe that embraces the conventional divisions into Western, Central, and Eastern Europe, and is understood to include the Balkans and Russia. In 2000 and 2003, the U.S. Department of Education designated the council a National Resource Center under its HEA Title VI program.

The European Studies Council builds on existing programmatic strengths at Yale, while serving as a catalyst for the development of new initiatives. Yale’s current resources in European Studies are vast and include the activities of many members of the faculty who have teaching and research specialties in the area. Such departments as Comparative Literature, Economics, History, History of Art, Political Science, Slavic Languages and Literatures, and Sociology regularly offer courses with a European focus. These are complemented by the rich offerings and faculty strength of the French, German, Italian, and Spanish and Portuguese language and literature departments, as well as the European resources available in the professional schools and other programs, such as Film Studies. By coordinating Yale’s existing resources, including those in the professional schools, encouraging individual and group research, and promoting an integrated comparative curriculum and degree programs, the council strongly supports the disciplinary and interdisciplinary study of European regions and their interactions. The council is also the home to a special program in European Union Studies and also to the Hellenic Studies program, which offers instruction in Modern Greek language, literature, and culture.

The council administers an M.A. program in European and Russian Studies. This M.A. program is unusual in its embrace of the entire spectrum of European nations and cultures. The requirements permit students to choose a particular national or thematic focus, geared to their individual interests and language skills, while demanding that they acquaint themselves with the traditions and issues associated with the other parts of Europe. Students specializing in Russia, for example, will concentrate their efforts in that area, but will also take courses that may concern Europe-wide problems or the countries of Central or Western Europe. In this way, the program translates the political realities and challenges of the post-Cold War era into a flexible and challenging academic opportunity. In addition to the M.A. degree program, the council offers students in the University’s doctoral and other professional degree programs the chance to obtain a Certificate in European Studies, by fulfilling a supplementary curriculum. The undergraduate major in Russian and East European Studies is administered by the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures.

The benefits provided to the Yale community by the European Studies Council include not only its status as an HEA Title VI National Resource Center, but also its affiliation with interuniversity and international organizations that can offer specialized training programs and research grants for graduate students, support conferences among European and American scholars, and subsidize European visitors to Yale. The Fox International Fellowship Program, for example, offers generous fellowship support to qualified students who undertake research at specified institutions in the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and Russia. Furthermore, the council supplements the regular Yale curriculum with lectures and seminars by eminent European and American scholars, diplomats, and political officials. Each year, the European Commission sponsors a European Union Fellow at Yale. The European Union visiting fellow during the 2005–2006 academic year will be Peter Oliver, a lawyer who is attached to the commission’s legal service. He specializes in competition policy (i.e., anti-trust and merger policy) and represents the commission in competition cases before the European Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance. Also in 2003–2004 and 2004–2005, European Studies hosted the distinguished scholar Slobodan Prosperov Novak, who teaches the Serbian and Croatian languages as well as courses on South Slavic literatures and cultures.

Given the special objective of the European Studies Council to encourage research and discussion on projects of a pan-European nature or those involving comparison among several countries, the faculty are available to supervise work on European economic, political, and cultural integration. Specific studies might focus on such themes as labor migration and the issue of immigration in general; the problems of socialist or center parties in countries with or without Communist experiences; the common tendencies in various national literatures or art; or common problems in the relations between European countries and other parts of the world.

Fields of Study

Comparative literature; economics; history; political science; law; Slavic languages and literatures; sociology.

Special Requirements for the M.A. Degree

When applying to the program, students will specify as an area of primary concentration either (1) Russia and Eastern Europe, or (2) Central and Western Europe. Those wishing to focus on Russia and Eastern Europe will need to demonstrate knowledge of Russian or an Eastern European language; those focusing on Central and Western Europe will need to demonstrate knowledge of one of the appropriate languages. All students must complete sixteen term courses (or their equivalent) in the various fields related to European and Russian studies. Students are required to take courses in at least three of the major disciplines relevant to the program (history, literature, social sciences, and law). One of the sixteen term courses may be taken for audit. For students focusing on Russia and Eastern Europe, two of the sixteen required courses (excluding language courses) must concern the nations of Central and Western Europe. For those focusing on Central and Western Europe, two courses must concern Russia and Eastern Europe. Students may substitute a yearlong course of language study for two terms of graduate course work. Under this option the language course may not be taken for audit. Students with previous language preparation may in certain cases receive credit for this work. In all cases, students are required to pass examinations in two European languages (one of which may be Russian) by the end of the third term at Yale. Students with Russian competence must receive the grade of 1+ or higher on the ACTFL/ETS Rating Scale as administered by the Slavic Languages and Literatures department at Yale, including reading, oral, and grammar portions. Students with competence in an East European language (such as Polish, Czech, Ukrainian, Hungarian, and others by special arrangement) or other European languages must take Yale department-administered examinations. A joint degree is available with the School of Management. Interested students must apply separately to the School of Management as well as to European Studies for a joint degree.

The Master’s Thesis

The master’s thesis is based on research in a topic approved by the director of graduate studies and advised by a faculty member with specialized competence in the chosen topic. The thesis is normally written in conjunction with E&RS 950.

Special Requirements for the Graduate Certificate of Concentration in European Studies

Students may pursue the graduate Certificate of Concentration in European Studies in conjunction with graduate-degree programs in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the professional schools. Candidates will specify as an area of primary focus either (1) Russia and Eastern Europe, or (2) Central and Western Europe. Admission is contingent upon the candidate’s acceptance into a Yale graduate-degree program. To complete the certificate, candidates must demonstrate expertise in the area through their major graduate or professional field, as well as show command of the diverse interdisciplinary, geographic, and cultural-linguistic approaches associated with expertise in the area of concentration. Award of the certificate, beyond fulfilling the relevant requirements, is contingent on successful completion of the candidate’s Yale University degree program. For general certificate guidelines, see the YCIAS section (under Research Institutes) in this bulletin.

Specific Requirements

1. Language proficiency in two modern European languages, in addition to English. For each language students must demonstrate the equivalent ability of two years of language study at Yale with a grade of HP or better. Language proficiency must encompass reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills plus grammar. Students may demonstrate proficiency through completing course work, by testing at Yale, or by other means as approved by the council adviser. Those wishing to focus on Russia and Eastern Europe will need to demonstrate knowledge of Russian or an Eastern European language; those focusing on Central and Western Europe will need to demonstrate knowledge of one of the appropriate languages.
2. Six courses in the area of concentration, of which:
   a. three courses must offer transnational approaches to Europe-related issues, and
   b. of the remaining three courses, students focusing on Russia and Eastern Europe must take at least one course concerning the nations of Central and Western Europe. For those focusing on Central and Western Europe, at least one course must concern Russia and Eastern Europe.

   The courses should also include a variety of disciplines, and only two courses may be “directed readings” or “independent study.” No more than four of the six courses may count from any one discipline or school. Courses may count toward the student's degree, as well as toward the certificate. A minimum grade of HP must be obtained for the course to be counted toward the certificate. Courses from the student's home department are eligible.

3. Interdisciplinary research paper written either:
   a. in the context of one of the six courses in the area of concentration, or
   b. as independent work under faculty supervision, replacing one of the six required courses.

   A qualifying research paper is required to demonstrate field-specific research ability focused on the area of concentration. After they have completed substantial course work in the area, students must seek approval from the council faculty adviser for the research project they propose as the qualifying paper. Normally, students will submit their proposals no later than the fourth week of the term in which they plan to submit the qualifying paper.

   The paper will be read by two faculty members selected by the council adviser. The readers will be evaluating the paper for the quality of research, knowledge of the relevant literature, and the depth of analysis of the topic. The qualifying paper must be fully footnoted and have a complete bibliography.

   Progress Reports and Filing for the Award of the Graduate Certificate of Concentration

   Students should submit a progress report along with a copy of their unofficial transcript to the council faculty adviser at the end of each term.

   A student who intends to file for the final award of the certificate should contact the council no later than the end of the term prior to award. No later than the fourth week of the term of the expected award, the candidate should demonstrate how he/she has or will have completed all the requirements in a timely fashion.

   At the end of the term as grades are finalized, the council will confirm that the candidate is cleared to receive the home degree and has fulfilled all the requirements of the certificate. Students may elect to retrieve the certificate award in person from the council after commencement. Otherwise, the council will send the certificate award to the student by mail after commencement.

Fields of Study
The two-year program is designed to combine breadth of knowledge of the basic disciplines of international relations with depth of specialization in a particular academic discipline, geographic area, specialized functional issue, and/or professional field. It is designed primarily for students seeking an M.A. degree before beginning a career in international affairs but also supports students interested in going on for a Ph.D. degree in economics, history, or political science. Joint degrees, as well as concentrations within the M.A. program, are offered with the School of Management, the Law School, the School of Forestry & Environmental Studies, and the Department of Epidemiology and Public Health.
Special Admissions Requirements

Applicants must take the GRE General Test; students whose native language is not English must pass the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) with a minimum score of 610 on the paper-based test or 253 on the computer-based test. Entering students must have taken introductory courses in microeconomics and macroeconomics prior to matriculation.

Special Requirements for the Master’s Degree

The substantive core consists of seven graduate-level courses: two history courses (one regional and one comparative international); two in political science (one in world or comparative politics and one in international relations); two graduate-level courses in economics (one economic analysis and one international economics); and the workshop in international relations (see course description below for INRL 700a, required in the first term). Each term, a list of courses meeting these requirements is available from the IR registrar.

Beyond the core courses, each student must identify a coherent set of courses and demonstrate their academic integrity as a proposed concentration for approval by the director of graduate studies. The concentrations require a minimum of eight courses in the fields selected. Some of the courses are cross-listed in two or more departments. Students are able to develop concentrations based on a topical, regional, or disciplinary focus, or a combination of a topical and regional focus.

M.A. candidates are required to achieve an average grade of High Pass in graduate courses plus a minimum of two grades of Honors in term courses, one of which will normally be achieved during the first year. For each grade of Pass, there must be an additional grade of Honors. In addition, students must demonstrate their research skills. Students must submit a proposal by the fourth week of a term in which they intend to complete a substantial research paper as part of a course or as an independent project. The DGS must approve it as meeting the requirements at the end of the term.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF TRADE, DEVELOPMENT, OR BUSINESS

Within a broad field of political economy, students generally specialize in one of the professional arenas of trade, international business, or international development by taking eight courses beyond the core. They must take three to five additional courses in economics and politics directly related to their professional specialization and at least one of these courses must be in quantitative methods in the first term to prepare for advanced course work. Students specializing in trade or business must complete their concentration by taking an additional three to five relevant courses in law, management, finance, health resource administration, and/or environmental and natural resources policy. Students focused on development should complete their concentration with three to five relevant additional courses in anthropology, sociology, public health, management, and/or environmental and natural resources policy.
INTERNATIONAL SECURITY

A specialization in international security is available in conjunction with International Security Studies (ISS). Concentrations in security studies are usually based on courses in history, political science, law, and management. Concentrations of security studies are often combined with a focus on a world region. Students may draw on resources available through United Nations Studies at Yale. Other courses can be selected in consultation with the director of graduate studies of the IR program.

WORLD REGIONS

It is also possible to undertake concentrations with emphasis on a single geographic region by electing additional courses relating to a specific area. YCIAS area studies councils, including African Studies, European Studies, Latin American and Iberian Studies, and Middle East Studies, offer graduate certificates in their areas of study. The South Asian, Southeast Asia, and East Asian Studies councils also provide a wealth of research, teaching, and enrichment activities without formal certificates. M.A. degrees in African Studies, East Asian Studies, and European and Russian Studies are available through these YCIAS councils.

NATURAL RESOURCE MANAGEMENT AND ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

A concentration in natural resource management and environmental studies requires a student to meet two basic objectives. First, to develop core knowledge in the natural sciences that are relevant to natural resource management and the environment. Second, to understand the social, economic, and political setting through which natural resources are utilized. To achieve the first objective, a student will normally complete, while at Yale, a minimum of four natural science courses concerning the problems of managing air, water, or land, or plant or animal resources. To achieve the second objective, a student will normally complete four courses at Yale that deal with the economic, political, or social aspects of natural resource management and the environment. In addition, a student concentrating in natural resources also may enroll in the summer technical training modules in plant identification, vegetation measurement, and land measurement. The School of Forestry & Environmental Studies teaches these immediately prior to the beginning of the fall term. Students in the IR program who wish to concentrate in F&ES should design an individualized program with a faculty member in the school in conjunction with the DGS of the IR Program.

LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS

For those concentrating in international law, four term courses are required in the Law School. In addition, a student must select four additional courses outside the Law School related to issues of international law and human rights.

PUBLIC HEALTH

Students wishing to concentrate in public health should take between four and six courses in the Department of Epidemiology and Public Health. These should include basic courses in health services administration and epidemiology as well as specialized courses in international health and environmental health. Students in the International Relations program who wish to concentrate in public health should design an individualized program with a faculty member in that department in conjunction with the DGS of the IR Program.

ACADEMIC DISCIPLINES
For those who wish to concentrate in a single discipline like history, economics, or political science, an additional six courses in the chosen field beyond the core requirement are required. In economics and political science, at least one of these courses must be in quantitative methods, taken in the first term to set the stage for more advanced course work. In history, courses must include at least one research seminar, two in modern history, including diplomacy and international relations, and two in modern history of an area or country outside North America and Europe. In political science, courses must include one additional course beyond the core in international relations, in comparative politics or a region or country, and in political economy. In economics, the concentration must include at least one term course in the economics of a world region, in development economics, and in international economics.

OTHER
Other individually developed concentrations are possible provided they are well conceived, intellectually coherent, and relevant to the student’s career direction. In all instances, approval must be obtained from the director of graduate studies.

Language Requirements
Three years of college-level language study or its equivalent in language mastery is required to graduate. This competence must be demonstrated through successful completion of course work or by passing a proficiency examination. For international students whose native language is not English, the language requirement may be fulfilled by demonstrated competence in English. Students pursuing joint-degree programs must fulfill all language requirements before beginning the program because of the compressed schedule for other course work. Students may study language as part of their Yale program; a maximum of two of the sixteen course credits for the two-year program may be in languages.

Special Requirements for the Joint-Degree Programs
Joint-degree candidates must fulfill all of the requirements of both programs in which they are enrolled. Joint-degree students must fulfill the requirements of both programs before receiving either degree. Joint-degree candidates are required to fulfill the core and concentration requirements of the International Relations program. An overlap of two courses is allowed between core and concentration, and a maximum of an additional two courses may be credited toward both degrees. Joint-degree students must take at least twelve graduate-level courses in Arts and Sciences departments or in professional schools other than the one granting the joint degree. Under no circumstances will students be allowed an IR concentration in the functional area in which they will be receiving a joint degree.

Applicants to the joint-degree programs must apply separately, by the appropriate deadline, to the Graduate School for the International Relations program and to the professional school involved. Decisions on admissions and fellowship support are made independently by each school. Students are encouraged to apply to both programs simultaneously. They may also apply during their first year at Yale to the second program for a joint degree. If accepted into the new program, they must receive approval for credit allocation upon registration from both degree programs.

Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Development Studies

The graduate certificate of concentration in Development Studies provides recognition that a graduate or professional student at Yale has completed interdisciplinary study and integrative research to address fundamental and applied economic, political, social, and cultural issues facing developing countries.

The Certificate in Development Studies may be pursued in conjunction with graduate degree programs in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the professional schools to allow students to develop and demonstrate their competence in this interdisciplinary field. Award of the certificate, beyond fulfilling the relevant requirements, is contingent on the successful completion of the candidate’s Yale University degree program. The Development Studies faculty adviser may set a limit on the number of applicants accepted for this program in any given year.

The certificate courses and research should be planned, in consultation with the Development Studies faculty adviser, to clearly demonstrate fulfillment of the goals of the Development Studies Certificate. Certificate candidates should declare their intention to pursue the certificate early in their degree program, and must do so no later than their penultimate term of enrollment.

Candidates for the certificate will receive preference, after students enrolled in the Council’s degree programs, for International Affairs Council travel and research funds that are awarded through annual competitions.

Requirements

1. Six courses in the area of Development Studies:
   Each year, the Development Studies faculty adviser will provide a list of courses that will count toward the six-course requirements. These courses will draw primarily on Graduate School offerings in economics, political science, history, anthropology, and sociology and courses at the professional schools, including Law, Management, Forestry & Environmental Studies, and Epidemiology and Public Health. Candidates may petition the faculty adviser to have other relevant courses count.
   Up to two courses may be directed readings/independent study courses.
   Up to two courses from the student’s home department may count toward the certificate.
2. Language proficiency:
   Students must demonstrate proficiency in one relevant language other than English. This would involve the equivalent of two years of study at Yale with a passing grade. The language should be either a major world language relevant to development studies or the language of the region on which the candidate is focusing.

3. Economics proficiency:
   Students must demonstrate proficiency in the basic concepts of economic analysis, either by demonstrating substantial prior course work in economics or by taking a graduate- or professional-level economics course at Yale. Such a course may count toward the certificate with the approval of the faculty adviser.

4. Research requirement:
   In the context of one of the courses, candidates must write a substantial research paper. The paper must demonstrate the ability to use interdisciplinary resources in development studies, including, where appropriate, primary sources, field research, data analysis, and non-English sources. An M.A. thesis may, on the determination of the faculty adviser, be used to fulfill this requirement.

   Candidates must seek approval from the faculty adviser for the research paper no later than the fourth week of the term in which they plan to complete it. The final paper will be read by two faculty members (one of whom may be the faculty member teaching the class), who must both approve it as meeting the research requirement.

   If the paper is of sufficient quality, the faculty adviser may submit it for publication in the IAC Development Studies Working Paper Series.

Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Security Studies

The graduate certificate of concentration in Security Studies provides recognition that a graduate or professional student at Yale has completed interdisciplinary study and integrative research to address fundamental and applied economic, political, social, and cultural issues facing developing countries.

The Certificate in Security Studies may be pursued in conjunction with graduate-degree programs in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the professional schools to allow students to develop and demonstrate their competence in this interdisciplinary field. Award of the certificate, beyond fulfilling the relevant requirements, is contingent on successful completion of the candidate's Yale University degree program. The certificate courses and research should be planned, in consultation with the Security Studies faculty adviser, to clearly demonstrate fulfillment of the goals of the Security Studies Certificate. Certificate candidates should declare their intention to pursue the certificate early in their degree program, and must do so no later than their penultimate term of enrollment.
Candidates for the certificate will receive preference, after students enrolled in the Council’s degree programs, for International Affairs Council travel and research funds that are awarded through annual competitions.

REQUIREMENTS

1. Six courses in the area of International Security:
   Each year the Security Studies faculty adviser will provide a list of courses that will count toward this six-course requirement. These courses will draw primarily on Graduate School offerings in anthropology, economics, history, political science, and sociology and courses at the professional schools, including Forestry & Environmental Studies, Law, Management, and Epidemiology and Public Health. Candidates may petition the faculty adviser to have other relevant courses counted.

   One of these six courses must have a core focus on International Security issues. The Security Studies faculty adviser will provide a list of courses each year that meet this requirement.

   Up to two courses may be directed readings or independent study courses.

   Up to two courses from the candidate’s home department or program may count toward the certificate.

   Up to three courses may focus on a particular region.

2. Language proficiency:
   Candidates must demonstrate proficiency in one relevant language other than English. This would involve the equivalent of two years of study at Yale with a passing grade. The language should be either a major world language relevant to security studies or the language of the region on which the candidate is focusing.

3. Research requirement:
   In the context of one of the courses, candidates must write a substantial research paper. The paper must demonstrate the ability to use interdisciplinary resources in security studies, including, where appropriate, primary sources, field research, data analysis, and non-English sources. Although there is no advanced degree in Latin American and Iberian Studies at Yale, graduate and professional students may draw upon resources of many departments in order to make Latin America and/or Iberia their field of concentration while working toward their respective degrees in conventional disciplines. In addition, a graduate program in International Relations offers an M.A. degree centered on political science and economics with possibilities for a Latin American emphasis, and the Department of History and the Council on Archaeological Studies offer M.A. degree programs that allow a Latin American concentration.

Students may also pursue the Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Latin American Studies in conjunction with graduate-degree programs in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the professional schools. Admission is contingent upon the candidate's acceptance into a Yale graduate-degree program. To complete the certificate, candidates must demonstrate expertise in the area through their major graduate or professional field, as well as show command of the diverse interdisciplinary, geographic, and cultural-linguistic approaches associated with expertise in the area of concentration. Award of the certificate, beyond fulfilling the relevant requirements, is contingent upon the successful completion of the candidate's Yale University degree program. For general guidelines, see the YCIAS section of this bulletin (under Research Institutes) or inquire directly at the Council on Latin American and Iberian Studies.

Specific Requirements for the Graduate Certificate of Concentration

1. Language proficiency: Spanish and Portuguese. The equivalent of two years of study of one language and one year of the other.
2. Course work: six graduate courses in at least two different disciplines. No more than four courses may count in any one discipline.
3. Geographical and disciplinary coverage: at least two countries and two languages must be included in the course work or thesis.
4. Research: a major graduate course research paper, dissertation prospectus, dissertation or thesis that demonstrates ability to use field resources, ideally in one or more languages of the region.

In all cases, the Graduate Certificate Advisor of the Council on Latin American and Iberian Studies can assist the graduate student in designing a balanced and coordinated curriculum.

The council supplements the graduate curriculum with programs including a lecture series, special seminars, and conferences that bring visiting speakers to campus. The council also serves as a communications and information center for a vast variety of enriching events in Latin American studies sponsored by other departments, schools, and independent groups at Yale, and as the link between Yale and Latin American centers at other universities, and between Yale and educational programs in Latin America and Iberia.

The Latin American Collection of the University library has approximately 480,000 printed volumes, plus newspapers and microfilms, CD-ROMs, films, sound recordings, maps, and musical scores. The library's Latin American Manuscript Collection is one of the finest in the United States for unpublished documents for the study of Latin American history. Having the oldest among the major Latin American collections in the United States, Yale offers research opportunities unavailable elsewhere.

The Yale library’s Iberian collections comprise several hundred thousand volumes as well as newspapers, microfilms, electronic publications, films, maps, and musical scores. The collections are particularly strong in literature and history. Works collected include all languages and literatures of the peninsula, including Catalan, Gallegan, Basque, and Bable. The Yale libraries also have substantial collections of publications and research materials from Spain and Portugal, relating to most disciplines in the humanities and social sciences.

Program materials are available upon request to the director of graduate studies of the department of intended specialization. Inquiries about the Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Latin American Studies should be addressed to the Council on Latin American and Iberian Studies, Yale University, PO Box 208206, New Haven CT 06520-8206; e-mail, latin.america@yale.edu.

Students with an interest in the Middle East should apply to one of the University’s degree-granting departments, like Anthropology, History, Linguistics, Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, Political Science, or Religious Studies. The Council on Middle East Studies is part of the Yale Center for International and Area Studies. It has been organized to provide guidance to graduate students who desire to use the resources of the departments of the University that offer Middle East-related courses.
The council brings together faculty and students sharing an interest in the Middle East by sponsoring conferences, discussions, films, and a lecture series by scholars from Yale as well as visiting scholars. It provides information concerning grants, fellowships, research programs, and foreign study opportunities. It also administers research projects in a variety of Middle East-related areas.

In addition to the resources of the individual departments, Yale’s library system has much to offer the student interested in Middle East Studies. Of particular note are the collections of Arabic and Persian manuscripts, as well as large holdings on the medieval and modern Middle East.

The Council on Middle East Studies administers the Middle East Studies National Resource Center at Yale. The center supports a number of projects and activities, including postdoctoral and visiting scholar appointments, summer and academic year language fellowships, and an extensive outreach program as well as conferences, travel funds, and research projects. The National Resource Center is funded by the United States Department of Education.

As of the academic year 2005–2006, the council will be offering a Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Modern Middle East Studies.

The Graduate Certificate of Concentration in Modern Middle East Studies
The certificate represents acknowledgment of substantial preparation in Middle East Studies, both in the student’s major graduate or professional field and also in terms of the disciplinary and geographical diversity required by the council for recognized competency in the field of Middle East Studies. As language and culture are the core of the area studies concept, students are required to attain or demonstrate language proficiency.

Requirements:
1. Language proficiency: the equivalent of two years of study at a passing grade in one of the four languages of the Middle East—Arabic, Hebrew, Persian, and Turkish.
2. Course work: six graduate courses in at least two different disciplines. No more than four courses may count in any one discipline. Included in these six courses must be an introductory Middle East history course, such as State and Society and Culture in the Middle East (taken with special supplemental graduate readings and assignments).
3. Interdisciplinary coverage: both courses and any research project undertaken in lieu of a course must reflect experience of at least two disciplines.
4. Research: a major graduate course research paper, dissertation prospectus, dissertation, or thesis that demonstrates ability to use field resources, ideally in one or more languages of the region.

For more information on the Graduate Certificate and inquiries about Middle East studies, contact the Council on Middle East Studies, Yale University, PO Box 208206, New Haven CT 06520-8206, or the administrative assistant of the Council, Barbara Papacoda, e-mail, barbara.papacoda@yale.edu.

Language instruction is offered in Hindi and Tamil. Students planning to undertake field research or language study in South Asia may apply to the council for summer fellowship support.

For information and program materials, contact the Council on South Asian Studies, Yale University, PO Box 208206, New Haven, CT 06520-8206; or see our Web site, www.yale.edu/ycias/southasia.

Yale does not offer higher degrees in Southeast Asia Studies. Instead, students apply for admission to one of the regular degree-granting departments and turn to Southeast Asia Studies for guidance regarding the development of their special area interest, courses outside their department, and instruction in Southeast Asian languages related to their research interest. The council aims to bring together faculty and students sharing an interest in Southeast Asia and supplements the graduate curriculum with an annual seminar series, periodic conferences, and special lectures.

Yale offers extensive library and research collections on Southeast Asia in Sterling Memorial Library, the Economic Growth Center, the Peabody Museum of Natural History, and the Human Relations Area Files. Further information on library resources is available from Rich Richie, Curator, Southeast Asia Collection, Sterling Memorial Library (432.1858, rich.richie@yale.edu).

Courses featuring Southeast Asian content are offered within a variety of departments each year, including Anthropology, Economics, History, History of Art, Political Science, and Forestry & Environmental Studies. A list of courses for the current year can be obtained through the council office or Web site: www.yale.edu/seas/Courses.htm.

Language instruction is offered in two Southeast Asian languages, Indonesian and Vietnamese. The council supports language tables and tutoring in the other Southeast Asian languages by special arrangement. Students planning to undertake field research or language study in Southeast Asia may apply to the council for summer fellowship support.

GRADUATE JOINT DEGREES

To enhance the educational opportunities of its graduate students, YCIAS collaborates with four of Yale’s professional schools—the Law School, the School of Management, the School of Forestry and Environmental Studies, and the School of Public Health. Together, we have developed joint degree programs that offer a strong connection between two demanding courses of study while also fulfilling the requirements of each separate school.

A joint degree enables graduating students to receive an M.A. in International Relations, African Studies, East Asian Studies or Russian and European Studies, and the equivalent degree from the Yale professional school i.e., J.D., M.B.A., M.F., M.E.M., or M.P.H. Each joint program leads to the simultaneous award of two graduate professional degrees and students can earn the two degrees simultaneously in less time than if they were pursued sequentially. The joint degrees provide an integrated education that combines two powerful programs and complements both, while protecting the integrity of each. While graduates of two-year M.A. programs do well upon graduation, it is interesting to note that joint degree graduates have been exceptionally successful in the job market.

With the exception of the joint M.A./J.D. program that requires four years, completion of all course requirements takes three years. Typically candidates spend the first year in one program and the second year in the partner program. During the third and final year of study, students register in one program each semester. Joint degree students are advised by a committee composed of the appropriate Director of Graduate Studies (DGS) and a faculty member of the relevant professional school to guide them in this process.

Candidates must apply and be admitted separately to each school, i.e., each school makes its decision independently. It is highly recommended that students apply to and enter a joint degree program from the outset, though it is possible to apply to the second program once matriculated at Yale.

There are currently six formal joint degree programs available:
- International Relations and Management (M.A./M.B.A.)
- International Relations and Forestry and Environmental Studies (M.A./M.F. or M.A./M.E.M.)
- International Relations and Public Health (M.A./M.P.H.)
- International Relations and Law (M.A./J.D.)
- East Asian Studies and Management (M.A./M.B.A.)
- Russian and European Studies and Management (M.A./M.B.A.)

However, ad hoc arrangements for joint degrees with all the YCIAS M.A.s are possible with special permission of both programs. Additional formal joint degree programs are expected in the near future.

Depending on the M.A., the course work required for each joint degree does vary. Since the International Relations M.A. has the longest-standing tradition of joint degrees, its basic requirements are outlined below as an example:
Joint Degree Program

To complete the IR M.A. portion of the joint degree, students must complete the requirements for the IR degree, though only a total of 12, not 16, courses are required. None of these courses may be from the partner school, though up to two of the core, or concentration, requirements may be met through courses at the partner school.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND MANAGEMENT (M.A./M.B.A.)

To complete the M.B.A. component of the program, a student must fulfill all of SOM’s normal requirements. The one-year of core curriculum study taken by all M.B.A. candidates in their first year may be taken in either the first or second year by the joint degree student. Joint degree candidates take only 13, not the usual 18 courses at SOM.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND FORESTRY & ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES (M.A./M.F. OR M.A./M.E.M.)

For the Forestry & Environmental Studies component, students may elect from two of the F&ES master’s programs: the Master of Forestry and the Master of Environmental Management. Each F&ES master’s degree has its own specific requirements. Because of the individualized nature of the specialization requirements, all joint degree students must complete the three-week F&ES summer training program in technical skills, which cover plant identification, vegetation measurement and land measurement.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND PUBLIC HEALTH (M.A./M.P.H.)

Exceptions for joint degree candidates include the reduction of required EPH credit hours from 60 to 45 credit hours. Joint degree candidates are not required to undertake the community project or internship, although they may choose them as electives.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND LAW (M.A./J.D)

Candidates for the four-year M.A./J.D. joint degree will spend the first year in one of the two programs. During the second, third and fourth years, students generally divide their time between the Law School and the Graduate School. In some cases, a student may spend the entire third year in the Graduate School, in which case the fourth year will consist entirely of work in the Law School.

For details about the requirements for a specific joint degree, please contact the appropriate Director of Graduate Studies at YCIAS, and at the relevant professional school. For application materials, you must request them from both the Admissions Office of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the relevant professional school.

GRADUATE CERTIFICATES OF CONCENTRATION

Open to all graduate and professional students at Yale, YCIAS sponsors six graduate certificates of concentration. The councils on African, European, Latin American and Iberian, and Middle East Studies provide three regionally focused certificates. The International Affairs Council provides one in International Development Studies and a second in International Security Studies.
Students may pursue the certificates in conjunction with graduate degree programs in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and the professional schools. Admission is contingent on the candidate's acceptance into a Yale graduate degree program. To complete the certificate, candidates must demonstrate expertise in the area through their major graduate or professional field, as well as show command of the diverse interdisciplinary, geographic, cultural, and linguistic approaches associated with expertise in the area of concentration. Award of the certificate, beyond fulfilling the relevant requirements, is contingent on the successful completion of the candidate’s Yale University degree program. Students who complete the required additional work will receive the relevant certificate from YCIAS.

While the general requirements for the graduate certificate of concentration are consistent across all councils of YCIAS, the specific requirements of each council may vary according to the different expertise required for its area and are reflected in their application, monitoring, and award forms. Guidelines, detailed rules, and application forms can be picked up at the relevant council or downloaded from the YCIAS Web site at www.yale.edu/ycias. Applications may be submitted by students admitted to a graduate program at Yale or during their program of study but no later than the beginning of the penultimate term of study. Each council may set limits on the number of candidates for their program in any given year.

General Requirements

1. Six courses in the area of concentration (in at least two different fields).
2. Language proficiency in at least one language of the region beyond proficiency in English. For some councils and for some individual circumstances, proficiency in two languages beyond English is required.
3. Interdisciplinary research paper.

Details on General Requirements

COURSE WORK

Students must complete a total of six (6) courses focused on the area of concentration from at least two different fields including the Foundations Course (as designated by the council). Of the remaining five courses only two may be “directed readings” or “independent study.” Please note:

1. No more than four courses may count from any one discipline or school.
2. Courses from the home field of the student are eligible. Courses may count toward the student’s degree as well as toward the certificate.
3. Literature and advanced language courses at the graduate level may count toward the six-course requirement but not elementary or intermediate language offerings.
4. Course work must demonstrate broad comparative knowledge of the region rather than focus on a specific country.
5. Course work must demonstrate a grasp of the larger thematic concerns affecting the region, e.g., environment, migration, or global financial movements.
6. Only those courses listed on the “Graduate Course Listings” provided by the Area Council may be used to fulfill course requirements. For courses not listed there, please consult with the certificate/qualification adviser.

7. A minimum grade of HP must be obtained or the course will not be counted toward the certificate.

LANGUAGE PROFICIENCY

In the major area language targeted for meeting the proficiency requirement, students must demonstrate the equivalent ability of two years of language study at Yale with a grade of HP or better. Language proficiency must encompass reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills plus grammar. Students may demonstrate proficiency through completing course work, by testing at Yale, or by other means as approved by the council adviser. When a second major language of the region beyond English is required, the relevant council will specify the target level.

Normally, when the candidate is a native speaker of one of the area’s major languages, he/she will be expected to develop language proficiency in a second major area language.

INTERDISCIPLINARY RESEARCH PAPER

A qualifying research paper is required to demonstrate field-specific research ability focused on the area of concentration. After they have completed substantial course work in the area, students must seek approval from the council faculty adviser for the research project they propose as the qualifying paper. Normally, the students will submit their request no later than the fourth week of the term in which they plan to submit the qualifying paper.

The interdisciplinary research paper may be the result of original research conducted under the supervision of a faculty member in a graduate seminar or independent readings course or in field research related to their studies. An M.A. thesis or Ph.D. prospectus or thesis may also be acceptable if it is interdisciplinary as well as focused on the area. The qualifying paper should examine questions concerning the region in a comparative and/or interdisciplinary context. It should also use resource materials from the region and/or resource materials in the language(s) of the region. Normally the paper should incorporate at least two of the following elements:

1. Address more than one country of the region of the area.
2. Draw on more than one disciplinary field for questions or analytic approaches.
3. Address a transregional or transnational theme relevant to the area.

The paper will be read by two faculty members selected by the council adviser. The readers will be evaluating the paper for the quality of research, knowledge of the relevant literature, and the depth of analysis of the topic. The qualifying paper must be fully footnoted and have a complete bibliography.
Progress Reports and Filing for the Award of the Graduate Certificate of Concentration

Students should submit a progress report along with a copy of their unofficial transcript to the council faculty adviser at the end of each term.

A student who intends to file for the final award of the certificate/qualification should contact the council no later than the end of the term prior to award. No later than the fourth week of the term of the expected award, the candidate should demonstrate how he/she has or will have completed all the requirements in a timely fashion.

At the end of the term as grades are finalized, the council will confirm that the candidate is cleared to receive the home degree and has fulfilled all the requirements of the certificate. Students will normally receive their certificates with their diplomas at Commencement.

For more information, please see the appropriate council administrator.
Graduate Admissions to YCIAS

Admission to all Graduate Degree Programs at the Yale Center for International and Area Studies is highly selective.

The programs are small, accepting twenty-five to thirty students per year in the two-year International Relations Program, and eight to twelve students each in African Studies, East Asian Studies, and European and Russian Studies. International students represent approximately one third of all applicants. Minorities and women are strongly encouraged to apply.

Students accepted into the programs come with a variety of backgrounds and experiences. Because the programs are simultaneously more flexible and academically rigorous than those at many schools, successful candidates should show a high level of maturity and self-direction. Language skills and international experience are an advantage. All Master’s degree candidates must fulfill a language requirement as defined by the individual program.

APPLICATION PROCEDURES

Application to all YCIAS Master’s Programs are made through the Admissions Office of the Yale Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. When requesting materials, applicants should identify their preferred degree program in International Relations, African Studies, East Asian Studies or Russian and East European Studies, as well as any of the joint degree programs.

YCIAS Grants, Fellowships, and Awards

GRANTS AND FELLOWSHIPS

The YCIAS is Yale University’s principal agency for coordinating teaching and research on international affairs and on foreign societies and cultures. YCIAS grants are available to Yale students of any nationality unless otherwise specified in the grant guidelines. The fellowship and grant opportunities are grouped under Yale Graduate/Professional Students and Yale Undergraduate Students at www.yale.edu/ycias/grants.htm.

Additionally, students can visit the Yale Grants and Fellowships Database at http://studentgrants.yale.edu/ for funding opportunities at YCIAS and for other grants and fellowships available at Yale.

YCIAS encourages all students to explore not only the funding opportunities available within YCIAS, but also those available from other University sources and from external granting agencies. Graduate students also should consult the fellowship library at the McDougal Graduate Student Center, located in the Hall of Graduate Studies, Room 120A. Web site: www.yale.edu/graduateschool/mcdougal/resource.html.

Yale undergraduate students are encouraged to consult the comprehensive resource and fellowship libraries at the Office of International Education and Fellowship Programs of Yale College at 55 Whitney Avenue. Web site: www.yale.edu/iefp.

The specific application deadlines may vary from year to year. Most spring deadlines fall in February, but some may occur in other months. Students should consult with the relevant granting unit at YCIAS or the YCIAS Fellowships Office (at 306 Luce Hall, 203.436.4203) to answer questions about specific grants and to obtain an application. Applications and information are also available in the director’s suite at YCIAS, or through the individual sites listed in external Web sites.

AWARDS

YCIAS Director’s Award

The YCIAS Director’s Awards are for non-tenured Yale faculty, who receive certain distinguished individual grants, prizes, or fellowships for international research. In addition to recognizing these junior faculty members’ accomplishments, the Director’s Award is intended to enable them to enhance their future research. Recipients are appointed a Research Fellow at YCIAS and receive research funds of $5,000 per year for two years. Faculty members who received one of the following awards are eligible: Carnegie Scholar; Alfred P. Sloan Fellowship; Wenner-Gren Individual Research Grant; National Science Foundation Young Investigator Award; Alexander von Humboldt Research Fellowship; Bradley Foundation Fellowship; Smith Richardson; Junior Faculty Fellowship; Russell Sage Foundation Fellowship; Institute for Advanced Study Fellowship; Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences Fellowship; John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship; and National Humanities Center Fellowship.
YCIAS International Book Prizes
The YCIAS International Book Prizes are awarded for books on international topics written by members of the Yale faculty. Each year a $5,000 prize is awarded for the best first book, and a $5,000 prize is awarded for the best book.

YCIAS Journalism Award
Each year the YCIAS sponsors a Journalism Award. The contest, open to Yale students only, carries a cash award of $300. Articles entered must relate to some aspect of international affairs, area studies, or foreign relations. The deadline for entries is in April. For rules, guidelines, and entry form, visit www.yale.edu/ycias/journalism_award.htm.

YCIAS Publications

YCIAS affiliated faculty have written hundreds of books on a wide range of topics. They are listed at www.yale.edu/ycias/publications.

The YCIAS Working Papers Series features research and lectures by Yale faculty, affiliated scholars, and visiting dignitaries. All these papers are available for download at www.yale.edu/ycias/database. The database includes abstracts and is searchable by author, title, year, subject, and source.
The YCIAS Office of Career and Alumni Services (OCAS) supports the career development needs of students enrolled in the ten YCIAS degree programs, as well as recent graduates, and bolsters faculty efforts to recruit the best students.

The Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs (APSIA), with YCIAS as a founding member, coordinates joint recruitment and career development programs. OCAS brings the insights from this international network back to the University through collaborations with its parallel offices of Yale College, the Graduate School, and the professional schools.

OCAS spearheads the international component of campus-wide career fairs focused on bringing job opportunities and potential employers to meet students interested in the private for-profit, nonprofit, and federal government sectors, and also organizes an international opportunities fair covering all sectors. It provides individual counseling, an alumni/ae database to support one-on-one consultations with students, and job and internship postings, and organizes alumni/ae events.

For more information on OCAS, visit www.yale.edu/ycias/ocas.
Yale University Resources

A GLOBAL UNIVERSITY

In celebrating the Yale Tercentennial in 2001, President Richard C. Levin gave special weight to “Yale’s intention to become a truly global institution” by building on existing relationships and international activity on the part of such long-standing University units as YCIAS. Since that time, the University has made great strides to intensify and broaden its efforts in the international arena. Exchanges of students, faculty, researchers, and fellows have grown significantly. Programs of study and research across the University increasingly incorporate international subject matter. To enhance all its initiatives in this direction, the administration has created a number of organizations and other specialized resources.

The most recently established organizational unit, inaugurated in 2003–2004, is the Office of International Affairs, which serves as an administrative resource to support the international activities of all schools, departments, offices, centers, and organizations at Yale; to promote Yale and its faculty to international audiences; and to increase the visibility of Yale’s international activities around the globe. Web site: www.yale.edu/oia.

The Office of International Affairs joins a range of other institutional resources, in addition to the principal unit, the Yale Center for International and Area Studies. These offices include:

Yale Center for the Study of Globalization, which draws on the rich intellectual resources of the Yale community, scholars from other universities, and experts from around the world to support teaching and research on the many facets of globalization, while helping to enrich debate through workshops, conferences, and public programs; www.ycsg.yale.edu.

The Office of International Education and Fellowship Programs (IEFP) provides Yale College students with advising and information about many of the major (and not so major) fellowships, scholarships, and grants available throughout the world. IEFP also provides advising and information regarding study abroad, including Yale’s Junior Year/Term Abroad Program and summer study abroad. www.yale.edu/iefp/

Office of International Students and Scholars (OISS); www.oiss.yale.edu. See the description below.

Yale World Fellows Program, which hosts twelve to eighteen Fellows from outside the U.S. each year for a term of concentrated study and close contact on the Yale campus; www.yale.edu/worldfellows.

For additional information: “Yale and the World” is a compilation, on the Yale Web site, of resources for international students, scholars, and other Yale affiliates interested in the University’s global initiatives: http://world.yale.edu.
OFFICE OF INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS AND SCHOLARS

The Office of International Students and Scholars (OISS) coordinates services and support to Yale’s international students, faculty, staff, and their dependents. OISS assists members of the Yale international community with all matters of special concern to them and serves as a source of referral to other university offices and departments. OISS staff provide assistance with employment, immigration, personal and cultural adjustment, and family and financial matters, as well as serve as a source of general information about living at Yale and in New Haven. In addition, as Yale University’s representative for immigration concerns, OISS provides information and assistance to students, staff, and faculty on how to obtain and maintain legal status in the United States. OISS issues the visa documents needed to request entry into the United States under Yale’s immigration sponsorship and processes requests for extensions of authorized periods of stay in the United States, school transfers, and employment authorization. All international students and scholars must register with OISS as soon as they arrive at Yale, at which time OISS will provide information about orientation activities for newly arrived students, scholars, and family members. OISS programs, like the monthly international coffee hours, daily English conversation programs, and orientation receptions for newly arrived graduate students and postdocs, provide an opportunity to meet members of Yale’s international community and become acquainted with the many resources of Yale University and New Haven.

OISS maintains an extensive Web site (www.oiss.yale.edu) with useful information for students and scholars prior to and upon arrival in New Haven. As U.S. immigration regulations are complex and change rather frequently, we urge international students and scholars to visit the office and check the Web site for the most recent updates. International graduate students, postdocs, and visiting scholars can get connected with OISS by subscribing to one or both of the OISS e-mail lists. OISS-L is the electronic newsletter with important information for Yale’s international community. YaleInternational E-Group is an interactive list through which over 1,000 international students and scholars keep each other informed about events in the area. Check the Web site for more information. To subscribe to either list, send a message to oiss@yale.edu.

Spouses and partners of international students and scholars will want to know about ISPY — International Spouses and Partners at Yale. Information about ISPY and other OISS programs can be found on the OISS Web site.

The Office of International Students and Scholars, located at 246 Church Street, Suite 201, is open Monday through Friday from 8.30 a.m. to 5 p.m., except Tuesday, when the office is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

LIBRARIES

The Yale University Library consists of the central libraries — Sterling Memorial Library, the Cross Campus Library, the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, and the Seeley G. Mudd Library — and thirty school and department libraries, as well as small collections within each of the twelve residential colleges. Second largest among the university libraries in the United States, the Yale University Library contains more than 10.5 million volumes, half of which are in the central libraries. Students have access to the collections in all the libraries at Yale. Curators of the major regional collections at Yale serve as valued members of the relevant YCIAS councils.

CENTER FOR LANGUAGE STUDY

Established in 1998, the Center for Language Study aims to strengthen language teaching and learning across the University by providing leadership and support for pedagogical innovation, professional development, and the development and implementation of new methodologies and materials. It is also a source for a vast range of technological services, guidance, and assistance, such as technology-equipped classrooms, foreign language computing labs, multimedia materials development, and audio/video distribution.

In addition to supporting the fifty languages taught regularly at Yale, the Center has developed Directed Independent Language Study (DILS) in partnership with YCIAS. This innovative program is designed to provide a structured but independent method for students to develop solid skills in languages that are not currently offered through traditional classroom instruction at Yale. The Center has also worked with the seven languages taught directly through the African, European, South Asian, and Southeast Asia Studies Councils to produce online courses and supporting materials, e.g., an online Zulu course for medical students planning to work in South Africa and, for Modern Greek, the Electronic Pictionary and the Music and Poetry Anthology.

RESOURCE OFFICE ON DISABILITIES

The Resource Office on Disabilities facilitates accommodations for undergraduate and graduate and professional school students with disabilities who register with and have appropriate documentation on file in the Resource Office. Early planning is critical. Documentation may be submitted to the Resource Office even though a specific accommodation request is not anticipated at the time of registration. It is recommended that matriculating students in need of disability-related accommodations at Yale University contact the Resource Office by June 1. Returning students must contact the Resource Office at the beginning of each term to arrange for course and exam accommodations.

The Resource Office also provides assistance to students with temporary disabilities. General informational inquiries are welcome from students and members of the Yale community and from the public. The mailing address is Resource Office on Disabilities, Yale University, PO Box 208305, New Haven CT 06520-8305. The Resource Office is located in William L. Harkness Hall (WLH), Rooms 102 and 103. Access to the Resource Office is through the College Street entrance to WLH. Office hours are Monday through Friday, 8:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Voice callers may reach staff at 203.432.2324; TTY/TDD callers at 203.432.8250. The Resource Office may also be reached by e-mail (judith.york@yale.edu) or through its Web site (www.yale.edu/rod).
