The Study of Law at Yale University

A BRIEF HISTORY OF YALE LAW SCHOOL

The origins of Yale Law School trace to the earliest days of the nineteenth century, when there was as yet no university legal education. Instead, law was learned by clerking as an apprentice in a lawyer’s office. The first law schools, including the one that became Yale, developed out of this apprenticeship system and grew up inside law offices. The earliest of these law-office law schools, located in Litchfield, Connecticut, trained upwards of a thousand students from throughout the country over the half-century from its beginnings in the 1780s until it closed in 1833.

The future Yale Law School formed in the office of a New Haven practitioner, Seth Staples. Staples owned an exceptionally good library (an attraction for students at a time when law books were quite scarce), and he began training apprentices in the early 1800s. By the 1810s his law office had a full-fledged law school. In 1820 Staples took on a former student, Samuel Hitchcock, as a partner in his combined law office and law school. A few years later, Staples moved his practice to New York, leaving Hitchcock as the proprietor of the New Haven Law School. (Staples went on to become counsel to Charles Goodyear in the litigation that vindicated Goodyear’s patent on the vulcanizing process for rubber manufacture, and Staples served pro bono as one of the lawyers who won the celebrated Amistad case in 1839.)

The New Haven Law School affiliated gradually with Yale across the two decades from the mid-1820s to the mid-1840s. David Daggett, a former U.S. senator from Connecticut, joined Hitchcock as co-proprietor of the school in 1824. In 1826 Yale named Daggett to be professor of law in Yale College, where he lectured to undergraduates on public law and government. Also in 1826 the Yale College catalogue began to list “The Law School’s” instructors and course of study, although law students did not begin receiving Yale degrees until 1843.

Yale Law School remained fragile for decades. At the death of Samuel Hitchcock in 1845 and again upon the death of his successor, Henry Dutton, in 1869, the University came near to closing the School. Preoccupied with the needs of Yale College, the University left the Law School largely in the hands of a succession of New Haven practicing lawyers who operated the School as a proprietorship. Thus, instead of receiving salaries, they were paid with what was left of the year’s tuition revenue after the School’s other expenses. The School was housed in rented space in a single lecture hall over a downtown saloon until 1873, when it moved to premises in the New Haven county courthouse. (The School acquired its first home on the Yale campus, Hendrie Hall, in the 1890s, and moved to its present home, the Sterling Law Building, in 1931.)

In the last decades of the nineteenth century Yale began to take the mission of university legal education seriously, and to articulate for Yale Law School two traits that would come to be hallmarks of the School. First, Yale Law School would be small and humane; it would resist the pressures that were emerging in university law schools elsewhere toward large enrollments and impersonal faculty-student relations.

Second, Yale Law School would be interdisciplinary in its approach to teaching the law. Yale’s President Theodore Dwight Woolsey, in a notable address delivered in 1874, challenged the contemporary orthodoxy that law was an autonomous discipline:

Let the school, then, be regarded no longer as simply the place for training men to plead causes, to give advice to clients, to defend criminals; but let it be regarded as the place of instruction in all sound learning relating to the foundations of justice, the doctrine of government, to all those branches of knowledge which the most finished statesman and legislator ought to know.

Yale’s program of promoting interdisciplinarity in legal studies within a setting of low faculty-student ratios took decades to evolve and to implement. Initially, the Law School achieved its links to other fields of knowledge by arranging for selected members of other departments of the University to teach in the Law School. Across the twentieth century, Yale pioneered the appointment to the law faculty of professors with advanced training in fields ranging from economics to psychiatry. This led Yale Law School away from the preoccupation with private law that then typified American legal education, and toward serious engagement with public and international law.

The revival of Yale Law School after 1869 was led by its first full-time dean, Francis Wayland, who helped the School establish its philanthropic base. It was during this time that the modern law library was organized and Hendrie Hall was constructed. It was also during this period that The Yale Law Journal was started and Yale’s pioneering efforts in graduate programs in law began; the degree of Master of Laws was offered for the first time in 1876. The faculty was led by Simeon Baldwin, who began teaching at the School at age twenty-nine and retired fifty years later in 1919. Baldwin became the leading railroad lawyer of the Railroad Age. He wrote dozens of books and articles on a wide range of legal subjects. He also served as governor of Connecticut and chief justice of the state Supreme Court. Along with other members of the Law School faculty, he played a significant part in the founding of the American Bar Association (he also served as president of that organization) and what ultimately became the Association of American Law Schools.

After 1900, Yale Law School acquired its character as a dynamic center of legal scholarship. Arthur Corbin, hired as a youngster in 1903, became the dominant contracts scholar of the first half of the twentieth century. Among those who joined him in the next decade was Wesley N. Hohfeld, whose account of jural relations remains a classic of American jurisprudence.

In the 1930s Yale Law School spawned the movement known as legal realism, which has reshaped the way American lawyers understand the function of legal rules and the work of courts and judges. The realists directed attention to factors not captured in the rules, ranging from the attitudes of judges and jurors to the nuances of the facts of particular cases. Under the influence of realism, American legal doctrine has become less conceptual and more empirical. Under Dean Charles Clark (1929–1939), the School built a faculty that included such legendary figures as Thurman Arnold, Edwin Borchard, future U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, Jerome Frank, Underhill Moore, Walton Hamilton, and Wesley Sturges. Clark was the moving figure during these years in crafting the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the foundation of modern American procedure.

Yale Law School’s tradition of emphasizing public as well as private law proved ever more prescient as events of the twentieth century increased the role of public affairs in the life of the law. Yale graduates found themselves uniquely well prepared to play important roles in the rise of the administrative state, the internationalization following the World Wars, and the domestic civil rights movement. In the 1950s and 1960s, the School became renowned as a center of constitutional law, taxation, commercial law, international law, antitrust, and law and economics. In recent decades the pace of curricular innovation has if anything quickened, as the School has developed new strengths in such fields as comparative constitutional law, corporate finance, environmental law, gender studies, international human rights, and legal history, as well as an array of clinical programs taught by a clinical faculty of exceptional breadth and devotion.

THE CHARGE TO STUDENTS

The following sections contain the course offerings, a general description of the requirements for graduation from Yale Law School, and information concerning various academic options. Students are charged with notice of the contents of this bulletin.
Goals
- cut gov't costs of AFDC
- make AFDC "rehabilitative by nature"
Course Offerings

FALL TERM

First-Term Courses

Constitutional Law I (10001). 4 units. A.R. Amar (Section A), P. Gewirtz (Section B), K. Yoshino (Group 1), J. Rubenfeld (Group 2), P.W. Kahn (Group 3), J.M. Balkin (Group 4), R.C. Post (Group 5), R. Siegel (Group 6)

Contracts I (11001). 4 units. R. Brooks (Section A), C.M. Rose (Section B), I. Ayres (Section 1), D. Markovits (Group 2), R.W. Gordon (Group 3), S.L. Carter (Group 4)

Procedure I (12001). 4 units. O.M. Fiss (Section A), H.H. Koh (Section B), J. Resnik (Section C), D.S. Days, III (Group 1), O.A. Hathaway (Group 2)

Torts I (13001). 4 units. G. Calabresi (Section A), J.J. Donohue (Section B), P.H. Schuck (Section C)

Advanced Courses

*Courses marked with an asterisk satisfy the legal ethics/professional responsibility requirement described on page 84.

Administrative Law (20170). 4 units. This course will review the legal and practical foundations of the modern administrative state. Topics will include the creation of administrative agencies and the non-delegation doctrine, the internal process of adjudication and rulemaking in administrative agencies, judicial review of administrative action, the organization of the executive branch, liability for official misconduct, and beneficiary enforcement of public law. Self-scheduled examination. J.L. Mashaw.

Administrative Law (20360). 4 units. This course will review the legal and practical foundations of the modern administrative state. Topics will include the creation of administrative agencies and the delegation doctrine, judicial review of the procedures and substance of administrative action, the organization of the executive branch, and liability for official misconduct. Scheduled examination. E.D. Elliott.

Advanced Contracts (20361). 4 units. This course will cover some of the same topics that are in the first-year course, but in more depth and with a pronounced interdisciplinary focus. The course also will cover certain international conventions dealing with the sale of goods and of contract enforcement. There will be a casebook and readings. Self-scheduled examination. A. Schwartz.

Advanced Immigration Legal Services (20382). 3 units, credit/fail. Only open to students who have taken Immigration Legal Services. Enrollment limited. C.L. Lucht, J.L. Pottenger, Jr., and H.V. Zonana.
Advanced Legal Writing (20032). 3 units. This course will provide practice in writing legal memoranda and briefs. Students will have the opportunity to refine their legal research and analytical skills as well as their writing skills. The goal of the course will be to take students beyond basic competence to excellence in legal writing. Enrollment limited to ten. R.D. Harrison.

Advanced Torts: Understanding the Asbestos Litigation Phenomenon (20342). Units to be arranged. Despite every expectation and the settlement of hundreds of thousands of suits, asbestos litigation has continued to increase. The ambition of this seminar will be to try to understand the sources of this phenomenon, otherwise unknown to civil law. The seminar will be devoted to group and individual research to identify and evaluate all of the legal changes adopted by courts to deal with the problem of asbestos-related injury. It will begin with a study of the general developments in asbestos litigation over the past twenty years. Then, individual students or groups of students will choose specific subject areas to research in more detail, identifying how the law or procedure was changed to accommodate asbestos litigation. The seminar should provide abundant opportunities for papers and publication. Paper required. G.L. Priest.

*Advocacy for Children and Youth (20329). 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical seminar will represent children and youth in abuse, neglect, uncared for, and termination of parental rights cases in the Superior Court for Juvenile Matters and certain related matters. Class sessions will focus on substantive law, ethical issues arising from the representation of children and youth in the relevant contexts, interviewing and lawyering competencies, case discussions, and background materials relating to state intervention into the family. Class will meet weekly, with occasional supplemental sessions to be arranged. Additionally, students will attend weekly case supervision sessions. Casework will require, on average, ten to twelve hours weekly, but time demands will fluctuate over the course of the term; class time will be concentrated in the first half of the term. Enrollment limited to four. J.K. Peters.

Alternative Dispute Resolution (20314). 2 or 3 units. This course will explore the theory and practice of dispute resolution outside of and as supplement to adjudication in the courts. The class will cover the traditional methods of “alternative” dispute resolution, such as negotiated settlements, mediation, and arbitration as well as some newer applications. The course will examine the strengths and weaknesses of various methods of dispute resolution from private and public perspectives, with an emphasis on the legal and policy questions that alternative dispute resolution poses. Students will study ADR as future consumers and policy makers, rather than providers of the services. In other words, the central goal of the course is to enhance students’ ability to counsel and represent clients in these fora, not necessarily to act as neutrals. Substantial Paper credit available. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited to twenty-four. J.G. Brown.
Anglo-American Legal History: Directed Research (20009). 3 units. An opportunity for supervised research and writing on topics to be agreed. The object will be to produce work of publishable quality. Papers will normally go through several drafts. Prerequisite: History of the Common Law or evidence of comparable background in legal history. Paper required. Permission of instructor required. J.H. Langbein.

Antitrust: Individual Research (20007). 2 to 4 units. Research and writing on current problems in antitrust. Topics to be arranged with the instructor. Prerequisite: the basic Antitrust course or its equivalent. Enrollment limited. A.K. Klevorick.

Balancing Civil Liberties and National Security after September 11 (20343). 2 or 3 units, credit/fail. This course will be a hybrid between clinic and seminar, focusing primarily on civil liberties cases arising out of government policies in the aftermath of September 11, including citizen and non-citizen detentions, Fourth and Fifth Amendment issues, international human rights and humanitarian law issues, and so on. Students enrolled in the course will prepare memoranda on points of law at issue in some of these cases, and, as the timing dictates, will help to do legal research and draft amicus briefs based on their research. The course will include a clinical component and a reading seminar focusing on the text of the cases themselves and their precedents. Permission of instructor required. Enrollment limited. H.H. Koh, J.M. Freiman, and M.J. Hahn.

Banking Law and Regulation (20346). 2 or 3 units. This course will begin by defining the roles that banks and other financial intermediaries play in the economy. It will consider the claim that a specialized set of regulations governing the activities of financial intermediaries is justified by the special role that banks occupy in society. In that context a variety of theoretical arguments about banking regulation will be considered. The course will then examine each of the major laws that govern banking activities against the background of the various regulatory theories discussed. Topics will include entry restrictions, growth and expansion of bank activities, regulation of the business of banking, expansion through the bank holding-company structure, the financial holding-company structure, branch banking, interstate banking, and regulation of failing or failed banks. Attention will be paid to the regulation of close substitutes for banks, particularly mutual funds and investment banking, and to international banking. Self-scheduled examination. J.R. Macey.

Business Organizations (20356). 3 or 4 units. This course will provide an introduction to the law that governs business organizations. The course begins with the law of agency and fiduciary duties, which provides the backdrop for discussion of partnerships and then large, publicly traded corporations. The class will then explore limited liability, the ultra vires doctrine, and problems of incorporation, which when taken together might loosely be considered “the corporation and its dealings with outsiders.” There will be further exploration of board structure, shareholder voting rules, the fiduciary duties of managers, corporate control transactions (including takeovers), and the basics of securities exchange market integrity, which when taken together might loosely be considered “the corporation and the regulation of insiders.” The class will be designed to provide students with a foundation in the common law and state statutory systems that regulate business organizations as well as the important issues of policy that surround this regulation. It will be particularly appropriate for students who intend to take related classes, such as securities regulation, corporate finance, corporate tax, and more specialized offerings. However, students interested in only a basic understanding ought not be discouraged as the course will focus primarily on fundamentals. Self-scheduled examination. R. Brooks.

Business Organizations (20275). 4 units. A general introduction to the role and structure of organizational law. Although broadly held business corporations will be the principal focus of the course, attention will also be paid to other modes of organizing both commercial and noncommercial enterprise. Scheduled examination. H. Hansmann.

Capital Punishment: Seminar in Advocacy (20251). 4 units (2 fall, 2 spring), credit/fail. This course is limited to students who have already taken Capital Punishment: Race, Poverty, and Disadvantage, or will be taking it in spring 2005. Students will work in teams on capital cases in Connecticut with members of the Capital Trial Unit of the Connecticut Public Defender Office doing such things as researching and analyzing issues, participating in investigations, and observing court proceedings. Students must complete a substantial writing assignment, such as a portion of a motion, brief, or memorandum of law. Permission of instructor required. Enrollment limited to twelve. S.B. Bright.

Church and State: Advanced Topics in Constitutional Law (20362). 3 units. This course will explore, from historical, theoretical, and comparative perspectives, a range of problems in the interaction of church and state, focusing on the United States. Issues will include the classic European and English views of the church-state problem; the Framers’ various conceptions of the relationship; nineteenth-century nonsectarianism and anti-Catholicism; modern secularism; and contemporary evangelicalism. Relevant comparisons from European, Middle Eastern, African, and Asian experiences. Self-scheduled examination with limited paper option. N. Feldman.

*Community and Economic Development (20023). 3 units, credit/fail. A multidisciplinary workshop involving students from the Schools of Law, Management, Divinity, Forestry & Environmental Studies, Public Health, and Architecture. Under the supervision of faculty and members of the local bar, participants will work on behalf of nonprofit organizations and small businesses to promote job creation, neighborhood revitalization, low-income housing, access to capital and credit, and social service delivery in the New Haven area. The clinic will emphasize a nonadversarial, transactional approach to problem solving. As legal, financial, architectural, and social policy advisers, participants will research legal issues, facilitate negotiations, draft contracts, incorporate organizations, complete loan and grant applications, develop financial analyses, and draft architectural plans, among other tasks. Class topics will include professional responsibility, real estate finance, low-income housing policy, community development corporations and financial institutions, neighborhood planning, public school reform, and urban economic policy. Enrollment limited to twenty. Also MGT 6944. R.A. Solomon and P.D. Hamilton.

Community Lawyering (20022). 3 units, credit/fail. Community lawyering fuses traditional civil legal services representation with collaborative, community-based strategies for solving community problems and empowering clients. The Community Lawyering Clinic will offer students the opportunity to represent low-income clients in an extraordinarily wide range of cases, including immigration, domestic violence, family law (divorce, child custody, visitation, and support), HIV/AIDS law, benefits, landlord-tenant law, consumer fraud, special education, and employment law. The clinic is committed to the community lawyering philosophy. Through partnerships with local nonprofit organizations, students will meet clients at outreach sites in New Haven. Students will also develop and coordinate such community initiatives for socio-legal change as impact litigation, education, community-based representation, and policy advocacy. Enrollment limited. R.A. Solomon and C.L. Lucht.

Community Legal Education Radio Show (20129). 1 unit, credit/fail. The Community Legal Education Radio Show (“Law Talk”) is a weekly radio program discussing legal issues important to the New Haven community, broadcast on 94.3 WYBC-AM, a Yale-affiliated and highly rated commercial station in New Haven, every Sunday at 7 p.m. The show is typical talk-show format, with two law student hosts asking questions of and taking calls for several expert guests who are generally practicing attorneys, professors, or local or state officials. Members of “Law Talk” meet at least weekly to discuss potential topics and guests. Producers for a particular show will contact, book, and confirm guests; discuss the topics with them; read through some literature on the subjects; prepare questions for use by the show’s hosts; and review them with the guests. Hosts participate in this process, but spend several hours before each show with the producers, getting “up to speed” on the topic and guests. Finally, in addition to their duties as producers, the executive producers schedule meetings and deal with publicity, as well as with WYBC and the Law School administration. To receive 1 credit, participants should spend an average of five hours a week on the show. Because only a limited number of participants can be involved in any particular show, the requirement is seventy hours for the term. R.A. Solomon.
Complex Federal Litigation (20298). 2 or 3 units, credit/fail. Limited opportunities exist for self-motivated and independent students to work on federal cases. Students will continue an initiative to address conditions of confinement experienced by female inmates housed at the federal correctional facility in Danbury, Connecticut. The initiative focuses on issues of sexual assault and medical care. Enrollment limited to eight. B. Dignam, R.S. Sullivan, Jr., and H.V. Zonana.

Constitutional Change in the Islamic World (20363). 2 units. This course will explore Islamic constitutional phenomena and the documents and theories associated with them from the Constitution of Medina, framed in the Prophet's lifetime, to the constitutional drafting processes in contemporary Iraq. Notwithstanding enormous temporal and regional variation, some common themes of constitutionalism in the Islamic world can arguably be determined. The course will examine the mechanisms whereby Islamic legal and constitutional ideas, from monarchy to democracy, have been integrated and transformed in Islamic countries; and how modernity and colonialism have been refracted in constitutional practice in the Islamic world. Self-scheduled examination with limited paper option. N. Feldman.

Contemporary Legal Issues in Africa (20120). 1 unit, credit/fail. This reading group will meet once a week at lunchtime to discuss current events in Africa, with special emphasis on events that raise issues of international law. Each student will be given responsibility for a particular region of Africa and will report weekly on the important events in that region. One unit of credit is available for participants. Students who wish to do more extensive research into the legal issues in their particular region can make special arrangements for additional study, including the awarding of Supervised Analytic Writing credit. It is possible to take the course more than once. No previous background is assumed, only a general interest in increasing awareness of what is currently going on in Africa. L. Brilmayer and D. Wade.

Corporate Finance (20208). 3 units. This course will introduce students to some of the fundamentals of financial economics. Topics will include net present values, the capital asset pricing model, the efficient capital market hypotheses, event studies, and option theory. Students will need to learn to use electronic spreadsheet software such as Excel. Grades will be based on weekly computer problem sets and on an open-book final examination. Scheduled examination. I. Ayres.

Corporate Taxation (20331). 3 units. The United States has a “classical,” or two-level, corporate tax system, which aims to tax corporate income twice: once when earned at the corporate level and again when distributed to individual shareholders. This corporate “double tax” is doubly problematic, because its policy rationale is thin and its implementation is tricky. This course will focus on both the policy and the technical aspects of taxing corporations. On the policy side, current and past proposals to integrate the corporate tax with the individual income tax will be considered. On the technical side, the class will consider the tax problems that arise when corporations engage in transactions with their shareholders or with other corporations, including contributions, distributions, and reorganizations. Prerequisite: Federal Income Taxation. Self-scheduled examination. A.L. Alstott.

Corruption, Economic Development, and Democracy (20098). 2 or 3 units. A seminar on the link between political and bureaucratic institutions on the one hand, and economic development on the other. A particular focus will be the impact of corruption on development and the establishment of democratic government. Paper (2 or 3 units) or self-scheduled examination (2 units). Enrollment limited to fifteen. Also PLSC 714a. S. Rose-Ackerman.

[The] Criminal Jury (20211). 3 units. This seminar will consider in depth the nature and function of the criminal jury and recent efforts at reform. Among the topics to be considered are the jury’s history; its constitutional basis; its selection, composition, and deliberations; the jury’s inscrutability; and the pressures imposed on the institution by complex and/or highly publicized trials. Scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited. A.S. Goldstein.

Criminal Law and Administration (20061). 4 units. This course will relate the general doctrines of criminal liability to the moral and social problems of crime. The definitions of crimes against the person and against property (as they are at present and as they might be) are considered in the light of the purposes of punishment and of the role of the criminal justice system, including police and correctional agencies, in influencing behavior and protecting the community. Scheduled examination. D. M. Kahan.

Criminal Procedure I (20270). 3 units. This course will cover the law regulating interrogation of suspects, witnesses, and defendants; bail; preliminary hearings; grand jury proceedings; the right to effective assistance of counsel; the right to trial by jury; discovery; guilty pleas; various trial procedures; and double jeopardy. Little attention is paid to the Fourth Amendment. Students will be required to prepare one-page written analyses of two or three problems during the term. Scheduled examination. S.B. Duke.

Criminal Sentencing: Individual Research (20365). Units to be arranged. A limited number of students will be accepted for research and writing on the federal sentencing system. Preference may be given to projects that examine the troubled relationships between the Judiciary, the Department of Justice, the Congress, and the Sentencing Commission. Substantial Paper or Supervised Analytic Writing credit available with permission of instructor. D.J. Freed.

Cultural Evolution and Memetics (20375). 2 units. Memetics holds that culture evolves through the competition of bits of culture, called memes, for space in human memory and belief. This course will consider the strengths and weaknesses of memetic theories of culture, as well as alternative accounts of cultural evolution. Paper required. Enrollment limited to fifteen. J.M. Balkin.
Designing Public Institutions: Governing Without Employees (20049). 4 units (2 fall, 2 spring). This course will explore institutional design within the context of some of the major forces acting on the nation state, particularly the United States. Today’s federal civilian service is one-third smaller in relation to the overall population of the U.S. than it was fifty years ago. Yet few would doubt that during those same decades the federal government has taken on massive new responsibilities. How is government administered without administrators? “Contracting out” and “devolution” are key, but incomplete answers. This seminar will explore both, as well as other techniques for governing without employees and for implementing a “small government.” The class will consider the attendant policy mantras of small government: “downsizing,” “deregulating,” “privatizing,” and “reengineering.” The focus will be not just on explaining the current configuration of American-style public administration but, more importantly, on the effects that a strong commitment to small government has on the design and efficacy of public programs. The fall term will be devoted to readings and class discussion. Each student must have developed a suitable paper topic by the end of the term. Papers in this course will generally satisfy either the Substantial Paper or the Supervised Analytic Writing requirement. The spring term will be devoted to research and writing under intensive supervision. Draft papers will be circulated and discussed in class and all papers must be completed by the last day of the spring-term examination period. This is a full-year course. Students may not receive credit for either term independently. Enrollment limited. M.J. Graetz and J.L. Mashaw.

Empire, Tolerance, and Law: Research Seminar (20372). 2 or 3 units. Students will be required to research and write papers exploring, from a comparative, historical, or conceptual perspective, the relationship between “tolerance” and the rise and decline of empires, from the pre-modern era to post-Enlightenment Europe to the United States and China today. Areas of focus will include the structures and multiple faces of imperialism; competing approaches to ethnicity and “culture”; miscegenation; and the role of civic and legal institutions in shaping collective identity. Supervised Analytic Writing or Substantial Paper credit available. Paper required. Permission of instructor required. A. Chua.

Environmental Law and Policy (20348). 3 units. Introduction to the legal requirements and policy underpinnings of the basic U.S. environmental laws, including the Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act, and various statutes governing waste, food safety, and toxic substances. This course will examine and evaluate current approaches to pollution control and resource management as well as the “next generation” of regulatory strategies, including economic incentives and other market mechanisms, voluntary emissions reductions, regulatory negotiation, and information disclosure requirements. Mechanisms for addressing environmental issues at the local, regional, and global levels will also be considered. Scheduled examination. Also F&ES 861a. D.C. Esty.
Environmental Protection Clinic (20316). 3 units, credit/fail. A clinical seminar in which students will be engaged with actual environmental law or policy problems on behalf of client organizations (environmental groups, government agencies, international bodies, etc.). The class will meet weekly, and students will work eight to ten hours per week in interdisciplinary groups (with students from the School of Forestry & Environmental Studies and other departments or schools at Yale) on projects with a specific legal or policy product (e.g., draft legislation or regulations, hearing testimony, analytic studies, policy proposals) to be produced by the end of the term. Students may propose projects and client organizations, subject to approval by the instructor. Enrollment limited. Also F&ES 864a. D.S. Bryk.

*Ethics in the Practice of Law (20239). 3 units. This course will focus on one facet of professional ethics—the representation of clients, with particular emphasis upon the relationship between zealous advocacy and the public interest. Every kind of practice generates serious tensions among attorneys’ obligations to their clients, their own moral and social commitments, obligations to third parties (including adversaries), and responsibilities as officers of the court and citizens of the larger community. A second and related concern of the course will be to examine the practice of law in the public interest, whether as lawyers in firms through pro bono activities or as attorneys in public interest organizations. An effort will be made to understand the continuities and distinctions among various kinds of practices in coming to grips with the tensions described above. Students who plan to practice in law firms will be encouraged and assisted in developing pro bono projects to take with them to their firms. Students who are seeking jobs in public interest organizations will be expected to assist in cases or projects developed by public interest organizations. A final paper is required and can be co-authored. Enrollment limited to twenty-four. D.E. Curtis and D.J. Cantrell.

European Union Law (20282). 3 units. This course will take up a set of generic questions about how new legal systems emerge and evolve, focusing on the European Union. Topics include the “new constitutionalism” in Europe; the sources and consequences of the “constitutionalization” of the Treaty of Rome; the relationship between national and the EU legal orders; litigating and adjudicating EU law in national courts; the development of precedent; the evolution of judicial rule making in three legal domains (free movement of goods, sex equality, and environmental protection); and the impact of the legal system on other processes associated with European integration, such as trade, market regulation, and policy making at both the national and supranational levels. Self-scheduled examination and several short discussion papers. A. Stone Sweet.

Federal Courts in a Federal System (20366). 4 units. The idea of “the federal courts” is central to the constitutional political system of the United States. The past decades have been complex and fascinating ones for anyone interested in “the federal courts,” as diverse claims have been made about the role these courts are to play. Questions of how to implement national “sovereignty” and to respect state “sovereignty” lace the materials to be examined, as the federal court system is considered in its relation to Congress, the presidency, the state courts, and federal Indian tribes. Beneath the sometimes dry discussions of jurisdictional rules and doctrines of comity lie conflicts about issues such as race, abortion, Indian tribal rights, and gender. In addition to considering the political and historical context of the doctrinal developments, the course will examine the institutional structures that have evolved in the federal courts, as well as current questions about the size and shape of the federal courts, the allocation of work among state, tribal, and federal courts and among the different kinds of federal judges now in the federal system, and the effects of social and demographic categories on the processes of federal adjudication. The class will also occasionally consider concepts of federalism comparatively. Class participation will be part of the final grade. Self-scheduled examination. No credit/fail option. J. Resnik.
Federal Income Taxation (20222). 4 units. An introductory course on the federal income taxation of individuals and businesses. The course will provide an overview of the basic legal doctrine and will emphasize statutory interpretation and a variety of income tax policy issues. The class will consider the role of the courts, the Congress, and the IRS in making tax law and tax policy and will apply (and question) the traditional tax policy criteria of fairness, efficiency, and administrability. Topics will include fringe benefits, business expenses, the interest deduction, the taxation of the family, and capital gains. No prerequisites. Scheduled examination. Enrollment limited. M.J. Graetz.

Federal Indian Law. (20038). 2 or 3 units. This course will examine a number of central issues of contemporary law affecting American Indians. It will focus on the legal interrelationships among tribal, state, and federal governments and on the authority of the United States, the states, and the tribes to regulate conduct, tax activities, or punish crimes by Indians and non-Indians on Indian reservations and lands. It will also consider issues of economic development for Indians, including Indians’ rights to hunt and fish, to own and use natural resources—land, water, and minerals—and to operate gaming enterprises. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. R.P. Chambers.

History of the Common Law: Procedure and Institutions (20010). 3 units. An introduction to the historical origins of Anglo-American law, with particular emphasis on the development of criminal and civil procedure in the centuries before the American Revolution. Topics: (1) the jury system—medieval origins and European alternatives, separation of grand and petty juries, changes in the functions and composition of the jury from medieval to modern times, the varieties of jury control; (2) civil justice—the forms of action and the pleading system; attorneys, bar, and bench; the regular and itinerant courts; legal education, law reporting, and the legal treatise; the evolution of contract law; Chancery, the trust, equitable procedure and remedies; the deterioration of Chancery procedure and the fusion of law and equity; the codification movement; historical perspectives on the scope of the right to civil jury trial under the Seventh Amendment; (3) criminal justice—medieval criminal procedure; presentment and indictment; the recasting of criminal procedure in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries; the officialization of prosecution and policing; Star Chamber; defense counsel and the rise of the adversary system in the eighteenth century; the privilege against self-incrimination; the law of evidence; criminal sanctions. Duplicated materials, consisting of original historical sources and extracts from scholarly writing. Self-scheduled examination. J.H. Langbein.

Human Rights Workshop: Current Issues and Events (20134). 1 unit, credit/fail. Conducted in workshop format and led by Professor Paul Kahn, Director of the Orville H. Schell, Jr. Center for International Human Rights, the course will discuss recent writings in the field, presentations from outside guests and participants, and newsworthy events in the human rights arena. P.W. Kahn.
Insurance and Public Policy (20367). 2 units. This course will address the wide range of public policy issues implicating compensation insurance for those who suffer losses. The course will first address the principles of insurance, and insurance techniques that reduce societal and personal risks. It will then apply these principles to the range of insurance law issues. Paper required. G.L. Priest.

International Environmental Law and Policy (20326). 3 units. An introduction to international environmental law and policy. After reviewing the rise of the international environmental agenda, the course will concentrate on how societies have responded to global-scale environmental challenges, including deforestation, biodiversity loss, desertification, climate change, ozone depletion, toxic substances, and the loss of living marine resources. The principal response to date has been in the area of international environmental law and policy, where a major new field of law and diplomacy has opened up and new multilateral institutions have been created. This first attempt at global environmental governance will be surveyed and critically evaluated. Alternatives will be examined. This course will follow the F&ES calendar. Also F&ES 870a. Self-scheduled examination. Instructor to be announced.

International Tribunals: Theory and Practice (20368). 3 units. An overview of the international judicial system with emphasis on ongoing litigation. Projects will involve study of specific contemporary cases. Paper required. L. Brilmayer.

Introduction to Intellectual Property (20369). 3 units. This course will introduce the major regimes of intellectual property, beginning with a discussion of the manner in which intellectual property rights are similar to, and different from, rights in tangible property. The course will then consider the four major intellectual property regimes in the following order: trade secrecy, patents, copyright, and trademark. Throughout the course, students will be asked to compare and contrast the protection provided by the disparate regimes and to consider the policy advantages and disadvantages of intellectual property rights. Particular consideration will be given to the area of software, which is covered by both patent law and copyright law. Evaluation will be based on a final examination and class participation. Scheduled examination. A.K. Rai.

Justice (20104). 4 units. An examination of contemporary theories, together with an effort to assess their practical implications. Authors this year will include Peter Singer, Richard Posner, John Rawls, Robert Nozick, Michael Walzer, Marian Young, and Roberto Unger. Topics: animal rights, the status of children and the principles of educational policy, the relation of market justice to distributive justice, the status of affirmative action. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. Also PLSC 553a. B. Ackerman.

Landlord/Tenant Law (20004). 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical seminar will provide legal assistance, under the supervision of clinical faculty, to low-income tenants facing eviction in the New Haven Housing Court. Topics to be covered in discussions and class materials will include the substantive law of landlord-tenant relations; ethical issues arising in the representation of clients; social and housing policy; and the development of lawyering skills, particularly in interviewing, litigation, negotiation, and mediation. Weekly class sessions and supervision sessions, plus eight to twelve hours per week of casework. Enrollment limited to six to eight. F.X. Dineen and J.L. Pottenger, Jr.

Law and Bioterrorism (20383). 2 units. This course will begin with an examination of the history of law and bioterrorism, and then will turn to current regulatory frameworks, including federal law relating to bioterrorism crimes, non-criminal regulatory approaches, and civil liability for consequences of bioterrorism. The issues and areas of law to be addressed are broad — ranging from public health, to environmental policy and law, to the Federal Tort Claims Act, to federal labor law, to international law, to private tort and other actions. The relationships among and roles played by the federal, state, and local governments in this country will be examined, as will approaches used by other countries. Finally, the class will consider possible new legal frameworks for addressing the threat of bioterrorism. Paper required. This course will follow the EPH calendar. Also EHS 576a. V.V. Sutton.

Law and Economics: Directed Research (20371). 1 to 4 units. In choosing among candidates for directed research, preference will be given to empirical research projects that can most benefit from the instructor's input. Paper required. Permission of instructor required. J.J. Donohue.

Law and Economics: Directed Research and Writing. (20159). 1 to 3 units. This course will be an opportunity for a few students to write a serious paper in law and economics (broadly defined) with an explicit goal of ultimate publication. Technical sophistication and a preexisting knowledge of economics are not prerequisites. Theoretical or empirical proposals are welcomed. The course will also serve as an introduction to the publishing process for students interested in joining the legal academy. Permission of instructor required. I. Ayres.

Law, Economics, and Organization (20036). 1 unit, credit/fail. This seminar will meet jointly with the Law, Economics, and Organization Workshop, an interdisciplinary faculty workshop that brings to Yale Law School scholars, generally from other universities, who present papers based on their current research. The topics will involve a broad range of issues of general legal and social science interest. Students registering for the seminar and participating in the workshop will receive one unit of ungraded credit per term. Neither Substantial Paper nor Supervised Analytic Writing credit will be available through the seminar. Short papers will be required during the term. I. Ayres, R. Brooks, A. Schwartz, and H.E. Smith.

Laws of War (20370). 2 units. A research seminar on the Hague and Geneva Conventions, as well as international criminal law in situations of international conflict. Paper required. Permission of instructor required. L. Brilmayer.
Lawyering Ethics (2014). 3 units, credit/fail. This is a clinical course in which students participate in the disciplinary process against lawyers charged with violating ethical obligations to clients. Goals include understanding current systems and considering their transformations, as well as thinking about how legal education should engage with the ethical issues facing lawyers. Students will research issues of state discipline of lawyers, including the workings of the system in Connecticut (such as which lawyers are disciplined for what kinds of infractions, at whose promoting, and with what forms of remedy). The disciplinary procedures for judges will also be investigated. Concurrently, students will represent before bar grievance panels clients who have complained about their lawyers and whose complaints have been found to have probable cause. Enrollment limited to ten. D.E. Curtis and D.J. Cantrell.

Legal Assistance (2010). 3 units, credit/fail. A clinical seminar, using classroom, field work, and simulation experiences in the general area of legal assistance for the poor. Students will work eight to twelve hours per week in a local legal aid office and will attend weekly classroom sessions. The seminar will be practice-oriented, moving from developing solutions for specific client problems to general discussions of landlord-tenant, consumer, domestic relations, welfare, and other legal subjects of special concern to the urban poor, as well as issues of broader social policy. The seminar will also focus on the development of professional responsibility and lawyering skills, such as interviewing, negotiating, counseling, drafting, and litigation. A few placements for criminal defense work in state court will also be available. Enrollment limited to eight. F.X. Dineen.

Legal Practicum (2008). ½ or 1 unit (at the discretion of the instructor), credit/fail. Each student enrolled in this independent writing seminar will be required to prepare a five- to fifteen-page essay that reflectively evaluates how her or his experiences in legal employment or other practical professional training, acquired during the immediately prior summer recess, have influenced her or his understanding of the legal system, the legal profession, or other aspects of legal culture. Permission of instructor required. B.J. Safriet.

Legislative Advocacy Clinic (2035). 3 units, credit/fail. A two-term clinical seminar designed to give students an opportunity to participate in the state legislative process by advancing — and defending — the interests of Connecticut public interest organizations (including other LSO clinics, and their clients). The clinic’s work will include both affirmative legislative initiatives and defensive efforts to respond to proposed legislation deemed inimical to the interests of its clients. The clinic will also serve as a legislative liaison for other LSO clinics, keeping them informed of legislative developments affecting their clients’ interests. Issues of ethics and professional responsibility for lawyers working in the legislative arena will be an important focus of this clinic. In the fall term, students will participate in training sessions led by some of Connecticut’s most experienced lobbyists, meet with state legislators, and work with their client organizations to develop a legislative agenda. Once issues have been chosen for action, students will research the subject, work with other client organizations to help draft legislation, and meet with legislators. In the spring, students will work in partnership with their client organization to meet with legislators to get their bills introduced, develop oral and written testimony in support thereof, identify other witnesses, shepherd their bills through the committee process, and work to get them adopted. During the legislative session, students will also monitor other proposed legislation that might affect the clinic’s clients. To allow all students to participate in both the training/issue development and direct action aspects of the clinic’s work, priority will be given to students willing to commit to participating for two terms. Enrollment limited. J.L. Pottenger, Jr., S.D. Geballe, E. Scalettar, and C.C. Staples.

Legislative and Popular Constitutionalism (20373). 2 units. This seminar will study American constitutionalism as it is expressed in legislative and popular fora. The class will survey the rapidly growing body of literature in law, political science, and history that explores the life of the Constitution outside the courts. The class will address such topics as the relation between political mobilization and constitutional meaning; the relation between judicial interpretation and constitutional culture; judicial and legislative enforcement of the Constitution; and the structural significance of the enforcement clauses of the Reconstruction Amendments. Paper required. Enrollment limited. R.C. Post and R. Siegel.

Local Government Law (20374). 3 units. With an increasing trend toward devolution, many important public policy areas have become impossible to understand without an appreciation of institutions of state and local government. This is true of environmental regulation, welfare law, health care, civil rights, workplace safety, and many more areas. Moreover, many policy areas traditionally within the control of state and local governments — education, family law, public health, land use planning, transportation, important aspects of taxation, etc. — have become increasingly complex and contentious. These issues often pit local governments against the federal government, their states, or other local governments; the winner often is the side that most effectively manipulates the rules delineating the respective powers of state and local governments. This course will explore the structures and powers of state and local governments and test the implications of contrasting visions of local governments: as creatures of their states, as social and political communities, and as economic entities. The final month of the course then will apply these principles to study two of the most important contemporary issues in education law: education reform (including school financing and the No Child Left Behind Act) and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). Students will write several reaction papers throughout the term and then will have the option of a term paper or a self-scheduled, twenty-four-hour take-home examination. D.A. Super.
Lowenstein International Human Rights Clinic (20188). 3 units, credit/fail. Students will work on a variety of human rights projects, generally in support of current advocacy efforts of human rights organizations. Projects are designed to give students practical experience with the range of activities in which lawyers engage to promote respect for human rights; to help students build the knowledge and skills necessary to be effective human rights lawyers; and to integrate the theory and practice of human rights. Class sessions will provide an overview of basic human rights principles and their application, and instruction in and development of human rights research and writing skills. Professor Kahn will join sessions that address issues—legal, strategic, ethical, and theoretical—raised by project work. The clinic will have one or more student directors. Enrollment limited to eighteen. J.J. Silk.

Medicine, Ethics, and the Law (20097). 3 units. A wide range of issues in contemporary medicine challenges common ethical values in ways that appear to invite new legal regulatory responses. There are scientific developments—such as new possibilities for genetic manipulations, for extending the life span so that most people will die only after prolonged disability, for extending viability earlier in fetal development with attendant risks of significant lifelong disability. There are organizational changes in the delivery of medical care that promote rationing of care in the service of goals inconsistent with individual patient welfare. Certain research practices also appear inconsistent with individual patient welfare. There are exercises of physicians’ authority, such as discretion to withhold therapies regarded by physicians as “futile,” which appear inconsistent with values of patient autonomy or of legislative restrictions on physicians’ authority to hasten death. This course will examine such issues, evaluate the individual and social ethical questions raised by them, and explore the justification for undoing such customary legal regulations and/or adding new ones. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. R.A. Burt.

Negotiated Mergers and Acquisitions (20237). 2 units. This course examines the issues and problems that confront lawyers and their clients in business acquisition transactions involving the acquisition of closely held entities. Topics to be considered include structuring the deal, allocating liabilities and risks of the business being acquired, valuation of the business and pricing the deal, the duties of directors and controlling shareholders to minority shareholders and other investors, and appraisal rights of dissenting shareholders. Students will engage in a negotiation exercise involving the negotiation, drafting, and interpretation of selected provisions of an acquisition agreement. Prerequisite: Business Organizations (may be taken concurrently) or equivalent. Self-scheduled examination. J.T. Hirschoff.

Nonprofit Organizations Clinic (20051). 1 or 2 units, credit/fail. This clinical workshop will serve the needs of nonprofit organizations, nascent and established, that require help in the process of organization and incorporation, in obtaining tax exemption, and solving ongoing legal problems—organizations that cannot afford to retain private counsel. The class will meet as a group five or six times during the term. Also MGT 695a. J.G. Simon, L.N. Davis, and B.B. Lindsay.

Patent Law (20319). 3 units. This course will provide an introduction to patent law and policy, with an emphasis on the central elements of this branch of intellectual property. These include patentable subject matter, utility, statutory bars to patentability, novelty, nonobviousness, disclosure and enablement, infringement, defenses, remedies, and the examination process. The course will also examine the implications of and justifications for protecting intellectual property generally, and patents in particular. No technical background will be assumed. Scheduled examination. H.E. Smith.

Policy-Oriented Jurisprudence (20279). 1 unit, credit/fail. This course will examine the development of the New Haven School of Jurisprudence, largely through the writings of Harold D. Lasswell and Myres S. McDougal as well as through some contemporary applications. The course will meet six times during the term. W. M. Reisman and A. R. Willard.

*[The] Politics, Law, and Economics of Airline Deregulation (20376). 2 units. This course will look in detail at the economics of the airline industry and how they have affected the political process, legal changes, and economic justification that brought about airline deregulation. The class will then examine how airline deregulation has worked in practice in the U. S., including its economic surprises, the political pressures to which it has been subject, and the legal and regulatory responses to those surprises and pressures. Class participation and a paper on a topic approved by the instructor will be required. Enrollment limited. M. E. Levine.

Problems in Evidence (20338). 2 or 3 units. This seminar will focus on the allocation of functions between judge and jury, the problem of expert and scientific evidence, evidentiary privileges, and shortcuts to proof (such as judicial notice, presumptions, and burden of proof). The seminar will include a brief historical survey of the law of evidence and occasional forays into comparative systems of proof. The course in Evidence is not a prerequisite. Scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited to sixteen. M. R. Damaška and S. B. Duke.

Professional Responsibility and the Legal Profession (20012). 3 units. Comprehensive and critical coverage of the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Code of Professional Responsibility, including proposals for change. Also considered will be major problems currently facing the legal profession, including multidisciplinary practice (MDP), unauthorized practice of law by lay competitors of lawyers, restrictions on interstate law practice, funding of legal aid, the risks and benefits of increased specialization by individual lawyers, taking advantage of new technologies, and lawyer quality-of-life problems from long workdays and high billable hours requirements. Scheduled examination. Q. Johnstone.
Property (20377). 4 units. This course will begin with an inquiry into a fundamental question of human civilization: how members of a group should allocate formal or informal entitlements to scarce resources such as wild animals, labor, ideas, water, and land. Thereafter, land will become our exclusive focus. Topics will include limitations on the rights of landowners to exclude others; estates in land; co-ownership; landlord-tenant law and the slum-housing problem; nuisance law; easements and covenants as means to cooperation among neighbors; and zoning, eminent domain, and other tools of public land-use regulation. Scheduled examination. R.C. Ellickson.

Property: Individual Research (20094). 3 units. The instructor will separately supervise up to six students who wish to write a paper on a property topic. The paper may be used to satisfy the Substantial Paper or Supervised Analytic Writing requirement. Paper required. Enrollment limited to six. R.C. Ellickson.

Proportionality Balancing and Global Constitutionalism (20384). 2 or 3 units. A seminar in comparative law focusing on the emergence and global diffusion of proportionality balancing as a dominant technique of rights adjudication. The class will read and discuss a combination of (1) legal theory, (2) social science, and (3) case law drawn from a wide range of legal systems, including Canada, the European Union, Germany, the United States, and the WTO. To what extent is proportionality balancing required by modern rights provisions? Is there an underlying social or political logic to least-means standards? Why does proportionality balancing make Americans so uncomfortable? Term paper and several short discussion papers. If students take the course as a 3-unit option, a major paper will be required. Permission of instructor required. A. Stone Sweet.

Prosecution Externship (20139). 2 or 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical externship will assist state or federal prosecutors with their responsibilities, both before and at trial. Placements are available in New Haven and surrounding cities and in a variety of fields, including misdemeanors, felonies, or specialized areas such as career criminal, traffic, or appellate work. Weekly sessions will range from discussions of assigned readings to field trips to prisons, police laboratories, etc. Students will be required to keep journals and time records. Placements at the U.S. Attorney’s Office must be arranged at least four months in advance, to allow time for security clearance procedures. Applications and interviews for the State’s Attorney placements will take place during the first week of the term. Although enrollment is limited and permission of the instructor is required, timing and the involvement of outside agencies remove this clinic from the usual sign-up process for limited enrollment courses. J. L. Pottenger, Jr., and J. A. Meyer.

[The] Public and the Private in High Technology: Seminar (20378). 2 units. One of the major issues for any legal regime is whether it relies on private property rights or on some form of public domain. This seminar will consider this issue with respect to high-technology industries. High-technology industries are characterized by two phenomena: first, high value associated with intangibles and, second, considerable (and continuing) change. Within these industries, should property rights be the norm? Do rights in tangible property differ in important ways from rights in intangible property? What are the relevant considerations, and how do they apply in specific areas of technology? This seminar will begin with some of the canonical readings on property rights versus the public domain, and will then focus on specific salient questions. For example, should we prefer proprietary standards to open ones? Should the government grant broad patent rights in basic scientific research? Are there good reasons to choose a regime that fosters open source software, and perhaps limits intellectual property rights in software? Should the telecommunications spectrum be allocated through property rights? Paper required. Enrollment limited to twenty. A. K. Rai.

Public Order of the World Community: A Contemporary International Law I (20040). 4 units. This introduction to contemporary international law will study the role of authority in the decision-making processes of the world community, at the constitutive level where international law is made and applied and where the indispensable institutions for making decisions are established and maintained, as well as in the various sectors of the public order that is established. Consideration will be given to formal as well as operational prescriptions and practice with regard to the participants in this system (states, intergovernmental and nongovernmental organizations, political parties, pressure groups, multinational enterprises, other private associations, private armies and gangs, and individuals); the formal and informal arenas of interaction; the allocation of control over and regulation of the resources of the planet; the protection of people and the regulation of nationality; and the allocation among states of jurisdiction to make and apply law. In contrast to more traditional approaches, which try to ignore the role of power in this system, that role will be candidly acknowledged, and the problems and opportunities it presents will be explored. Special attention will be given to (1) theory; (2) the establishment, transformation, and termination of actors; (3) control of access to and regulation of resources, including environmental prescriptions; and (4) nationality and human rights. Scheduled examination or paper option. W. M. Reisman.

Regulating Love, Sex, and Marriage: Seminar (20379). 3 units. The current controversy about state recognition of same-sex marriage implicates broader issues of the justification for any state role in regulating the entry by adults into intimate, consensual relationships. In some contexts, state criminal sanctions have been used to prohibit such relationships—for example, prostitution, pornography exchanged between willing sellers and buyers, polygamous relationships, same-sex intercourse. In other contexts, state authority has been deployed to encourage some formats for such relationships without criminally prohibiting alternative arrangements—for example, restricting marriage licenses on various grounds (no same-sex, no mixed-race, no incest, no bigamy), or providing such financial incentives as tax benefits for preferred relationships. The seminar will explore and evaluate the justifications that have been advanced, both in past times and today, for such state regulations. Paper required. Enrollment limited to twenty. R.A. Burt.

Regulation: Theory, Policy, Reality (20297). 4 units. An introduction for those who have little background in the field to the origins, nature, and consequences of using the power of government to alter and control the outcomes of economic activity. The course will address theoretical, positive, and normative questions. As a matter of theory, it will ask questions about the nature and purposes of regulation and deregulation and the institutional substitutes for regulation. As a positive matter, it will ask “What are the political forces that produce regulation and deregulation?,” “Does the Constitution significantly limit regulation?,” and “How does regulation actually work in practice?” As a normative matter it will ask “Is regulation desirable?” To assess how regulation works in practice, it will address the incentives and behavior of regulators and managers and look at the outcomes of regulatory programs. As a normative matter, this information will be used to assess the desirability of various regulatory interventions from the standpoint of the various interests affected and from the Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings: Domestic and Comparative Theory and Practice (20380). 2 to 4 units. Each student will research the representation of children in child protective proceedings in theory and practice in ten jurisdictions (a combination of American states and foreign nations). Class sessions will focus in the first half of the term on the theory and practice of representation of children in the United States and on international human rights developments in the field. The second half of the term will focus on writing, classroom presentation of research findings, and preliminary observations based upon the group’s research. Additional supervision time for research will be scheduled, probably biweekly. No prerequisites. Clinic students and students fluent in other languages are particularly welcome. Supervised Analytic Writing or Substantial Paper credit available. Paper required. Enrollment limited to fourteen. J.K. Peters.

Research Methods in International Law (20196). 1 unit, credit/fail. International legal research, whether for scholarly or professional purposes, must use materials and methods that are quite different from those encountered in domestic legal research. This workshop will examine those methods and help students develop improved techniques for international legal research using both print and electronic resources. There will be no paper or examination and grading will be credit/fail. The workshop will meet for five or six weekly two-hour sessions. W. M. Reisman, D. Wade, M. L. Cohen, A. R. Willard, and M. Engsberg.

[The] Resolution of Investment Disputes (20381). 2 units. Foreign direct investment has increased as a function of globalization as have disputes about investment. This seminar will examine the international law and procedure applied in the third-party resolution of international investment disputes. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. W. M. Reisman and R. Dolzer.

*[The] Rule of Law (20215). 2 units. Why has law become a business? Why is it the job of the corporate lawyer to help multinational corporations evade government regulation? This course will attempt to answer these questions in the context of a philosophy of politics. J. G. Deutsch.

Secured Transactions (20317). 3 units. This course will provide an in-depth examination of the basic structures and purposes of secured credit transactions under Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code. Discussions will focus on the essential elements of secured financing (including the creation and enforcement of security interests in various types of tangible and intangible property) as well as the longstanding debate over the essential utility and fairness of contractual security devices and the secured creditor’s priority. We will also consider the treatment of security interests in bankruptcy proceedings, and the rise of securitizations as an alternative to traditional methods of secured lending. Prior courses in commercial transactions, corporate finance, and bankruptcy, although helpful, are not required. Relevant commercial concepts will be explained as they arise. Students should expect a lively discussion of a number of important issues of current and enduring significance in the study of commercial law. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. G. E. Brunstad, Jr.

Sentencing (20345). 3 units. An examination of the history, philosophy, and administration of the criminal sentencing process. Particular attention will be devoted to: (1) how judges, apart from guidelines, exercise discretion in light of the circumstances of crimes, discretionary decisions by prosecutors, characteristics of offenders, and choices among permissible sanctions and purposes of sentencing; and (2) whether, in the wake of guidelines and mandatory penalties, fact-finding judges may continue to individualize sentences and if so, how. The course will explore different kinds of sentencing regimes—state guideline systems, international models on which sentencing standards have evolved from common law decision making or judge-imposed guidelines (Australia, Israel, England), the American Law Institute’s revision of the Model Penal Code’s sentencing provisions, and the federal sentencing guidelines. The course will also explore the relationship between sentencing guidelines and the criminal code; the interplay between principles of proportionality, severity, and parsimony; and the impact of race, class, and gender on case outcomes. Paper required. Enrollment limited. D. E. Curtis and N. Gertner.

Sociolegal Studies: Directed Research and Writing (20296). Units to be arranged. A limited number of students will be accepted for research and writing related to empirical studies of law or legal process, or topics that draw upon a law and society perspective. Students should provide a reasonably detailed proposal and obtain the instructor’s permission, which can be arranged during the fall term. May be used in fulfillment of the Substantial Paper or Supervised Analytic Writing requirement. Permission of instructor required. S. Wheeler.

Sport and the Law (20054). 3 units. This seminar will examine the growth of big-time college and professional sports teams and leagues and will study a number of the sociolegal issues that have accompanied that growth: the emergence of players’ associations, the changed balance of power between owners and players, and the increased influence of television dollars on the structure of sport. Special attention will be devoted to the NCAA and its role as a private regulatory body. Paper required. Enrollment limited to eighteen. S. Wheeler.

Workshop on Chinese Legal Reform (20135). 1 unit, credit/fail; 2 or 3 graded units with paper. This workshop will examine legal development in China today. Typically, guests from other universities in the U.S. or China will present papers or discuss current issues. P. Gewirtz, J. Hecht, and J. P. Horsley.
SPRING TERM

Courses marked with an asterisk satisfy the legal ethics/professional responsibility requirement described on page 84.

Administrative Law (21048). 4 units. A course on the behavior of administrative agencies and their interaction with courts and legislatures, emphasizing the contributions of social science. In addition to studying some of the procedural issues of primary concern to reviewing courts, the course will consider the use of economic and scientific expertise in helping to determine agency choices. The course will blend substantive policy issues with procedural questions by focusing on the regulation of health and safety in the environment, in the workplace, and in the product market. Self-scheduled examination. S. Rose-Ackerman.

Advanced Antitrust: Comparative Competition Law and Policy (21443). 3 units. For many years, the United States was exceptional in its adoption and enforcement of antitrust law. With the Treaty of Rome’s formation of the European Economic Community in 1957, a common European competition law — the now-generic name of antitrust law — emerged and a common European competition policy began to develop. As more and more economies worldwide have come to rely on market forces to allocate resources, competition laws have proliferated to guide and protect the operation of those markets. This course will consider and compare the ways that different competition-law systems address common problems. The focus will be principally on comparisons between U.S. antitrust law and policy and European Union competition law and policy. The class will address general subject areas — such as cartels, mergers, monopoly, and vertical restraints — as well as specific litigation matters that competition agencies in both jurisdictions have recently pursued. Prerequisite: the basic Antitrust course. A paper is required and must be completed by the end of the spring term. A.K. Klevorick.

Advanced Antitrust: Directed Research (21442). Units to be arranged. G.L. Priest.

Advanced Constitutional Law (21370). 3 units. How should the Constitution be interpreted, and why would a nation that calls itself self-governing permit itself to be governed by unelected judges interpreting a text enacted centuries ago? This course will address these two questions, with a focus on both doctrine and theory. Topics of special attention will include the constitutional meaning of discrimination; the Constitution and sexual privacy; interpretive theory; and fundamental differences between American and European constitutionalism. Examination or, depending on enrollment, paper option. J. Rubenfeld.

Advanced Constitutional Law: Theories of the Constitution (21273). 4 units. This course will explore key problems in American constitutional theory. Topics will include (1) theories of constitutional interpretation; (2) theories of judicial review; (3) the use of history and narrative in constitutional argument; (4) the relationships between and among constitutional adjudication, party politics, and social movements; (5) the Supreme Court’s relationship to social change; (6) the constitutional canon; and (7) the problem of constitutional evil. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. J.M. Balkin.

Advanced Jurisprudence (21444). 2 units. This course will focus on contemporary issues in analytic jurisprudence, including especially the nature of law, legal authority, the relationship between law and morality, and the nature of legal interpretation. There will be few articles to read, but the readings will be intensive. A substantial background in philosophy is desirable; more desirable still is a willingness to work hard and carefully through a demanding literature. The most crucial character traits necessary for this class are a willingness to approach the material with modesty, a desire ultimately to respect the field, and a sense that the most one can hope for is a grasp of what the important questions are and why they are important. Not a course for the fainthearted or the faux. Two short papers required. J.L. Coleman and J. Gardner.

Advanced Legal Research: Methods and Sources (21027). 3 units. An advanced exploration of the specialized methods and sources of legal research in some of the following areas: administrative law; case finding; computer-assisted research; constitutional law and history; court rules and practice materials; international law; legislative history; and statutory research. Class sessions will integrate the use of online, print, and other research sources. Notebook computer recommended. Research problems and paper required. S.B. Kauffman, R.D. Harrison, and J.B. Nann.

Advanced Legal Writing (21343). 3 units. This course will provide practice in writing legal memoranda and briefs. Students will have the opportunity to refine their legal research and analytical skills as well as their writing skills. The goal of the course will be to take students beyond basic competence to excellence in legal writing. Enrollment limited to ten. R.D. Harrison.

Advocacy for Children and Youth (21387). 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical seminar will represent children and youth in abuse, neglect, uncared for, and termination of parental rights cases in the Superior Court for Juvenile Matters and certain related matters. Class sessions will focus on substantive law, ethical issues arising from the representation of children and youth in the relevant contexts, interviewing and lawyering competencies, case discussions, and background materials relating to state intervention into the family. Class will meet weekly, with occasional supplemental sessions to be arranged. Additionally, students will attend weekly case supervision sessions. Casework will require, on average, ten to twelve hours weekly, but time demands will fluctuate over the course of the term; class time will be concentrated in the first half of the term. Enrollment limited to four. J.K. Peters.
*[The] American Legal Profession (21251). 2 or 3 units. This seminar will deal with selected aspects of the history, organization, economics, ethics, and possible futures of the legal profession in the United States. Likely topics will include the rise of law firms, bar associations, and law schools in the late nineteenth century and their evolution in the twentieth; the evolution of corporate law, personal injury, mass torts and criminal defense practices, legal aid to the poor and the “public-interest” bar; the dominant professional ethic of adversary-advocacy and its critics; the economics of the market for legal services; the role of the corporate lawyer after the Enron collapse; and the export of American lawyering models abroad. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited to forty. R.W. Gordon.

Antidiscrimination Law (21445). 4 units. This course will be a general survey of antidiscrimination law since the 1960s. The course will focus on the classifications of race, sex, and sexual orientation, but will also consider religion and disability. The class is distinguishable from an employment discrimination course in that it will range more broadly into areas of constitutional law, such as equal protection, free speech, and associational rights. Scheduled examination. Enrollment limited to eighty. K. Yoshino.

Antitrust (21068). 3 units; 4 units with paper. This course will provide an introduction to the law and economics of antitrust, including horizontal agreements, monopolization, and vertical arrangements. The course presumes students have no training in economics, but it aspires to remain of interest to students with substantial economics backgrounds. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. G.L. Priest.

Balancing Civil Liberties and National Security after September 11 (21391). 2 or 3 units, credit/fail. This course will be a hybrid between clinic and seminar, focusing primarily on civil liberties cases arising out of government policies in the aftermath of September 11, including citizen and non-citizen detentions, Fourth and Fifth Amendment issues, international human rights and humanitarian law issues, and so on. Students enrolled in the course will prepare memoranda on points of law at issue in some of these cases, and, as the timing dictates, will help to do legal research and draft amicus briefs based on their research. The course will include a clinical component and a reading seminar focusing on the text of the cases themselves and their precedents. Permission of instructor required. Enrollment limited. H.H. Koh, J.M. Freiman, and M.J. Hahn.

Bankruptcy (21204). 3 units. This course will provide a comprehensive survey of basic bankruptcy law with emphasis on the structure and process of business reorganizations under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. Discussion will focus on the basic elements of liquidations and reorganizations, as well as contemporary issues of interest and importance. Significant portions of the course will be devoted to examining the use of the reorganization laws to solve a variety of corporate ills, from product liability disasters to labor difficulties to over-leveraging. Consideration will also be given to some of the grand issues of bankruptcy including issues that arise as a result of the impact insolvent enterprises may have on their competitors, and the essential interplay between bankruptcy and other substantive bodies of law. In addition, time will be devoted to discussion of the current debate over bankruptcy reform. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. G.E. Brunstad, Jr.

[The] Book of Job and Injustice: Seminar (21123). 3 units. The Book of Job is a template for thinking about the unjustifiable sufferings inflicted during the destructive twentieth century. The Nazi Holocaust, to choose one terrible example, provokes the same questions that Job posed: “Where was God, that this was permitted to occur?” “What justice is there in the universe, that this could occur?” “In the face of this occurrence, how, if at all, can belief in the ideal of justice — faith in the goodness of the universe — be rekindled?” The seminar will consider such questions in three principal ways: by a close study of the perspectives offered in the Book of Job; by a comparison of the conceptions of justice and the possibility of its vindication treated elsewhere in the Bible; and by exploration of the ways in this century that secular institutions have addressed these questions in trying to assert norms of justice in response to such shattering events. Paper required. Enrollment limited to twenty. R.A. Burt and J.E. Ponet.

Business Organizations (21418). 4 units. An introduction to the business corporation laws affecting the rights and roles of corporate boards of directors, senior executive officers, and shareholders, with an emphasis on large, publicly traded firms. Shareholders’ economic interests are examined from the perspective of limited liability and dividend standards, expectations of liquidity or transferability of shares, and the use of debt capital as a mode of financing corporate activity. Shareholders’ limited participation rights in corporate decision making will be examined from the perspective of state and federal rules governing shareholder voting and the disclosure of corporate information and the notion of managerial expertise (e.g., as evidenced by judicial application of the “business judgment rule”). The latter part of the course will focus on directors’ and officers’ fiduciary obligations to shareholders, examining the operation of these duties in a variety of settings and transactions. Issues relating to the roles and functions assumed by corporate attorneys (with respect to their clients) and the role of business corporations within society will also be addressed. Self-scheduled examination. J.R. Macey.

Capital Punishment: Race, Poverty, and Disadvantage (21426). 3 units, credit/fail option. This course will examine the process of imposing the death penalty, with emphasis on legal representation for people who cannot afford lawyers, and racial discrimination. It will also examine prosecutor's discretion, judicial independence, and mental health issues as they relate to capital punishment. Paper required. Enrollment limited. S.B. Bright.

Capital Punishment: Seminar in Advocacy (21082). 4 units (2 fall, 2 spring), credit/fail. This course is limited to students who have already taken or are taking Capital Punishment: Race, Poverty, and Disadvantage. Students will work in teams on capital cases in Connecticut with members of the Capital Trial Unit of the Connecticut Public Defender Office doing such things as researching and analyzing issues, participating in investigations, and observing court proceedings. Students must complete a substantial writing assignment, such as a portion of a motion, brief, or memorandum of law. Enrollment limited to twelve.
S.B. Bright.

*Community and Economic Development (21016). 3 units, credit/fail. A multidisciplinary workshop involving students from the Schools of Law, Management, Divinity, Forestry & Environmental Studies, Public Health, and Architecture. Under the supervision of faculty and members of the local bar, participants will work on behalf of nonprofit organizations and small businesses to promote job creation, neighborhood revitalization, low-income housing, access to capital and credit, and social service delivery in the New Haven area. The clinic will emphasize a nonadversarial, transactional approach to problem solving. As legal, financial, architectural, and social policy advisers, participants will research legal issues, facilitate negotiations, draft contracts, incorporate organizations, complete loan and grant applications, develop financial analyses, and draft architectural plans, among other tasks. Class topics will include professional responsibility, real estate finance, low-income housing policy, community development corporations and financial institutions, neighborhood planning, public school reform, and urban economic policy. Enrollment limited to twenty.
Also MGT 694b. R.A. Solomon and P.D. Hamilton.

Community Lawyering (21015). 3 units, credit/fail. Community lawyering fuses traditional civil legal services representation with collaborative, community-based strategies for solving community problems and empowering clients.
The Community Lawyering Clinic will offer students the opportunity to represent low-income clients in an extraordinarily wide range of cases, including immigration, domestic violence, family law (divorce, child custody, visitation, and support), HIV/AIDS law, benefits, landlord-tenant law, consumer fraud, special education, and employment law. The clinic is committed to the community lawyering philosophy. Through partnerships with local nonprofit organizations, students will meet clients at outreach sites in New Haven. Students will also develop and coordinate such community initiatives for socio-legal change as impact litigation, education, community-based representation, and policy advocacy. Enrollment limited. R.A. Solomon, C.L. Lucht, M.J. Wishnie, and
S. Wizner.
Community Legal Education Radio Show (21427). 1 unit, credit/fail. The Community Legal Education Radio Show (“Law Talk”) is a weekly radio program discussing legal issues important to the New Haven community, broadcast on 94.3 WYBC-AM, a Yale-affiliated and highly rated commercial station in New Haven, every Sunday at 7 p.m. The show is typical talk-show format, with two law student hosts asking questions of and taking calls for several expert guests who are generally practicing attorneys, professors, or local or state officials. Members of “Law Talk” meet at least weekly to discuss potential topics and guests. Producers for a particular show will contact, book, and confirm guests; discuss the topics with them; read through some literature on the subjects; prepare questions for use by the show’s hosts; and review them with the guests. Hosts participate in this process, but spend several hours before each show with the producers, getting “up to speed” on the topic and guests. Finally, in addition to their duties as producers, the executive producers schedule meetings and deal with publicity, as well as with WYBC and the Law School administration. To receive 1 credit, participants should spend an average of five hours a week on the show. Because only a limited number of participants can be involved in any particular show, the requirement is seventy hours for the term. R.A. Solomon.

Comparative Law (21044). 3 units. This course will explore those aspects of foreign legal systems that enable the student, by reverse projection, to understand the distinguishing features of his or her own legal culture. The point of entry will be the exploration of issues that prompt lawyers to erect classificatory schemes to organize legal cultures around the world. Following this introductory survey, the course will focus on the contrast between the American legal system and systems of continental Europe. After an inquiry into access to courts and comparative costs of litigation, the course will analyze procedural peculiarities of nonadversarial proceedings against the background of a civil lawsuit. It will then examine the historical foundations of continental legal culture, including Roman Law and the rise and the decline of codification in Western Europe. The course will end with demonstrations of comparative legal analysis on a few substantive legal problems. Scheduled examination. M.R. Damaška.

Complex Federal Litigation (21320). 2 or 3 units, credit/fail. Open only to students who have taken the fall-term course. B. Dignam and R.S. Sullivan, Jr.

Confronting Past Abuses: The South African Experience: Research Seminar (21396). 3 units. Following the transition to majority rule, South Africa undertook to address human rights abuses perpetrated under the prior apartheid regime primarily through the work of a Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC), rather than exclusively relying on criminal accountability or ignoring the past abuses altogether. The proceedings of the TRC were extensively covered by the South African Broadcasting Corporation, and Yale Law School has assembled a completed collection of the tapes of that television coverage. The goal of this research seminar will be to assemble materials that would be made generally available for teaching and research purposes on the Law School Library Web site. The assembled material will include excerpts from the TRC videotapes, written and visual texts about the South African experience, and comparative texts about the response (or failures to respond) to past abuses in international tribunals and in other countries emerging from dictatorship to democracy, especially in Latin America and Eastern Europe. Seminar students, acting individually or in small teams, will take principal responsibility for compiling this material, which will be discussed in the seminar sessions. We will rely on the technical skills of the Law School’s Information Technology Services staff to edit the material in a format suitable for the YLS Web site. Enrollment limited to fourteen. R.A. Burt and T. Goodman.

[The] Constitution: Philosophy, History, and Law (21046). 4 units. An inquiry into the foundations of the American Constitution, at its founding and at critical moments in its historical transformation—most notably in response to the Civil War, the Great Depression, and the Civil Rights Movement. Philosophically speaking, do we still live under the Constitution founded by the Federalists, or are we inhabitants of the Second or Third or Nth Republic? Institutionally, in what ways are the patterns of modern American government similar to, and different from, those in post-Revolutionary (1787–1860) and post-Civil War (1868–1932) America? Legally, what is or was the role of constitutional law in the organization of each of these historical regimes? Through asking and answering these questions, the course will try to gain a critical perspective on the effort by the present Supreme Court to create a new constitutional regime for the twenty-first century. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. Also PLSC 842b. B. Ackerman.

[The] Constitution and the Welfare State: Affirmative Rights and Conditional Spending (21446). 2 units. This course will study the constitutional aspects of the modern American welfare state, and two of its most important constitutional problems: (1) whether the government has constitutional obligations to spend money to vindicate constitutional rights (sometimes called the problem of positive rights); and (2) whether the Constitution restricts how government may spend money to promote its policy objectives (sometimes called the problem of unconstitutional conditions). Drawing on American case law, comparative constitutional law, and scholarly literatures, we will look at these problems in a wide range of doctrinal settings, including freedom of speech and religion, criminal procedure, the right to education, rights to minimum levels of assistance, and emergency relief. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited to eighteen. J.M. Balkin and S.V. Levinson.
Constitutional Litigation Seminar (21345). 2 units. Federal constitutional adjudication from the vantage of the litigator with an emphasis on Circuit and Supreme Court practice and procedural problems, including jurisdiction, justiciability, exhaustion of remedies, immunities, abstention, and comity. Specific substantive questions of constitutional law currently before the Supreme Court are considered as well. Students will each argue two cases taken from the Supreme Court docket and will write one brief, which may be from that docket, but will likely come from the Second Circuit. Students will also join the faculty members on the bench and will, from time to time, be asked to make brief arguments on very short notice on issues raised in the class. Enrollment limited to twelve. G. Calabresi and J.M. Walker, Jr.

Contemporary Legal Issues in Africa (21139). 1 unit, credit/fail. This reading group will meet once a week at lunchtime to discuss current events in Africa, with special emphasis on events that raise issues of international law. Each student will be given responsibility for a particular region of Africa and will report weekly on the important events in that region. One unit of credit is available for participants. Students who wish to do more extensive research into the legal issues in their particular region can make special arrangements for additional study, including the awarding of Supervised Analytic Writing credit. It is possible to take this course more than once. No previous background is assumed, only a general interest in increasing awareness of what is currently going on in Africa. L. Brilmayer and D. Wade.

Convicting the Innocent (21447). 2 or 3 units. This seminar will explore the causes of and remedies for miscarriages of justice in which persons other than the perpetrators of criminal offenses are found guilty. The class will examine the processes of memory and suggestion, cognition, belief formation and resistance to change, lying and lie detection, the motivations and opportunities for fabricating evidence, impostor and unqualified experts, incompetent lawyers, poverty, and their relationships to legal rules and practices. Among the specific contexts in which the examinations will occur are allegations of child sexual abuse, stranger rapes, robberies, and murders. Some attention will be paid to the special problem of capital punishment. Students may be required to present brief analyses of one or two of these problems during the term. Papers may qualify for Supervised Analytic Writing or Substantial Paper credit. Scheduled examination or paper option. S.B. Duke.

Criminal Law and Administration (21467). 3 units. An introduction to criminal law, covering the main general principles of criminal responsibility, as well as some particular offenses and defenses. The approach will be comparative, and some material from England will be studied alongside the American common law, the Model Penal Code, and the relevant doctrines of the U.S. Constitution. The course will include some philosophical study, e.g., study of the justification of punishment, the grounds and limits of moral responsibility, and the scope of governmental authority to prevent wrongdoing by coercion. Scheduled examination. Enrollment limited to twenty-five. J. Gardner.

Criminal Law and Administration (21233). 3 units. An introduction to criminal law. Topics to be considered in detail include: the law of homicide; the law of rape; cruel and unusual punishment; the special constitutional requirements applicable to criminal laws; and the insanity defense. This course is given in several sections; it must be taken before graduation. Scheduled examination. J. Rubenfeld.

Criminal Law and Procedure: Individual Research (21014). Units to be arranged. A maximum of six students will be accepted for research and writing, with permission of the instructor, on topics to be agreed upon. Substantial Paper or Supervised Analytic Writing credit available. A.S. Goldstein.

Criminal Procedure (21448). 4 units. A general survey of criminal procedure, with particular attention to issues of constitutional law raised by criminal investigation and adjudication: search and seizure, self-incrimination, jury trial, public trial, confrontation, compulsory process, the “dual sovereignty doctrine,” and so on. Special attention will also be paid to various issues concerning legal ethics and the legal profession, via a series of guest appearances by prosecutors, private defense attorneys, public defenders, and judges. Scheduled examination. A.R. Amar.

Criminal Procedure: Research Seminar (21398). 2 or 3 units. Students will do research and writing on a topic in criminal procedure to be selected by agreement with the instructor, with the goal of producing a publishable article. Substantial Paper and Supervised Analytic Writing credit available. Not ordinarily open to third-year students. Paper required. Enrollment limited to eight. S.B. Duke.

Designing Public Institutions: Governing Without Employees (21049). 4 units (2 fall, 2 spring). A continuation of the fall-term course. May not be taken separately. [See description under Fall-Term Courses.] M.J. Graetz and J.L. Mashaw.

Distributive Justice and the Constitution (21077). 4 units. In 1954, Brown v. Board of Education condemned the racial caste structure that had long characterized American society, and brought into being an extraordinary period of American history — now dead — known as the Second Reconstruction. This course will seek to uncover the principles of justice that guided this reconstructive endeavor, and then to measure contemporary social reality by them. Looking at schools, housing, employment, voting, immigration policy, and the criminal justice system, we will try to identify the practices of inequality that persist and then attempt to construct the agenda of Third Reconstruction. Examination or paper option. O.M. Fiss.
Empirical Law and Economics (21449). 3 units. This course will essentially involve two components. First, it will provide an introduction to statistics and econometrics to illustrate how those tools are used in legal proceedings and to prepare for the second segment of the course. An in-class exam will be given at the end of this first segment. Second, the class will examine some of the major empirical papers evaluating important issues of law and public policy, including the deterrent effect of tort law, the decline of unionism, the effects of antidiscrimination law, the health costs of air pollution, the impact of Roe v. Wade, the crime reduction impact of increased incarceration, more police, gun laws, and the death penalty. Short papers required. J.J. Donohue.

Employment Discrimination Law (21310). 4 units. This course will examine the regulation of employment discrimination through Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and related laws. It will be an introductory course that examines the major analytical frameworks for conceptualizing race and sex discrimination—and equality—in the workplace. The course will combine a pragmatic, litigation-oriented perspective with a theoretical, sociological one, as it investigates the assumptions underlying various legal approaches and situates legal trends within larger social contexts. This course will provide a solid theoretical foundation for understanding differing conceptions of equality. Scheduled examination. V. Schultz.

[The] Engineering and Ownership of Life (21441). 2 units. This seminar will consider the development of biological knowledge and control in relation to intellectual property rights in living organisms. Topics will include agribusiness, medicine, biotechnology, and patent law. Paper or examination option. Enrollment limited to ten Law students. This course will meet according to the Yale College calendar. Also HIST 938bu/HSHM 676bu. D.J. Kevles.

Environmental Protection Clinic (21321). 3 units, credit/fail. A clinical seminar in which students will be engaged with actual environmental law or policy problems on behalf of client organizations (environmental groups, government agencies, international bodies, etc.). The class will meet weekly, and students will work eight to ten hours per week in interdisciplinary groups (with students from the School of Forestry & Environmental Studies and other departments or schools at Yale) on projects with a specific legal or policy product (e.g., draft legislation or regulations, hearing testimony, analytic studies, policy proposals) to be produced by the end of the term. Students may propose projects and client organizations, subject to approval by the instructor. Enrollment limited. Also F&ES 864b. D.S. Bryk.

Equality, Citizenship, and Sovereignty: Comparative Perspectives (21450). 3 units. This course will examine how different nations and federations define and implement laws on citizenship and equality. The class will consider how transnational laws and supra-national norms concerning citizenship relate to national law, and how claims for equal treatment of citizens and/or of persons alters understandings of nations’ sovereignty. Readings will include constitutional provisions, statutes, cases from various countries, essays and articles from the fields of law, history, and political theory. The class will host visitors who are engaged in thinking through these problems. Papers with the permission of the professors, with the possibility of an extra credit. No credit/fail option. Self-scheduled examination. J. Resnik and R. Siegel.

Federal Courts (21210). 4 units. Article III of the United States Constitution authorizes the vesting of the “judicial power of the United States” in “one supreme court and such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish.” It sets out the jurisdiction of the federal judiciary with respect to both parties and subject matter; and it empowers Congress to make exceptions and regulations with respect to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Federal courts, in other words, are courts of limited jurisdiction. This course is about the history and structure of the federal judiciary, about the extent to which the Constitution expressly limits that jurisdiction, the reach of congressional power over the federal judiciary, and the ways in which federal courts have developed doctrines of self-limitation consistent with perceived imperatives of separation-of-powers and federalism principles. Self-scheduled examination. D.S. Days, III.

Federal Income Taxation (21050). 4 units. An introductory course on the federal income taxation of individuals and businesses. The course will provide an overview of the basic legal doctrine and will emphasize statutory interpretation and a variety of income tax policy issues. The class will consider the role of the courts, the Congress, and the IRS in making tax law and tax policy and will apply (and question) the traditional tax policy criteria of fairness, efficiency, and administrability. Topics will include fringe benefits, business expenses, the interest deduction, the taxation of the family, and capital gains. No prerequisites. Self-scheduled examination. Enrollment will be capped at 149. A.L. Alstott.

[The] First Amendment (21421). 3 units. This course will discuss the structure of the First Amendment protections for expression. Scheduled examination. R.C. Post.

*[The] Formation of Lawyers (21451). 3 units. One of the hallmarks of divinity school education is a self-conscious focus on formation, which is to say the process by which students are shaped and molded for ordained ministry. Such talk is virtually nonexistent here at the Law School, given our shared commitment to creative anarchy and our institutional indifference to career choices. That said, formation does occur here, with a vengeance. Somehow, somewhere, Yale law students are shaped and molded into lawyers, legal academics, and philosopher kings and queens (though perhaps not in that order). Indeed, formation might be what we do best. This course will be designed to render visible how this occurs, so that the process of lawyer formation can be subjected to thoughtful critique and/or praise. Course materials will include fictional and nonfictional accounts (both print and celluloid) of how lawyers are formed. Paper(s) required. H.L. Dalton.

Groups, Diversity, and Law (21304). 2 or 3 units (depending on paper). Immigration, intra-group and inter-group differentiation, and egalitarian and diversity values are producing deep tensions and conflicts in a traditionally individualistic society. In complex ways, law influences how individuals assume group identities, how groups form, evolve, fragment, and compete with one another for social goods, and how diversity as social goal or constraint is defined and achieved. In this seminar, legal and social science materials will be used to explore the meanings of diversity, the history of diversity-as-ideal, and specific efforts by the law to implement that ideal — sometimes as a remedy for past discrimination, sometimes as a by-product of other values such as religious freedom, and sometimes for its own sake. The focus will be on examples such as affirmative action, political representation, language rights, immigration, residential integration, religion, and expressive associations. The emphasis will be on racial and ethnic groups, not on gender and sexual preference, which are covered in other courses. Each student must write, and some may be asked to present, a research paper. Supervised Analytic Writing and Substantial Paper credit may be given. An ungraded credit/fail option is available under certain conditions. P.H. Schuck.

Health Law and Policy (21416). 3 units. This course will provide a general introduction to health law, policy, and politics. Topics will include, among others, access to health care, the financing of care, patients’ rights, the meaning and effects of “managed care,” the relationship of health care to public health, and selected issues in bioethics. Treatment of these issues in the health care systems of other industrialized democracies — especially Canada, Germany, Holland, and Britain — will be analyzed to provide competing perspectives on U.S. domestic issues. Scheduled examination with a limited paper option. Also MGT 661b/PLSC 871b. T.R. Marmor.

Human Rights Workshop: Current Issues and Events (21193). 1 unit, credit/fail. Conducted in workshop format and led by Professor Paul Kahn, Director of the Orville H. Schell, Jr. Center for International Human Rights, the course will discuss recent writings in the field, presentations from outside guests and participants, and newsworthy events in the human rights arena. P.W. Kahn.

Immigration Law and Policy: Selected Issues (21305). 2 or 3 units (depending on paper). Immigration has always played a central role in American life, and never more than today. It significantly affects our demography, foreign relations, human rights posture, ethnic group relations, labor market conditions, welfare policy, public services, and domestic politics. It also raises in acute form some of the most basic problems that our legal system must address: the rights of insular minorities, the concepts of sovereignty and nationhood, fair treatment of competing claimants for scarce resources, the imperatives of mass administrative justice, and the role of courts. This will not be a survey course on immigration law; rather, this seminar will focus on a small number of selected issues, including the plenary power doctrine, admission, deportation, detention, citizenship, discrimination against aliens, and refugee/asylum law. No prior knowledge of immigration law will be assumed. 2 or 3 unit paper required, but ungraded credit/fail option available under prescribed conditions. Enrollment limited. P.H. Schuck.

Immigration Legal Services (21012). 3 units, credit/fail. A clinical seminar involving class sessions and casework. The clinic will specialize in the representation of persons who are seeking asylum through affirmative procedures or in removal proceedings or post-asylum relief. Class sessions will focus on the substantive law and the legal and ethical issues arising in the context of casework and on the development of lawyering skills. Enrollment limited. C.L. Lucht, S. Wizner, and H.V. Zonana.

International Business Transactions (21452). 2 or 3 units. An introduction to the formation, regulation, and global impact of international business transactions. The primary focus of the course will be on the legal and practical aspects of cross-border transactions, including the structuring, negotiation, and documentation of the relevant arrangements. Case studies from Latin America, Asia, the former Soviet Union, and the Middle East will be used. Topics will include methods of raising capital in international markets, privatization programs, project finance, trade finance, conflicts of law, extraterritoriality, sovereign debt restructuring, and special cross-border documentation issues. Scheduled examination or paper option. L.C. Buchheit and J.S. Pam.

International Commercial Arbitration (21283). 3 units. International arbitration has increased as a function of world trade. This seminar will examine systematically, through statutes, rules, national and international cases, and treaties, the establishment, operation, and implementation of awards of international commercial arbitration tribunals; the role of national courts in compelling, facilitating, and enforcing or vacating arbitral awards; and policies currently under consideration for changing arbitral practices. Scheduled examination. W. M. Reisman.

International Criminal Law (21404). 2 or 3 units. After a brief historical survey of the development of international criminal law, the seminar will examine events leading to the creation of the International Criminal Court for the former Yugoslavia. The legal framework for this court and its operation will then be explored against the background of the Milosevic trial. Following the examination of this ad hoc international forum, we shall consider the newly created permanent International Criminal Court. Considerable attention will be given throughout to alternatives to international criminal jurisdiction, such as the jurisdiction of national courts under the universality principle, or the establishment of “truth commissions.” The seminar will end with a discussion of the likely future of international criminal jurisdiction. Scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited to twenty-five. M.R. Damaška.

International Intellectual and Cultural Property (21440). 2 units. This seminar will focus on the transnational regulation of intellectual and cultural property through a combination of public and private law. Such institutions as the World Intellectual Property Organization and the World Trade Organization, multinational and regional treaty agreements, and comparative national regulations all play a role in this complex and evolving system. Students will be encouraged not only to understand the levels of legal and diplomatic engagement, but also to critique provisions for dispute resolution and ongoing efforts to harmonize national laws. The course will go beyond the usual categories of intellectual property to consider cutting-edge issues of cultural protection advanced by developing nations. Students will also examine the theoretical tensions between intellectual and cultural property, especially as they relate to historic concepts of progress and preservation, the fluidity of culture, and the protection of indigenous peoples. At least one previous course in the area of intellectual property is suggested. Paper required. Enrollment limited. S. Scafidi.

Introduction to Philosophy of Law (21275). 3 units. This introduction to the philosophy of law will cover three different kinds of topics: (1) the nature of law and of legal authority; (2) the philosophy of particular areas of law, e.g., torts, contracts, and criminal law; (3) issues pertaining to the intersection of political and legal philosophy, e.g., rights, justice, political authority. This course will meet on the Yale College calendar and will be available to undergraduates (through the Philosophy department), graduate students, and law students. Self-scheduled examination for Law students. Also PHIL 325b. J.L. Coleman.

Introduction to Transnational Law (21454). 3 units. This course will provide an introduction to and overview of transnational law. It will teach students the minimum that every lawyer should know about the international dimensions of law in the modern world. It is also intended as a foundation on which those who are interested in further study of the particular topics covered in the course can build. The course will cover both the public and the private dimensions of transnational law. Among the topics to be studied are the law of treaties; customary international law; trade law; international environmental law; international criminal law; international tax law; international business transactions; law on the use of force; transnational litigation; and transnational arbitration. Scheduled examination. O. A. Hathaway.

Jury Control in Anglo-American Legal History (21455). 3 or 4 units. Jury trial, civil or criminal, devolves adjudicative power on laypersons who are inexperienced at adjudication, give no reasons for what they decide, and have no continuing responsibility for the consequences of their decision. The legal system now counteracts the dangers intrinsic to the use of such triers by having trial judges supervise some of what the jurors hear and do, and also by empowering appellate judges to exercise some review of jury verdicts. These techniques of jury control are relatively recent. Across the centuries, the means of jury control have undergone radical change. Some chapters in this history are reasonably well understood, others not. In this seminar we will review the literature and historical sources, and for students wishing to write research papers, undertake to enrich the literature. Topics: (1) medieval practice; (2) attainder; (3) jury control in Star Chamber; (4) Sir Matthew Hale’s seventeenth-century system of jury control; (5) the breakdown of Hale’s system in the later eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries; (6) special verdicts, seditious libel, and Fox’s Libel Act (1792); (7) executive clemency as jury control; (8) the formation of the law of evidence; (9) the development of the law of jury instructions; (10) new trial and other appellate relief; (11) American initiatives in jury control; and (12) reconciling jury control with the Sixth and Seventh Amendment rights to jury trial. Recommended for students who have taken History of the Common Law (20010) or have comparable background in legal history. Paper required. J. H. Langbein.

Landlord/Tenant Law (21004). 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical seminar will provide legal assistance, under the supervision of clinical faculty, to low-income tenants facing eviction in the New Haven Housing Court. Topics to be covered in discussions and class materials will include the substantive law of landlord-tenant relations; ethical issues arising in the representation of clients; social and housing policy; and the development of lawyering skills, particularly in interviewing, litigation, negotiation, and mediation. Weekly class sessions and supervision sessions, plus eight to twelve hours per week of casework. Enrollment limited to six to eight. F. X. Dineen and J. L. Pottenger, Jr.

Land Transactions (21228). 3 units. The construction, conveyancing, and financing of real estate are major aspects of the economy in the United States and are activities in which lawyers often are extensively involved. This course will cover legal aspects of land transactions, including mortgages and other means of real estate finance, mortgage insurance, the mortgage market, real estate broker agreements, real estate contracts of sale, construction agreements, the recording acts, title insurance, and Torrens Registration. Scheduled examination. Q. Johnstone.
Land Use (21117). 3 units. This course will examine the array of devices, legal and nonlegal, that governments, developers, and opponents of development employ to influence the land development process. Attention will be given not only to zoning but also to such advanced topics as planning theory, environmental impact reports, homeowner associations, state land-use controls, and mechanisms for financing the urban infrastructure. The course is designed for students who have taken Property, but that course is not a prerequisite. Scheduled examination. R.C. Ellickson.

Law and Economics: Directed Research (21458). 1 to 4 units. In choosing among candidates for directed research, preference will be given to empirical research projects that can most benefit from the instructor's input. Paper required. Permission of instructor required. J. J. Donohue.

[The] Law and Economics of Corporate Control (21234). 3 units. This course will be taught jointly by a professor and an attorney with a very large acquisitions and corporate governance practice. Its objectives will be to explore positive theories of why changes of control occur and the forms they take and to explore normative theories of how the state should respond to these changes. Topics include hostile takeovers, proxy contests, leveraged buyouts, friendly mergers, state and federal regulation of acquisitions activity, and corporate governance issues. Readings range from current cases to scholarly articles. The theoretical and legal treatments will be tested in the analysis of three recent deals, each of which will be presented by an actual participant in the deal. Students will be asked to critique the conduct of the deals in light of the legal and commercial options available to the parties. The course grade will be based on the critique and on an examination or a paper option with permission of the instructors. Self-scheduled examination. A. Schwartz and S. Fraidin.

Law and Religion: Seminar (21216). 3 units. A seminar using selected problems to undertake a legal, theoretical, and comparative study of the interaction between the commands of the state on the one hand and, on the other, religious beliefs, practices, or obligations. A research paper of some significance is required. After the early weeks of the course, the focus will move to the papers, and the class will meet less frequently. Paper required. Enrollment limited. S.L. Carter.

Law and the New World of Work (21459). 2 or 3 units. In search of an updated vision of institutional and policy reform that will match market realities, this course will explore the relations between employment and labor laws and the new world of work. The new political economy, with its increased demands for flexibility and competitiveness, new technologies, and rapid globalization, has dramatically altered the nature of work and employment. Public policy that emerged out of the industrial era and the New Deal no longer matches new workplace realities. New developments, including the rise of outsourcing, global work chains, and underground economies, challenge not only the responsibility of the state to regulate the workplace, but also its capacities to enforce top-down regulations. Efforts to create transnational labor regimes via international organizations and trade agreements, as well as the growing focus on “soft law,” audited self-regulation, and nonregulatory instruments, such as corporate codes of conduct, social labeling, and private accreditation, unsettle conventional notions about the regulation of markets and raise the questions of what should be considered as workplace law and what are the contemporary possibilities of legal reform. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. O. Lobel.

Law, Economics, and Organization (21041). 1 unit, credit/fail. This seminar will meet jointly with the Law, Economics, and Organization Workshop, an interdisciplinary faculty workshop that brings to Yale Law School scholars, generally from other universities, who present papers based on their current research. The topics will involve a broad range of issues of general legal and social science interest. Students registering for the seminar and participating in the workshop will receive one unit of ungraded credit per term. Neither Substantial Paper nor Supervised Analytic Writing credit will be available through the seminar. Short papers will be required during the term. I. Ayres, R. Brooks, A. Schwartz, and H.E. Smith.

[The] Law of Democracy (21457). 4 units. Democracy cannot exist apart from the legal and political institutions that both sustain and constrain it. This seminar will examine these institutions and the rules of law that seek to vindicate the democratic ideal. Topics to be covered include race-based redistricting and the one-person-one-vote line of cases, the Voting Rights Act, partisan gerrymandering, felon disenfranchisement, the rules governing political parties, and campaign finance. Paper required. O. M. Fiss.

*Lawyering Ethics (21309). 3 units, credit/fail. This is a clinical course in which students participate in the disciplinary process against lawyers charged with violating ethical obligations to clients. Our goals include understanding current systems and considering their transformations, as well as thinking about how legal education should engage with the ethical issues facing lawyers. Students will research issues of state discipline of lawyers, including the workings of the system in Connecticut (such as which lawyers are disciplined for what kinds of infractions, at whose prompting, and with what forms of remedy). The disciplinary procedures for judges will also be investigated. Concurrently, students will represent before bar grievance panels clients who have complained about their lawyers and whose complaints have been found to have probable cause. Enrollment limited to ten. D.E. Curtis and D. J. Cantrell.

Legal Assistance (21057). 3 units, credit/fail. A clinical seminar, using classroom, field work, and simulation experiences in the general area of legal assistance for the poor. Students will work eight to twelve hours per week in a local legal aid office and will attend weekly classroom sessions. The seminar will be practice-oriented, moving from developing solutions for specific client problems to general discussions of landlord-tenant, consumer, domestic relations, welfare, and other legal subjects of special concern to the urban poor, as well as issues of broader social policy. The seminar will also focus on the development of professional responsibility and lawyering skills, such as interviewing, negotiating, counseling, drafting, and litigation. A few placements for criminal defense work in state court will also be available. Enrollment limited to eight. F. X. Dineen.

Legislative Advocacy Clinic (21392). 3 units, credit/fail. A two-term clinical seminar designed to give students an opportunity to participate in the state legislative process by advancing—and defending—the interests of Connecticut public interest organizations (including other LSO clinics, and their clients). The clinic's work will include both affirmative legislative initiatives and defensive efforts to respond to proposed legislation deemed inimical to the interests of its clients. The clinic will also serve as a legislative liaison for other LSO clinics, keeping them informed of legislative developments affecting their clients’ interests. Issues of ethics and professional responsibility for lawyers working in the legislative arena will be an important focus of this clinic. In the fall term, students will participate in training sessions led by some of Connecticut’s most experienced lobbyists, meet with state legislators, and work with their client organizations to develop a legislative agenda. Once issues have been chosen for action, students will research the subject, work with other client organizations to help draft legislation, and meet with legislators. In the spring, students will work in partnership with their client organization to meet with legislators to get their bills introduced, develop oral and written testimony in support thereof, identify other witnesses, shepherd their bills through the committee process, and work to get them adopted. During the legislative session, students will also monitor other proposed legislation that might affect the clinic’s clients. To allow all students to participate in both the training/issue development and direct action aspects of the clinic’s work, priority will be given to students willing to commit to participating for two terms. Enrollment limited. J. L. Pottenger, Jr., S. D. Geballe, E. Scalettar, and C. C. Staples.

Lowenstein International Human Rights Clinic (21152). 3 units, credit/fail. Students will work on a variety of human rights projects, generally in support of current advocacy efforts of human rights organizations. Projects are designed to give students practical experience with the range of activities in which lawyers engage to promote respect for human rights; to help students build the knowledge and skills necessary to be effective human rights lawyers; and to integrate the theory and practice of human rights. Class sessions will provide an overview of basic human rights principles and their application, and instruction in and development of human rights research and writing skills. Professor Kahn will join sessions that address issues—legal, strategic, ethical, and theoretical—raised by project work. The clinic will have one or more student directors. Enrollment limited to eighteen. J. J. Silk.

Major Topics in Law and Finance (21420). 2 or 3 units. Financial institutions of all kinds, whether they are formally known as insurance companies, banks, investment banks, mutual funds, or pension funds, invest money on behalf of clients in a wide variety of investment vehicles. This course will look at the way that these financial institutions are treated from both a legal and an economic perspective. Emphasis will be placed on the intersections between modern financial theory and legal analysis. Topics will include insurance, bank regulation and reform, securities markets, investment banking, market microstructure (the organization and regulation of financial markets), and pensions. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. J. R. Macey.
Managing National Security (21315). 2 units. The course is intended to introduce students to the process and practice of national security law as well as the substance of national security law. The first third of the course is devoted to the structure and process of national security decision making. The second third of the term introduces students to the instruments of national security policy—military, intelligence, law enforcement, diplomatic, and economic. The final third of the course is devoted to functional exercises in national security policy with the students playing the roles of national security principals (a.k.a. national security moot court). Each exercise is designed to give students experience in spotting issues and applying law in context. The exercises are also intended to give students a feel for the texture and pressure of national security decision making. J. E. Baker.

Nonprofit Organizations Clinic (21056). 1 or 2 units, credit/fail. This clinical workshop will serve the needs of nonprofit organizations, nascent and established, that require help in the process of organization and incorporation, in obtaining tax exemption, and solving ongoing legal problems—organizations that cannot afford to retain private counsel. The class will meet as a group five or six times during the term. Also MGT 695b. J.G. Simon, L.N. Davis, and B.B. Lindsay.

Pension and Employee Benefit Law (21007). 3 units. The private pension system now commands assets exceeding $11 trillion. Pension and employee benefit plans have become ubiquitous features of the modern employment relationship. The legal regulation of these plans is both an independent legal specialty and a subject that overlaps other fields, including corporate, labor, tax, trust, domestic relations, employment discrimination, and health care law. The regulatory scheme has been undergoing incessant change, and one purpose of this course will be to understand the likely direction of future change. The course will examine the relation of the private pension system to the public systems, especially Social Security. It will offer a substantial introduction to the federal tax treatment of pension funds. The main focus will be on various bodies of regulatory law, especially the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) of 1974, as amended, and its case law. After providing an overview of the main types of plans, including health care plans, the course will examine the rules governing coverage, vesting, integration with Social Security, funding, fiduciary standards, investment, distribution, and preemption of state law. The federal insurance scheme for defined benefit plans administered through the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation will also be emphasized. Scheduled examination. J.H. Langbein.

[The] Prehistory of American Administrative Law: Seminar (21465). 2 or 3 units. Administrative law in the United States is often said to have begun late in the nineteenth century with the creation of the first federal independent regulatory commission, the ICC, in 1887. But from 1787 forward the national government functioned through administrative officials. Were these officials not accountable to law? And, if accountable, to what sort of law? This seminar will explore these and other questions of law and administration in the early American Republic. 3 credits available for Supervised Analytic Writing. Paper required. Enrollment limited. J.L. Mashaw.

Prison Legal Services (21237). 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical seminar will provide legal assistance to inmates at state prisons. The weekly class sessions will focus on prisoners’ rights, readings about prisons and punishment, and current Legal Services Organization cases. The seminar will also concentrate on developing professional responsibility through weekly seminar and supervision sessions, plus at least twelve hours each week of required client work, including interviewing, investigating, counseling, and drafting of court papers. Where possible, the student’s representation of inmate clients, under attorney supervision, will include court appearances and administrative hearings. Enrollment limited to eight. B. Dignam.

Professional Ethics, Public Interest, and the Media (21410). 3 units. This class will explore the obligations of lawyers, journalists, judges, and the courts to provide information to the public, as well as the restrictions on disseminating information related to clients, litigation, and courts. The class will consider the role of courts as public institutions, charged both with providing access to information and with shielding disputants from public scrutiny. The course will examine the sources for norms, laws, and ethics about professional obligations, and will focus on the tensions for lawyers, judges, and journalists as they negotiate responsibilities to clients and subjects of media scrutiny, to the public, and to themselves. These themes will be explored through specific problems, including the ethical requirements for lawyers that either limit public comment or mandate disclosure; the sources and norms for journalists dealing with legal issues; evolving standards for access and disclosure of events in court (trials, hearings, discovery, pre-trial processes, and settlement agreements); and judicial attitudes and ethics about speaking as individuals and as “the judiciary” to the press and to Congress. Materials will include the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, case law, statutes, and essays from the academy and from lawyers and journalists. The course may be taken graded only. Students must hand in, weekly, ungraded one-page papers commenting in advance of class on the readings. Also required is either an essay-length self-scheduled examination or a final paper, at the instructors’ options. Substantial Paper or Supervised Analytic Writing credit will be available for more extensive written work, again only with the instructors’ permission. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. D.E. Curtis, D.J. Cantrell, and E. Bazelon.

Property (21409). 4 units. This course will inquire into a pervasive set of human institutions — the arrangements for getting, using, transferring, and forfeiting resources in the world around us. The course will begin by questioning the range of purposes for property regimes and then move through the topics of acquisition, transfer, shared interests, and limitations on property. While the main focus will be property in land, the class will discuss the implications of property in many areas — among others wild animals, oil and gas, recording and other notice-giving devices, interests in land over time, easements and deed restrictions, planned communities and “private government,” landlord-tenant relations, issues of differential wealth and civil rights, and public land-use regulation. Scheduled examination. H. E. Smith.

Prosecution Externship (21088). 2 or 3 units, credit/fail. Students in this clinical externship will assist state or federal prosecutors with their responsibilities, both before and at trial. Placements are available in New Haven and surrounding cities and in a variety of fields, including misdemeanors, felonies, or specialized areas such as career criminal, traffic, or appellate work. Weekly sessions will range from discussions of assigned readings to field trips to prisons, police laboratories, etc. Students will be required to keep journals and time records. Placements at the U.S. Attorney’s Office must be arranged at least four months in advance, to allow time for security clearance procedures. Applications and interviews for the State’s Attorney placements will take place during the first week of the term. Although enrollment is limited and permission of the instructor is required, timing and the involvement of outside agencies remove this clinic from the usual sign-up process for limited enrollment courses. J. L. Pottenger, Jr., and J. A. Meyer.

Public Order of the World Community II (21460). 2 units. Using the framework of Public Order of the World Community I, the focus will be on state responsibility, treaty making, diplomacy, the law of war, and jurisdiction. Scheduled examination or paper option. W. M. Reisman.

*Reading Corporate and Securities Cases (21397). 2 units. This course will analyze problems in the law that govern the advice a lawyer provides to a corporate or securities law client. Philosophically, the market functions, like war, as a vehicle and justification for the processes of change. Market changes, however, are social as well as economic, driven by shifts in technology and consumer preferences as well as interest rates and industry configurations. The attempt to regulate the actions of persons who produce such changes — governance — is a function of law. The corporate lawyer, like the judge, interprets the statutory and common law mandates that embody such attempts. This course will analyze judicial opinions in which those attempts are implemented. J. G. Deutsch and W. C. Baskin, Jr.

Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings: Domestic and Comparative Theory and Practice (21461). 2 to 4 units. Each student will research the representation of children in child protective proceedings in theory and practice in ten jurisdictions (a combination of American states and foreign nations). Class sessions will focus in the first half of the term on the theory and practice of representation of children in the United States, on international human rights developments in the field, and on review of research materials compiled in the previous term. The second half of the term will focus on writing, classroom presentation of research findings, observations based upon the research gathered over two terms, and perhaps a presentation of the research to knowledgeable visitors. Additional supervision time for research will be scheduled, probably biweekly. No prerequisites. Clinic students and students fluent in other languages are particularly welcome. Supervised Analytic Writing or Substantial Paper credit available. Paper required. Enrollment limited to fourteen. J. K. Peters.

Research Methods in American Legal History (21080). 2 or 3 units. This seminar will examine the methods and major materials used in American historical legal research, whether for scholarly pursuits or professional advocacy. It will cover early judicial, statutory, and constitutional sources; crime literature; court records; government documents; biographical materials and personal papers of lawyers and judges; other manuscript collections; and early sources of American international law and civil law. Paper required. M. L. Cohen.

Securities Regulation II (21412). 2 units. An examination of various federal securities laws and regulations not covered in Securities Regulation I, such as broker-dealer regulation. The relationship of the securities laws to the market for derivatives and the Commodity Exchange Act will also be discussed. Scheduled examination. R. K. Winter.

Sentencing Workshop (21383). 3 units. A workshop at which federal and state judges, defense lawyers, prosecutors, and other criminal-justice professionals are invited to meet with the students and to explore such issues as the federalization of crime, discretion in the federal sentencing guidelines, recent constitutional challenges, legislative amendments, theories of punishment. All participants — judge and non-judge — will be provided with hypothetical “cases” of individuals to sentence, and then justify and/or explain their sentences in depth to the other workshop participants. The class will be invited to observe actual court sentencings in either New Haven or Boston, and, where possible, discuss the cases with the parties. Prerequisite: fall-term Sentencing course. Enrollment limited. D. E. Curtis and N. Gertner.
Sexuality and the Law (21463). 3 units. This seminar will consider how the law governs and structures sexuality. The class will consider contemporary topics in sexuality and the law, including same-sex marriage, polygamy, parenting rights for sexual minorities, incest, and age of consent. It will also look at the law’s treatment of emerging sexual identities, including bisexuality, transsexuality, and intersexuality. Self-scheduled examination or paper option. Enrollment limited to fourteen. K. Yoshino.

Sexuality, Gender, and the Law (21129). 3 units. This course will explore the historical, comparative, statutory, constitutional, and theoretical dimensions of law’s regulation of sexuality and gender. Because sex, gender, and sexual orientation issues are at the cutting edge of privacy, equality, and free speech litigation in this and other countries, the course can be viewed as an advanced constitutional law course. The exploration of natural law, law and economics, feminist, and gay legal theory in many different contexts also gives this course a jurisprudential focus. Self-scheduled examination. Enrollment limited to seventy-five. W.N. Eskridge, Jr.

Theology and the Law: Seminar (21148). 3 units. This advanced seminar will focus on “theology” and “law” as grand discourses, complex frameworks through which we conceive, understand, explain, critique, form, and transform ourselves and our world. A limited number of topics will be addressed in depth. Paper(s) required. Enrollment limited. H.L. Dalton.

Theories of Statutory Interpretation: Seminar (21464). 2 units. This course will be a seminar for reading various articles on statutory interpretation theory, including theories drawn from hermeneutics, historiography, public choice theory, positive political theory, political theory, and so forth. The first half of the course will involve critical discussion of various articles and book excerpts. The second half of the course will be devoted to paper writing by students. Each student will present a draft paper, to be discussed by the class. Paper required. Prerequisite: Legislation. Enrollment limited to seven. W.N. Eskridge, Jr.

Theory and Practice: Seminar (21130). 3 or 4 units. A writing seminar devoted to the exploration of the practical significance of the theories of justice considered in the fall-term course Justice, which is generally a requirement for admission into this seminar. Students with exceptional backgrounds in political philosophy may be admitted directly upon satisfying the instructor that they have in fact read and pondered the texts discussed in the fall-term course. Supervised Analytic Writing credit. Prerequisite: Justice (LAW 20104), or permission of instructor. Paper required. Enrollment limited. Also PLSC 573b. B. Ackerman.

Trademarks and Unfair Competition (21466). 3 units. This course covers the law of “unprotected ideas,” the common and statutory law of unfair competition in marketing, and federal and state laws concerning trademarks and service marks. The course also covers rules, both informal and formal, regulating competition online. Finally, the course will include a brief introduction to laws governing advertising more generally, including truth and falsity, puffery, and, if time permits, advertising aimed at children. In addition to the final examination, each student will complete a short (say, 4 – 6 page) reflective paper due around the middle of the term. Self-scheduled examination. S.L. Carter.

Trial Practice (21183). 2 units, credit/fail. An introduction to trial evidence and to the techniques and ethics of advocacy in civil and criminal trials. Students will act as lawyers in simulated trial situations. The instructors will be judges and experienced trial lawyers from the community who will provide instruction and critique. Enrollment limited to seventy-eight. S. Wizner.

Urban Legal History: The Development of New Haven (21118). 3 units.
Under what conditions do residents of a city succeed in cooperating to mutual advantage? This seminar will explore this question by focusing on the physical development of New Haven from 1638 to the present. Readings and class sessions will address, among other topics, the initial Nine Squares layout and colonial land allotments; the dynamics of land subdivision and private development (such as the Hillhouse Subdivision); land assembly by Yale and others; the street network, the Green, and other public lands; such public works as the Farmington Canal, the planting of elm trees, and the interstate highways; and evolving controls on building quality and land use. Special attention will be given to New Haven's nationally conspicuous efforts, since 1940, to provide public housing, renew neighborhoods, and nurture a nonprofit housing sector. Paper required.
Enrollment limited to sixteen. R.C. Ellickson.

2003–2004 ROBERT P. ANDERSON MEMORIAL LECTURE
The regular curriculum at Yale Law School is augmented by a host of events that enrich legal education and scholarship. Distinguished speakers — lawyers, judges, public figures, government officials, scholars, and other prominent individuals — are invited by faculty members, student organizations, and academic programs within the School to give talks or participate in panel discussions on a wide variety of topics throughout the year. Conferences sponsored or co-sponsored by the School or by its faculty or students address issues of legal import both here and abroad. Additionally, an abundant resource of endowed funds allows the School to invite many specially designated fellows who not only give lectures but also spend time mentoring students with similar academic or professional interests.

Lecture Programs

A sampling of the endowed lecture programs from the 2003–2004 academic year follows:

The Robert P. Anderson Memorial Fellowship, established in 1987 in memory of the senior judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, provides a forum for distinguished judges to speak on matters of general importance to law and society. In 2003–2004, Yale Law School was fortunate to welcome the Honorable Louis H. Pollak, United States District Court, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and former dean of the Law School. Judge Pollak gave a talk on “Race, Law, and History.”

The Ralph Gregory Elliot First Amendment Lectureship was established in 1990 to provide for lectures on some aspect of the First Amendment. Randall L. Kennedy, Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, gave a talk in the spring entitled “Organizational Freedom in an Era of Repression: The Effort to Strangle the NAACP after Brown v. Board of Education.”

The Preiskel/Silverman Program on the Practicing Lawyer and the Public Interest sponsors lectures and other events celebrating private lawyers’ contributions to public service. In the fall of 2003, William T. Coleman, senior partner and senior counsel at O’Melveny & Myers, gave a talk on “Year 2003: Accords and Discords.”

The Raben Fellowship, which brings to the Law School individuals with special expertise in securities law, financial accounting, or related subjects, was given in the spring of 2004. J. Mark Ramseyer, Mitsubishi Professor of Japanese Legal Studies at Harvard Law School, gave a lecture entitled “Who Appoints Them? What Do They Do? Evidence on Outside Directors from Japan.”

The Storrs Lectures, one of Yale Law School’s oldest and most prestigious lecture programs, were established in 1889. These annual lectures are given by a prominent scholar within the broad topic of fundamental problems with law and jurisprudence. The 2003–2004 Storrs Lecturer was Gunther Teubner, professor of private law and legal sociology at Johann Wolfgang Goethe Universität Frankfurt. The first lecture in Professor Teubner’s series was entitled “Civil Constitutions in Global Society: Alternative to State-centered Constitutional Theory”; the second lecture was “Coincidentia Oppositorum: Hybrid Networks Beyond Contract and Organization”; and the third lecture addressed “Dealing with Paradoxes of Law: Derrida, Luhmann, Wietholter.”

The James A. Thomas Lecture Series was established by Yale Law School students in 1989 to honor James A. Thomas ’64, to recognize scholars whose work addresses the concerns of communities or groups currently marginalized within the legal academy or society at large. The Alumni Weekend 2003 commenced with the James A. Thomas Lecture, given by Lani Guinier ’74, Bennett Boskey Professor at Harvard Law School. Professor Guinier’s lecture was entitled “Out of the Grutter and Into the Mainstream: From Adversity to Diversity.”

Other named lecture and fellowship programs at Yale Law School include:

The Timothy B. Atkeson Environmental Practitioner in Residence Program, established in honor of Timothy B. Atkeson ’52, a former assistant administrator for international affairs of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Robert L. Bernstein Lecture in International Human Rights, which was inaugurated in 1998 by Wei Jingsheng, the political prisoner released in 1997 from almost twenty years of continuous captivity in a Chinese jail.

The Robert M. Cover Lectures in Law and Religion, established to honor the memory of Yale Law School Professor Robert Cover, which bring speakers to Yale to explore the intersection of legal and religious thought and practice.

The Harper Fellowship, which sponsors a prominent figure, selected for distinguished contribution to the public life.

The Arthur Allen Leff Fellowship, which brings to Yale Law School individuals whose work in other disciplines illuminates the study of law and legal institutions.

The Mechem Fellowship, made possible by a grant from Charles S. Mechem, Jr. ’55, established to foster an understanding of decision making in the business environment.

The Sherrill Lectureship, which brings distinguished visitors with special expertise in problems of international law and international relations.

The Stupski Fellowship in Education, sponsored by the Larry and Joyce Stupski Public Interest Support Fund, which invites prominent educators to offer their perspectives on their field.

Beyond the endowed lecture and fellowship programs, other invited speakers present topics of particular interest to the Law School community. Among those invited in the 2003–2004 academic year were the Honorable Justice Hiroshi Fukuda of the Supreme Court of Japan and the Honorable Justice Andrew Li of the Hong Kong Court of Final Appeals, who spoke on “Revisions to the Pacifist Japanese Constitution; Balancing Civil Liberties and National Security in Hong Kong.” United States District Court Judge Myron Thompson offered a Dean’s Lecture called “Judging in Alabama: Deciding the Tough Cases.” Professor Noam Chomsky shared his thoughts on military intervention, multilateralism, nation building, and exit strategies in Iraq in the spring of 2004 in a talk called “U.S. Foreign Policy in Iraq.” In addition, many student organizations sponsored lectures and conferences throughout the academic year, including the Yale Entertainment and Sports Law Association, Yale Law Women, the Federalist Society, and the Middle East Law Forum. Other notable conferences held this year included “The Legacy of Brown v. Board of Education: Reflections on the Last Fifty Years” and “Cybercrime and Security.”

Other regularly scheduled talks are given around a specific academic or intellectual interest. The Orville H. Schell, Jr. Center for International Human Rights sponsors a weekly Human Rights Workshop for students, scholars, and practitioners in the field of human rights. The Legal Theory Workshop brings to the Law School provocative new scholarship from law and affiliated disciplines in the humanities and social sciences. The Legal History Forum brings together law students, graduate students, and scholars from a variety of disciplines who have an interest in history and the law. The Law, Economics, and Organization Workshop is both a forum for ongoing scholarly research in law and economics and a Law School course. With the Quinnipiac University Law School, Yale Law School sponsors regular workshops on Dispute Resolution. In addition, students have the opportunity to learn about current Yale Law School faculty research in Faculty Teas scheduled periodically throughout the academic year.

Further information about the origins and history of all endowed fellowships and lectures at the Law School appears on pages 177–79. Lectures and other public events are listed in the online Master Calendar of Events, which is updated daily during the academic year (www.law.yale.edu/calendar).

SPECIAL INITIATIVES

The Yale Law School is shaped by the intellectual interests of its faculty and students. Those interests find expression not only in our established curriculum and other academic opportunities, but also in new activities that emerge from time to time.

For example, the growing importance of international perspectives has yielded several major initiatives. The Global Constitutionalism Seminar is an event in which Supreme Court and constitutional court judges from around the world meet with faculty members to discuss issues of common concern. To date, seven seminars have been convened. While the proceedings are largely confidential, some events are open to the Law School community.

A second initiative is designed to strengthen democratic institutions and practices in Latin America through linkage activities with two law schools in Chile, one in Argentina, and one in Brazil. Now in its twelfth year, this program permits up to six Yale students to spend the month of June in Chile or Argentina, and three students to spend a month in Brazil, in order to work with Latin American law students in small study groups and clinics. In the spring, students from the Latin American linkage law schools visit Yale for three weeks to participate in study groups and attend classes. In addition, legal scholars from throughout Latin America, the Caribbean Basin, Spain, and the United States meet in June for the Seminario en Latino-américa de Teoría Constitucional y Política (SELA), a three-day seminar exploring the foundational ideas of constitutional democracy. SELA is co-sponsored by Yale and a number of other law schools in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, Puerto Rico, and Spain.

A similar initiative, the Middle East Legal Studies Seminar, is an annual meeting convened by the Law School in a venue as close to the Middle East as possible. It was created to provide a forum in which influential and democracy-minded scholars and opinion leaders from the legal communities of the Middle East could exchange ideas and form a productive working relationship. Every year, roughly thirty-five lawyers, judges, and law professors from the region meet with several Yale professors and a few students to discuss an agreed-upon topic of common importance. Past topics have included the concept of legal authority, the basic rights and remedies available to individuals, and the challenges of religious pluralism in the Middle East. The proceedings were structured around a series of papers that were distributed in advance, and each session was moderated by former Dean Anthony Kronman.

THE YALE CENTER FOR ENVIRONMENTAL LAW AND POLICY

The center, established in 1994 by Yale Law School and the Yale School of Forestry & Environmental Studies, draws upon resources throughout Yale University to develop and advance environmental policy locally, regionally, nationally, and globally. The center’s mission is to introduce students to environmental law challenges, policy tools, and research methodologies; encourage debate and creative thought on environmental issues; develop and advance policies responding to critical environmental problems on the local, regional, national, and global levels; and provide a forum where scholars, environmental advocates, businesspeople, government officials, and representatives of international organizations can exchange views. The center supports a variety of research projects. These include the Global Environmental Governance Dialogue, which seeks to identify ways to strengthen the international environmental regime; and the Environmental Performance Measurement Project, which aims to develop pollution control and natural resource management metrics and indicators, an index ranking national government environmental results, and an initiative on “Information Age” environmental protection.

The center runs the Environmental Protection Clinic, where law students have opportunities to address environmental law and policy problems on behalf of client organizations. In recent years, Yale student teams have worked with a range of community groups, environmental groups, think tanks, government agencies, and international organizations.

The center also sponsors an Environmental Law and Policy Lecture Series, which provides a forum for visiting scholars, politicians, and environmental professionals. The director of the center is Professor Daniel C. Esty, who holds a joint appointment in the Law School and the School of Forestry & Environmental Studies.

THE JOHN M. OLIN CENTER FOR STUDIES IN LAW, ECONOMICS, AND PUBLIC POLICY

The Center for Studies in Law, Economics, and Public Policy is designed to facilitate the scholarly interests of the many distinguished law and economics scholars at Yale, including Professors Ackerman, Alstott, Ayres, Brooks, Calabresi, Coleman, Donohue, Ellickson, Graetz, Hansmann, Klevorick, Kronman, Macey, Markovits, Mashaw, Priest, Romano, Rose, Rose-Ackerman, Schuck, Schwartz, Smith, and Winter. The center supports a broad range of scholarly work. Under the center, the John M. Olin Program in Law and Economics supports John M. Olin Scholarships to students interested in law and economics, to students conducting law and economics research projects over the summer, as well as to students who wish to obtain joint degrees in law and economics; the John M. Olin Prize for the best student paper on a law and economics subject; the Journal of Law, Economics, and Organization, co-edited by Professor Ian Ayres; the center’s Working Paper Series; and the Law, Economics, and Organization Workshop, at which scholars from other institutions and from Yale present papers for student and faculty criticism. The center also provides an umbrella for two programs: the Program in Civil Liability, established to promote comprehensive reanalysis of the modern law of torts, products liability, professional malpractice, insurance, and other subjects related to our civil liability system; and the Program for Studies in Capitalism, which supports research on the operation of capitalism as a mechanism of economic growth; the ethical bases of capitalism; the relation between capitalism and the poor, and between capitalism and democracy. The center’s codirectors are Professors George L. Priest and Susan Rose-Ackerman.

THE YALE LAW SCHOOL CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF CORPORATE LAW

The Yale Law School Center for the Study of Corporate Law was created to facilitate research and teaching in the business law area. The center’s research and teaching interests include corporate law and the law of other nongovernmental organizations; the regulation of financial markets and intermediaries; and the legal framework of finance, including the law of bankruptcy, corporate reorganization, and secured transactions.

Every year the center hosts a roundtable, open to the Law School community, which is attended by leading corporate lawyers, public officials, and scholars. The roundtables are one-day events that seek to foster a dialogue between academics and practitioners on the important corporate law issues of the day through presentations of scholarly papers and panel discussions. The center hosts the Raben Fellowship, which brings to the Law School a leading expert in securities law for a public lecture, and the Judge Ralph Winter Lecture on Corporate Law and Governance. The center also sponsors an occasional breakfast program in New York City, which features panel discussions on current topics in corporate law by alumni and faculty. For more information, visit the center’s Web site at www.yale.edu/law/ccl.

Professor Alan Schwartz is the director of the center. The center has a board of advisers, chaired by Robert Todd Lang ’47, consisting of YLS alumni Roger Aaron ’68, Curtis H. Barnette ’62, William C. Crowley ’85, Peter R. Ezersky ’85, Boris Feldman ’80, Reid Feldman ’71, Arthur Fleischer, Jr. ’58, Stephen Fraidin ’64, Benjamin F. Stapleton ’69, Craig M. Wasserman ’86, and Judge Ralph K. Winter ’60. In addition to Judge Winter, an adjunct professor at YLS, other members of the Law School faculty serving on the board are Professors Ian Ayres, Richard Brooks, Henry Hansmann, Anthony Kronman, Jonathan Macey, and Roberta Romano.

THE CHINA LAW CENTER

The China Law Center was established at Yale Law School in 1999 with two missions: to increase understanding of China’s legal system outside of China, and to support the legal reform process within China. To these ends, the center carries out research and teaching, promotes academic exchanges with China, and undertakes a variety of cooperative projects with legal experts in China on important legal reform issues. Since the center was launched, it has been undertaking in-depth cooperative projects with leading Chinese legal experts and institutions in the areas of judicial reform, criminal procedure, administrative law, regulatory reform, and legal education. These projects involve a range of activities, including workshops and seminars in the United States and China, research visits to Yale and to China, and publications. The center also organizes a weekly “Workshop on Chinese Legal Reform.” Yale Law School students participate in all aspects of the center’s work. Research grants are also available to support law students wishing to do research in China during the summer. The director of the center is Professor Paul Gewirtz. The deputy director is Jonathan Hecht and the associate director is Jamie Horsley. Jeffrey Prescott ’97 is a center fellow based in Beijing. Further information about the center is available on its Web site, www.yale.edu/chinalaw.
THE INFORMATION SOCIETY PROJECT

The Information Society Project (ISP) at Yale Law School was created in 1997 to study the implications of the Internet, telecommunications, and the new information technologies on law and society. Much of its work has focused on issues of freedom of speech, democracy, and the growth and spread of cultures on the Internet. In past years the ISP has studied the free speech implications of filtering and rating systems, legal protections for sensitive information on the Internet, civic participation in cyberspace, the civil liberties implications of intellectual property protection, memetics and the evolution of cultures and ideologies, and the effects of the new communications technologies on globalization. It has held scholarly conferences on a range of subjects including democracy in cyberspace, blogging, the law of virtual worlds, and emerging issues in cybercrime. The project embraces a variety of activities, including fellowships for young scholars and advice and education for policy makers, business leaders, nonprofit organizations, and the legal community. It also runs a Weblog, Lawmeme, which offers commentary on developing technology issues. The project director is Professor Jack Balkin. Additional information on ISP is available on its Web site, http://islandia.law.yale.edu/isp.

THE ARTHUR LIMAN PUBLIC INTEREST PROGRAM

The Arthur Liman Public Interest Program was established in 1997 by family and friends of the late Arthur Liman ’57 to honor his commitment to public interest law.

The Liman Program funds fellowships for Law School graduates working in public interest law, provides funding for student associates in residence at the Law School, and for undergraduates working in public interest during the summer. The program also awards grants to qualifying organizations for public interest projects, and holds colloquia for attorneys, academics, and students on relevant topics in legal services.

Arthur Liman Public Interest Fellowships are awarded annually to Yale Law School graduates. The fellowships provide support to work full time for a year in an ongoing or start-up project in any area of the legal profession devoted to the public interest. During the fellowship year, Liman Fellows may spend time in residence at Yale Law School to conduct seminars based on their work. In the past, Fellows have engaged in projects securing rights for workfare recipients, criminal defendants, migrant workers, the elderly, and immigrants.

Each year, law students work as associate fellows, providing substantive assistance to graduate fellows and helping to plan and participate in the annual Liman Colloquium. Topics for the colloquium series have included “The Future of Legal Services,” “Valuing Low-Wage Workers,” “Welfare ‘Reform’ and Response,” “Encountering the Criminal Justice System,” “Portraying the Public Interest,” and “Public Interest Lawyering in an Era of High Anxiety.”

The program also sponsors other scholarship including a public interest law reading group.
Since its establishment, the range of programs funded by the Arthur Liman Public Interest Program has reflected the breadth of interests, concerns, and commitments of Arthur Liman. While working as a partner at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton and Garrison, and providing counsel to a range of corporate and individual clients, Liman also led several major institutions devoted to providing services to those who could not afford lawyers, including the Legal Aid Society of New York; the board that created the Legal Action Center; the Vera Institute for Justice; Neighborhood Legal Services of Harlem; and the Capital Defender Project of New York.

The Arthur Liman Professor of Law is Judith Resnik. The director of the Liman Program is Deborah J. Cantrell.

THE ORVILLE H. SCHELL, JR. CENTER FOR INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS

The Orville H. Schell, Jr. Center for International Human Rights was established at Yale Law School in 1989 in honor of Orville Schell, a distinguished New York City lawyer and partner at Hughes, Hubbard & Reed, who was vice chairman of Helsinki Watch and chairman of Americas Watch from its founding in 1981 until his death in 1987.

International human rights practitioners rarely have the opportunity to consider the theoretical issues their work entails, while scholars studying human rights lack a forum for interdisciplinary dialogue. At the same time, law students are eager to apply the lessons they are learning in the classroom to further the cause of human rights. The Schell Center addresses these needs by seeking to increase knowledge and understanding of international human rights issues; equip lawyers and other professionals with the skills needed to advance the cause of international human rights; and assist human rights organizations.

Living Wages in Today's Global Economy,” “From the Chicago 7 to the Cuban 5: Defending Civil Liberties,” and “How International Law Failed Cambodia and What a Yale Law Student Did to Change It.” As it does each year, the Schell Center held a human rights career panel and sponsored several panels of Schell Summer Fellows, who spoke about their experience and the issues raised by their summer work.

The Schell Center administers several human rights fellowships. The Robert L. Bernstein Fellowship in International Human Rights, inaugurated in 1997, funds two recent Yale Law School graduates annually to engage in full-time human rights work for a year. In 2003–2004, Bernstein Fellows worked to develop strategies to combat sexual abuse and harassment of girls in West African schools and, with the Center for Justice and International Law in Washington, D.C., to bring economic, social, and cultural rights cases in the inter-American human rights system. The center invites established scholars and advocates to visit the Law School as Schell Fellows to conduct research, teach seminars, and meet with students. Each summer, the center provides students with travel grants for international human rights work. In 2003, Schell Summer Fellowships allowed thirty-five students to spend all or part of the summer doing human rights internships or research throughout the world. The Robert M. Cover/Allard K. Lowenstein Fellow in International Human Rights Law spends two years at the Law School, working on all aspects of the center's work, including supervision of the Lowenstein Clinic. The Schell Center supports the Lowenstein International Human Rights Project, the Yale Human Rights and Development Law Journal, and other student projects related to human rights.

The center has received generous support from the John Merck Fund and friends and associates of Orville H. Schell, Jr., as well as the law firm of Hughes, Hubbard & Reed, the Merck Pharmaceutical Foundation, and the Arthur Ross Foundation.

The director of the Schell Center is Professor Paul W. Kahn. The executive director is Professor James J. Silk. The Cover/Lowenstein Fellow is Mary J. Hahn. The Schell Center's e-mail address is schell.law@yale.edu.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR STUDY IN LEGAL HISTORY

The study of American, English, and European legal history occupies an important place in the Law School's curriculum. Recent and current offerings include courses on the history of the common law, the history of criminal procedure, constitutional history, American legal history, and European legal history. Seminars and lectures by outside scholars in legal history supplement the regular curricular offerings. An informal legal history program brings together students and faculty interested in legal history; it includes students and faculty from the Law School and the Yale Department of History as well as from elsewhere within and outside the University. The Law School also encourages advanced study and original research in American, English, and European legal history. A few students pursue the joint J.D.–Ph.D. program in History or in American Studies.
VISITING SCHOLARS

Each year the Law School has in residence a few visiting scholars engaged in nondegree research. Visiting scholars may audit one or two courses per term (with the consent of individual instructors) and make use of library facilities for their work. There are no set requirements for admission; most visiting scholars are college and university teachers from law and other disciplines who are engaged in law-related work, but applications will be considered from any person of outstanding qualifications. Each visiting scholar is charged a minimum accommodation fee of $3,000 per term, or $6,000 per academic year. No financial aid from the Law School is available for scholars in this program.

Application can be made by letter to Visiting Scholar Program, Yale Law School, PO Box 208215, New Haven CT 06520-8215. Applications must include a résumé or c.v.; a description of the proposed research, including a statement explaining why Yale Law School is a particularly appropriate affiliation for your work; two letters of recommendation; and the proposed length and dates of stay.

The application deadlines are April 1 for the fall term and September 1 for the spring term.

IRVING S. RIBICOFF FELLOWSHIP FOR POST-GRADUATE RESEARCH

The Irving S. Ribicoff Fellowship for Post-Graduate Research is awarded each year to a recent Yale Law School graduate interested in becoming a law teacher. The recipient spends a year in residence at the Law School working on a scholarly writing project and preparing for a teaching career in law. Any recent Yale Law School graduate is eligible to apply, including those with J.D., LL.M., M.S.L., or other graduate law degrees. A currently enrolled Yale Law student who will graduate before the term of the fellowship commences also may apply. The fellow receives a yearly stipend of $25,000, standard University benefits, and a private, lockable carrel in the Law Library. The fellow must be in residence in New Haven during the term of the fellowship. The deadline for applications for the 2005–2006 academic year is February 4, 2005. For more information, send an e-mail to ribicoff.fellowship@yale.edu.
Grades

Grades for all degree students are:

Credit: the course has been completed satisfactorily; no particular level of performance is specified.

Honors: work done in the course is significantly superior to the average level of performance in the School.

Pass: successful performance of the work in the course.

Low Pass: work done in the course is below the level of performance expected for the award of a degree.

Failure: no credit is given for the course.

Requirement Completed (RC): indicates J.D. preparticipation in Moot Court or Barristers’ Union.

There is no required or indicative “curve” for grades in Law School classes. Individual class rank is not computed.

Academic Requirements and Options

REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF JURIS DOCTOR (J.D.)

To qualify for the J.D. degree, students must at all times meet the conditions to continue as a degree candidate, must complete a total of 82 units of satisfactory work, must satisfy the writing requirements, must spend at least six full terms or the equivalent thereof in residence, and must be recommended for the degree by the faculty. Failure to attend scheduled classes without good cause, such as illness, constitutes adequate grounds for dismissal from the Law School. A maximum of 10 of the 82 units required for graduation may be approved for independent research and reading. No degree will be awarded with incomplete work remaining on a student's record.

First Term

Each student must take courses in Constitutional Law, Contracts, Procedure, and Torts. In one of these subjects, the student is assigned to a small group. This seminar-style course, with about sixteen students, integrates elementary training in legal research and writing with the regular course work. All first-term courses are graded on a credit/fail basis.
Curriculum after the First Term

After the first term, students must satisfactorily complete at least 66 units of credit. Students are free to select their own curriculum, but by graduation they must complete (1) Criminal Law and Administration, (2) a course of at least two units “substantially devoted” to issues of legal ethics or professional responsibility, and (3) the writing requirements described below. Courses that meet the legal ethics/professional responsibility requirement are marked with an asterisk.

A student must enroll in no fewer than 12 and no more than 16 units of credit in any term unless approval is given by the associate dean in charge of student affairs and by the registrar.

Conditions for Continuing as a J.D. Candidate

J.D. students who receive a Failure in any course or individual work may, with permission of the instructor, repeat the same for credit and must repeat and pass the same if it is a required course. Students will be disqualified as J.D. candidates and will not be allowed to continue in the School if they receive (a) two Failures in any one term, (b) a total of three Failures, (c) Low Pass or Failure in four or more courses or individual work programs by the end of the third term, (d) Low Pass or Failure in five or more courses by the end of the fourth term, (e) Low Pass or Failure in six or more courses by the end of the fifth term, or (f) Low Pass or Failure in a total of seven or more courses or individual work. A student who has been disqualified as a J.D. candidate for not maintaining satisfactory grades will not be readmitted without a vote of the faculty.

At the end of a student’s first or second term, the associate dean in charge of student affairs will consult with any student who appears to be doing marginal work. The dean will discuss with the student the advisability of continuing in the Law School.

Limitations on Credit/Fail Units

A faculty member may offer a course or program of individual work on a credit/fail basis if the work is of such character that the faculty member believes it is not feasible to give individual grades. A faculty member may offer any course or program of individual work on a credit/fail basis for some or all of the students participating. If a student is given a credit/fail option, the student must exercise the option within the first two weeks of the term. Credit/fail work will not be accepted toward fulfillment of the Supervised Analytic Writing requirement, but papers written to meet the Substantial Paper requirement may be graded on a credit/fail basis.

After the first term, a student must take at least 51 units of graded work. At least 9 of these units must be taken in the second term of law school. No more than a total of 5 units of ungraded credit in student-directed programs may be counted toward the degree.
Writing Requirements

For graduation, the faculty requires that each student undertake 3 units of Supervised Analytic Writing and prepare a Substantial Paper of at least 2 units. Prior to beginning work on a Supervised Analytic Writing paper or Substantial Paper, a student should secure the approval of the supervising faculty member. At least one of these writing requirements must be satisfied before a student can register for a fifth term at the Law School. Specifically, the Law School requires that the professor supervising one of those writing projects must certify the student’s completion of the project before the student can register for her or his fifth term (see page 97); the faculty certification must include a grade for the paper.

A Supervised Analytic Writing paper for 3 units involves work that is closely supervised by a Law School faculty member and is designed to increase the student’s proficiency in legal research, analytic reasoning, and writing in a single field of concentration; the paper may not be purely descriptive in character. Supervised Analytic Writing papers may not be submitted on a credit/fail basis.

A Substantial Paper for 2 units of credit, although not necessarily meeting the criteria for a Supervised Analytic Writing paper, must be a significant written project. Professors may accept Substantial Papers on either a graded or credit/fail basis.

Supervised Analytic Writing papers or Substantial Papers may be prepared in connection with (1) seminars or courses, (2) independent research and writing under faculty supervision (see page 88), (3) the Intensive Semester Research Program (see pages 89–90), or (4) a program of research and writing, conducted under the joint supervision of two faculty members and spread over two terms, which is related to a course or seminar offered by one or both of the faculty members. Work done in courses outside the Law School will not be accepted in satisfaction of the writing requirements.

Options within the Course of Study for the Degree of Juris Doctor (J.D.)

Research and Writing Opportunities

The Law School offers a number of opportunities for students to engage in research and writing under faculty supervision:

1. Research and writing in the first-term small group (see page 83).
2. Research and writing in a clinical program (see pages 86–87).
3. Research and writing in connection with seminars or courses.
4. Independent research and writing under faculty supervision (see page 88).
5. Research and writing in connection with the Intensive Semester Research Program (see pages 89–90).
6. A program of research and writing, conducted under the joint supervision of two faculty members and spread over two terms, which is related to a course or seminar offered by one or both of the faculty members.
A list of faculty members able to supervise papers in a given term, their areas of interest, and other pertinent information is available at the registrar’s office. The faculty encourages students to publish their written work in law journals and other periodicals and to make this work available to other scholars as reference material. A number of prizes are awarded for outstanding scholarly writing (see pages 180–82).

Clinical Programs

The Jerome N. Frank Legal Services Organization (LSO) links law students with individuals and organizations in need of legal help but unable to afford private attorneys. Students, supervised by Law School faculty members and participating attorneys, interview clients, write briefs, prepare witnesses, try cases, negotiate settlements, draft documents, participate in commercial transactions, arrange “deals,” and argue appeals in state and federal courts, including the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and the Connecticut Supreme Court.*

LSO’s work is divided into ten main projects: (1) Advocacy for Children and Youth, representing family members in juvenile court cases, particularly abuse, neglect, termination of parental rights, and delinquency cases; (2) Community Lawyering, advocating for and representing the urban poor at outreach sites throughout New Haven; (3) Community and Economic Development, providing legal services and other professional (usually business or architectural) consultation to community groups, particularly nonprofit organizations involved in affordable housing and economic development efforts; (4) Immigration, representing individuals seeking political asylum in the United States; (5) Landlord-Tenant, representing indigent tenants in eviction proceedings; (6) Legal Assistance, placing students in area legal aid offices to represent the urban poor in civil matters; (7) Prisons, representing men and women in state and federal prisons in Connecticut; (8) Complex Federal Litigation, representing clients in ongoing federal civil rights cases; (9) Legislative Advocacy, representing clients seeking assistance in researching and drafting Connecticut legislation; and (10) The Samuel and Anna Jacobs Criminal Justice Clinic, representing indigent individuals in criminal matters.

All LSO projects involve close collaboration among new students, experienced students, and supervising clinical faculty. Investigating, developing, and using facts are essential elements of lawyering and, therefore, of LSO’s work. LSO also devotes special attention to issues of professional responsibility and client-centered lawyering. Cases brought by LSO and its legislative efforts have helped make new law protecting the rights of clients in the various projects. Students are eligible to participate in LSO after their first term. LSO also hires law students as “summer associates”; they work full time in the various clinics.

* Since October 1, 1972, first-year law students in Connecticut have been eligible to appear in federal and state proceedings under two different sets of student practice rules. Students who have completed one term of credit may, after certification by the dean, appear in state court and administrative proceedings upon compliance with the provisions of the Superior Court’s Law Student Internship Rule, section 3-16(2) of the Practice Book. Students who have completed legal studies amounting to two terms of credit may appear in federal court upon compliance with the provisions of Rule 26 of the Local Rules of the United States District Court for the District of Connecticut. Training and certification guidelines have been adopted by the Yale Law School faculty in compliance with both sets of rules.

In addition, students may elect to work at either of two local prosecutor’s offices (the New Haven State’s Attorney and the U.S. Attorney) in LSO’s Prosecution Externship. Independent placements may also be arranged at other public interest agencies or law offices.

The Allard K. Lowenstein International Human Rights Law Clinic is a Law School course that gives students firsthand experience in human rights advocacy under the supervision of international human rights lawyers. The clinic undertakes a number of litigation, research, and advocacy projects each term on behalf of human rights organizations and individual victims of human rights abuse. The clinic has worked on cases in U.S. federal courts, the U.N. system, and regional human rights bodies, including the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the African Commission on Human and Peoples’ Rights. It has also drafted legislation, amicus briefs, manuals, and human rights reports.

Several other clinical programs give students direct experience in the practice of law in particular areas. The Environmental Protection Clinic is an interdisciplinary clinic that addresses environmental law and policy problems on behalf of client organizations such as environmental groups, government agencies, and international bodies. The John G. Simon Nonprofit Organizations Clinic provides legal assistance to nonprofit organizations that cannot afford to retain private counsel. The Professional Responsibility Clinic represents complainants in Connecticut’s attorney grievance system.

Student-Directed Forensic, Clinical, and Editorial Programs

In the second term, students may begin participation in programs managed primarily by students under the general supervision of a faculty adviser. These programs are described on pages 115–25. The student-directed programs for which ungraded credit is awarded are the Domestic Violence Temporary Restraining Order Project; Greenhaven Prison Project; Allard K. Lowenstein International Human Rights Law Project; Street Law; Thomas Swan Barristers’ Union; Morris Tyler Moot Court of Appeals; Umoja; Yale Human Rights and Development Law Journal; Yale Journal of Health Policy, Law, and Ethics; Yale Journal of International Law; Yale Journal of Law and Feminism; Yale Journal of Law & Technology; Yale Journal of Law & the Humanities; Yale Journal on Regulation; Yale Law & Policy Review; and The Yale Law Journal.

In general, 1 unit of ungraded credit per term is awarded for participation in these programs. No credit is given for preparticipation portions of Barristers’ Union and Moot Court until a student completes the program; 2 units of ungraded credit are then awarded. Credit is awarded for work on the student-edited journals listed above only for substantial editorial work. In special circumstances, the faculty adviser may approve more than 1 credit per term. No more than a total of 5 credits in student-directed programs may be counted.
toward the degree, and no work for which compensation is received may earn credit toward the degree.

The faculty adviser of each student-directed program is responsible for periodically reviewing the program, and the participation of each student in it, to ensure that educational objectives are being achieved and that credit is commensurate with time, effort, and educational benefits.

Reading Groups and Individual Reading and Research Programs

After the first term and with the approval of a faculty member, students may undertake reading or research programs for credit. There are two types of programs: (1) individual reading and/or research with a faculty member, and (2) faculty-sponsored reading groups. No more than 10 units of credit for reading or research programs may be counted toward the 82 units required for graduation. No more than 4 of these 10 units may be for participation in reading groups.

In the case of individual reading and/or research, the program must be arranged with the faculty member and filed with the registrar’s office within the first two weeks of the term. Usually no more than 6 units in a term may be awarded for individual research and no more than 3 units in a term for individual reading. In addition to the faculty member’s permission, permission of the registrar is also required if the total number of units of credit for individual reading and/or research is more than 3.

In the case of an approved reading group, each participating student may receive no more than 1 unit of credit, which must be ungraded. In order to obtain approval for a reading group, the student(s) organizing the group must submit a written proposal to the registrar within three days after the term commences. The proposal must (1) describe the law-related topic to be examined, (2) provide a tentative reading syllabus, and (3) be signed by the sponsoring faculty member. As noted above, ordinarily no more than 4 units of credit for reading groups may be counted toward the 82 units required for graduation.

Student-Organized Research and Legislative Drafting Seminars

Groups of six or more students may submit written proposals for research or legislative drafting seminars. Such seminars could, for example, be designed to develop legislative or policy approaches to a major societal problem of interest to the group. The proposal should define the proposed topic with reasonable particularity and be subscribed to by the participating students. It should be submitted to the dean or the person designated by the dean by March 1 preceding the academic year for which the seminar is desired. Taking into account the aggregate of the Law School’s curricular needs and the teaching commitments required to meet them, the dean’s office will use its best efforts to identify interested faculty members who may be willing to conduct one or more of the seminars proposed. With the consent of the faculty member conducting such a seminar, students in addition to those proposing it may enroll.
Intensive Semester Research Program

The Intensive Semester Research Program provides an opportunity for students in their fourth or fifth term to immerse themselves intensively in a major research project leading to a significant academic project, either at or away from the Law School. Approval of a proposal for an intensive research semester is restricted to those special situations where devotion of one-sixth of a student's law school career to a single intensive research project has clear academic justification. The Intensive Semester Research Program is not designed to provide an externship experience, law school credit for public service, or opportunities to live away from New Haven for pressing personal reasons.

Under the program, students may devote an entire term to supervised and specialized research overseen by both a member of the Yale Law School faculty and, if away from the Law School, an on-site supervisor. A research project taking place away from the Law School may be located at an archival site or at a site for fieldwork where necessary to advance the student's research goals. Whenever an Intensive Semester is to be pursued at a location away from the Law School, the on-site supervisor who has agreed to supplement the faculty member in overseeing the student's work will be expected, at the conclusion of the Intensive Semester, to submit a report to the faculty supervisor describing and assessing the student's research or fieldwork. Evaluation of the student's written product will remain the responsibility of the supervising faculty member.

To apply for the program a student must submit a comprehensive written research proposal to the registrar. The proposal should describe in detail (1) the student's qualifications to undertake the proposed research; (2) the nature and significance of the research to be undertaken; (3) the expected product of the research; (4) the special circumstances that make an intensive research semester a more effective vehicle for attaining the student's educational goals than a conventional semester spent at the Law School; and (5) the necessary relationship between any fieldwork and the research and writing component. Each proposal must be accompanied by the written approval of the faculty member agreeing to supervise it and a statement by the faculty supervisor indicating why in his or her judgment the proposal should be approved. Each proposal will be reviewed by the Committee on Special Courses of Study for compliance with these requirements.

An intensive research semester can be taken for up to 12 units of credit. The number of units to be graded will be determined by the faculty supervisor, but (1) work performed by the student for credit but not under direct faculty supervision may receive no more than 8 ungraded credits, and (2) at least 4 graded credits must be for the faculty-supervised research paper. The faculty-supervised written work may, with the approval of the instructor, be designated in the application as being undertaken in satisfaction of the Supervised Analytic Writing requirement or the Substantial Paper requirement.
The deadline for Intensive Semester Research proposals is two weeks before the due date for applications for limited-enrollment seminars. An Intensive Semester Research application will not be accepted by the registrar if any of a student’s work in courses previously taken is incomplete. A student whose application has been approved by the Intensive Semester Research Program Committee may register for the Intensive Semester Research Program only if all prior course work is complete. A student may not take an Intensive Research Semester during the final term, nor take more than one Intensive Research Semester while at the Law School. A student who carries out an Intensive Research Semester away from the Law School will be expected to complete the balance of his or her legal education in residence at the Law School. Full tuition is charged during the Intensive Research Semester regardless of where the project is pursued. Financial aid from the Law School will be awarded under the same circumstances and in the same manner as to students in residence. A student may have financial aid budgets adjusted to reflect the extra, non-reimbursed costs, if any, of living and working away from New Haven, but the Law School will not necessarily adjust financial aid for all such extra costs, especially in connection with foreign placements.

A student may not receive compensation from any source for work related to the Intensive Semester Research Program. The student, however, may be permitted to accept reimbursement, from the agency or organization at which the student is located for fieldwork purposes, to cover the extra costs referred to above, if those financial arrangements are disclosed in detail in the application for the Intensive Semester Research Program and are approved in advance by the director of financial aid.

Courses Outside the Law School

After the first term, students may take a limited number of courses in the graduate and professional schools or undergraduate college of Yale University for Law School credit when the courses are relevant to the student’s program of study in the Law School or planned legal career. To obtain permission, students must provide a written statement explaining how the course relates to their legal studies or future law practice and must have (i) the recommendation of a Law School faculty member, (2) permission from the instructor of the course, and (3) permission of the registrar. The registrar shall determine the appropriate number of units of credit to be awarded for the course. No more than one outside course per term is ordinarily allowed, and no more than 12 units of credit for such courses may be counted toward the 82 units required for the degree. The requirements of the other school or department must, of course, be satisfied. Their bulletins are available in the registrar’s office.
JOINT DEGREES

In cooperation with other schools and departments of Yale University, the Law School offers programs leading to a master’s degree and a J.D. (Juris Doctor) or to a doctorate and a J.D. These programs are intended for those who wish to acquire the specialized skills of some body of knowledge related to law. All proposals must be submitted to and approved by the Faculty Committee on Special Courses of Study.

While joint degrees have been most common with the Graduate School and the School of Management, students have also arranged joint work in the Schools of Divinity, Forestry & Environmental Studies, and Medicine. A joint-degree program is also offered in conjunction with the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University. On a case-by-case basis, the Law School has permitted students to pursue joint degrees with relevant programs in other universities as well.

Requests for information on the following programs, including specifics on admission, tuition, curricular requirements, and financial aid, should be directed to the dean in charge of student affairs. Students with an interest in joint-degree work in economics, political science, or other social sciences should also consult Professor Susan Rose-Ackerman or Professor Al Klevorick.

Master of Arts

Some Graduate School departments and programs offer one-year master’s degrees and others, e.g., International Relations, offer two-year programs. In either case, a student can complete a joint J.D.–M.A. program in four years.

At the end of the fourth year, students should have completed all requirements for both the law degree and the one-year master’s degree. Additional courses in the Graduate School are required in two-year master’s degree programs. Individual departments generally also impose requirements such as reading knowledge of a foreign language or passage of particular examinations.

Application for a master’s degree program should be made at the same time as application to the Law School or during the student’s first or second year at the Law School. Initial inquiries should be directed to the dean in charge of student affairs. Application to the Graduate School should be made by the first working day in January preceding the fall term in which the student wishes to begin work, although late applications may be considered at the discretion of the Graduate School. Detailed instructions on admissions should be obtained from the Graduate School Office of Admissions. Students should also consult the director of graduate studies in the relevant department. The Graduate School bulletin is available in the registrar’s office of the Law School.
Master of Business Administration

The Master of Business Administration (M.B.A.) is offered by the School of Management. In this program, students receive an exceptionally rigorous business education. Beyond this, students receive the broad intellectual framework and practical skills that are essential for leadership today. Normally a two-year program, the M.B.A. may be earned with only one additional year of course work by joint-degree candidates who are students at the Law School. Students may apply to both the Law and Management schools simultaneously or to one school during their first year at the other.

Doctorate

It is possible to combine study for the J.D. and Ph.D. degrees. The total time in residence and the details of each program of study must be taken up with the Graduate School, the director of graduate studies in the relevant department, and the Law School. Students interested in such a program must be admitted to the two schools separately. They may apply to both simultaneously or, having been admitted to the Law School or the Graduate School, may apply for admission to the other program. Ordinarily, the Law School encourages a joint-degree candidate to complete the J.D. within four years. Inquiries concerning joint J.D.–Ph.D. programs should be directed to the dean in charge of student affairs. The deadline for application to Ph.D. programs is early in January.

Leaves of Absence, Extending Time for Completion of Degree, and Credit for Work Done at Another Law School

Leaves of Absence and Readmission

A leave of absence may be taken only with the permission of the dean or the dean’s delegate. Such a leave may be arranged under such terms as the dean deems appropriate, provided that a definite time be fixed for the return of the student to the Law School and that the following limitations shall apply. A student who has completed at least one term and who has been on leave of absence for no more than two academic years shall be readmitted unless the dean recommends otherwise to the faculty in extraordinary cases. In the case of a student who has not completed one term, a leave of absence will ordinarily not be granted except on serious medical or personal grounds. Where a leave has been granted on such grounds, the dean may authorize readmission within a period of two academic years. Readmission following leaves of more than two academic years may be granted in accordance with and upon completion of the terms of a plan approved by the dean prior to taking a leave. Such extended leaves may be arranged for personal or academic reasons. Agreements for extended leaves shall provide a definite time for return that, except in unusual circumstances, shall not exceed four years.
Readmission after a leave of more than two academic years may be conditional upon less than full credit being allowed for prior work completed. In such cases, with the consent of the dean, students will not be excluded from taking courses for which prior credit had been earned. The original credit for such courses will be canceled. Tuition will be charged in accordance with the rates prevailing at the time of the readmission and be proportionate to the academic course load.

Readmission in any circumstances other than those described may be sought by petition to the Law School faculty.

Extending Time for Completion of Degree

Yale Law School requires students to complete their work for the J.D. degree in six terms in residence or the equivalent thereof. The Law School recognizes, however, that some students have special needs—arising out of serious illness, severe economic constraints, or extraordinary familial obligations—to extend their period of study. In such circumstances, students may petition to reduce their course load for a number of terms. Such petitions are subject to the following conditions:

1. All students must complete the required work of the first term on a full-load basis.
2. Upon satisfactory completion of the first term, a student may petition to reduce the work of any one term from the normal minimum of 12 units to fewer units; but in no event may a student register, even on a reduced-load basis, for fewer than 8 units per term. Ordinarily permission shall be granted only in cases of serious illness, severe economic need, or extraordinary familial obligation.
3. Students who receive permission to pursue some of their work on a reduced-load basis must complete 82 units of satisfactory work in no more than eight terms of residence.
4. Upon acceptance by the Law School and before submitting a deposit, students may request that the dean rule on whether their particular situation is such as to justify a reduced-load curriculum, as described above, after the first term. Such a ruling would be conditional on the continuation, after the first term, of the situation that made reduced-load law study appropriate.

Credit for Work Done at Another Law School

A student wishing to obtain credit toward the J.D. degree for work done at another law school is required to petition the dean for permission. The dean shall ordinarily grant such permission only in cases of personal hardship or for compelling curricular reasons. In granting such permission, the dean must find that the proposed program of study is acceptable and that it will count toward meeting Yale Law School’s degree requirements for no more than 24 units of credit, or their equivalent. Such credit will be given only for work completed in residence at the other law school, with a weighted average which is to be determined in advance by the dean, and which in no event would be less than the equivalent of a Pass at this Law School. In those cases where the dean has reasonable doubt about granting a petition he will refer the matter to the faculty. Students denied permission by the dean may, of course, petition the faculty to have their request reviewed. In no case will more than one year of residence and unit credit be granted for work taken at another school. Work done at another law school will not be accepted in satisfaction of the writing requirements.

BAR REQUIREMENTS

Admission to practice law depends not only upon adequate academic performance in law school and successful completion of the bar examination, but upon satisfaction of the requirements of the particular jurisdiction as to subject matter and proof of good character. These requirements differ from state to state, and students should inform themselves of the requirements of the jurisdictions in which they are interested. Because some states have early registration requirements, students should check state rules as soon as possible.

REQUIREMENTS FOR GRADUATE DEGREES

The Degree of Master of Laws (LL.M.)

The Law School admits a limited number of graduate students each year to pursue studies in law beyond the first professional degree. Admission is generally open only to those committed to a career in teaching law.

Graduate students are admitted for one year of study leading to the degree of Master of Laws (LL.M.). An LL.M. candidate’s program of study consists of at least 18 units of regular course and seminar offerings (in the Law School or other schools in the University), participation in student-run programs, and up to 6 units of independent research and writing for credit under the supervision of a Law School faculty member. With approval, up to 6 units of credit toward the LL.M. degree can be earned in courses in other schools in the University. No uniform course of study is prescribed for LL.M. candidates. Subject to meeting degree requirements and to the approval of the student’s academic adviser, each LL.M. candidate is invited to utilize the resources of the Law School in whatever program of study will best prepare that individual for a career in research and teaching.

The LL.M. program runs from September through May; there are no January admissions. LL.M. candidates must carry a total of no fewer than 12 units of credit per term. Changes in the program may be arranged during the first week of each term. At least two terms must be spent in residence. To qualify for the LL.M. degree a candidate must successfully complete a minimum of 24 units of credit with a grade average of at least Pass for all work taken for credit. Up to 6 units per year (or 8 units if a candidate takes a first-term ungraded course) may be taken credit/fail only with the consent of the instructor. Work taken credit/fail must be designated as such on the records of the registrar at the time of registration and may be so designated subsequent to registration only with approval of the dean's office.

For information on admissions procedures for the LL.M., please see pages 110–11.

The Degree of Doctor of the Science of Law (J.S.D.)

The Doctor of the Science of Law (J.S.D.) program is open only to LL.M. graduates of the Yale Law School. Students who have earned an LL.M. degree from another institution are admitted rarely and only under extraordinary circumstances. (Interested students from outside the Law School should contact the director of graduate programs [203.432.1681] to discuss their application plans prior to submitting a formal application.)

To qualify for the J.S.D. degree, an admitted candidate must submit a dissertation that is a substantial contribution to legal scholarship. At least two terms of work must be spent in residence at the School. This requirement may be satisfied by residence as an LL.M. candidate. At least one additional year, not necessarily in residence, must be devoted to the preparation and revision of the dissertation. In the case of those whose original legal training was not in the United States, the Graduate Committee may require the additional year of residency. If the dissertation or any portion of it is thereafter published, it shall state that it has been submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for a graduate law degree at Yale Law School.

Students from abroad should see page 141 for information about international students at Yale.

For information on admissions procedures for the J.S.D. program, please see page 111–12.

The Degree of Master of Studies in Law (M.S.L.)

The Law School has established the Master of Studies in Law degree program for a small number of non-lawyers who want to obtain a basic familiarity with legal thought and to explore the relation of law to their disciplines. It is a one-year terminal program designed for those who do not desire a professional law degree, but who are interested in a more formal relationship to the Law School and a more rigorous curriculum than that offered by the visiting scholar program. Candidates in the M.S.L. program are ordinarily experienced scholars with research or teaching objectives in mind, or journalists seeking an intensive immersion in legal thinking so that they are better able to educate their audiences upon their return to journalism. Those who have completed a professional law degree are not eligible for the program.
Candidates for the M.S.L. degree are required to complete the first year of the J.D. program (27 units), including a small group. There are four required first-term courses (Constitutional Law, Contracts, Procedure, and Torts); the M.S.L. candidate may substitute an elective for one of those courses (see page 83). Typically no more than 6 units of credit for courses outside the Law School can be counted toward the degree. The second term is entirely elective and affords opportunities for independent research and clinical experience in addition to regular courses and seminars. In the second term, students must take at least 10 graded units of the 12 units required. Students will be disqualified as M.S.L. candidates if they accumulate more than one Failure in the first term, or more than a total of two Low Passes or two Failures for the academic year. Participants in the M.S.L. program are not eligible for subsequent admission to the J.D. program.

For information on admissions procedures for the M.S.L. program, please see page 113.
All new J.D. students and all graduate students are required to register in person on September 2, 2004, at the Law School.

All returning J.D. students are required to register in person on September 7, 2004, at the Law School. Students may not register for their fifth term unless they have completed one of the two writing requirements (see page 85).

All students must register in person for the spring term on January 24, 2005.

A fee of $35 will be charged for late registration. This fee will be waived only with written permission to register late from the appropriate associate dean. Written permission must be received prior to the designated registration day. First-year J.D. students will not be allowed to register for the first time unless they have provided the registrar with two passport-sized photographs and an official transcript confirming the award of a bachelor’s degree. Transfer students must provide the School with two passport-sized photographs and official transcripts of a bachelor’s degree and the first year of law school. Individual classes commence on the date announced in the schedule of classes as published by the registrar’s office of the Law School.
Course Selection, Limited Enrollment, Examinations and Papers

Course Selection

During the first five days following registration all J.D. students, except first-term students, and all graduate students may sample courses and rearrange course selections. After that time period, a student may not add or drop a course or seminar unless (a) on application to the instructor, the student can establish good cause for adding or dropping the course; (b) the registrar concurs in the recommendation of the instructor; and (c) the student retains at least 12 units and no more than 16 units for the term, unless approval is given by the associate dean and the registrar.

Forms for adding and dropping courses must be signed by a member of the faculty and filed with the registrar’s office. A course in which an examination is required must be added or dropped at least one week before the last week of classes. In fall 2004, the deadline for adding or dropping such a course will be Friday, December 17; in spring 2005, the deadline will be Friday, April 29. A fee of $10, $20, or $60 will be charged for each late course change, depending on the time of the change. A fee of $100 will be charged for any course change that occurs in a term subsequent to the term in which the course was offered. In the absence of written permission, a course or individual work elected but not completed will, at the close of the term, be deemed a Failure. No degree will be awarded with incomplete work remaining on a student’s record.

Limited Enrollment

Faculty members may set limits or special qualifications for a course and these will be specified in the course description. If no such limitations have been set, enrollment in a given course will be limited only by the availability of classroom space. If enrollment is limited, then students must apply during a special sign-up period that usually occurs in April for fall-term courses and in December for spring-term courses.

A student applying for more than one course in which enrollment is limited must indicate preferences among these courses by designating a first choice, a second choice, and up to three third choices. This ranking may be used by faculty in making selections among students. A student who is accepted in such a limited course must enroll in that course during the first online enrollment period, or the student’s place in the course may be offered to someone else.
EXAMINATIONS AND PAPERS

Examinations for all degree students at the Law School are given during a period (normally two weeks) at the end of the term. All papers assigned during the term, and all papers submitted in lieu of examinations in courses where that is authorized, shall become due, unless otherwise indicated in writing by the instructor, on the final day of the examination period for that term.

The registrar may, for good cause shown, permit students to take an examination at a time different from that indicated on the official examination schedule. Requests for such permission may only be made during the last week of classes, except in case of sudden emergencies, such as illness. In fall 2004, requests for rescheduled examinations must be made between December 15 and 22; in spring 2005, between May 2 and 6. For good cause, instructors may authorize extensions of time for the completion of papers. The authorization must be in writing, and extensions will be permitted for no more than sixty days after the close of the term in which the paper is assigned.

Approval for extensions of time beyond these limits shall be given only where the student obtains, in writing, permission from both the instructor and the registrar. Such permission must include a specific due date and must be filed with the registrar. If the student does not meet regular or extended deadlines for papers and examinations, the professor may award a grade of Failure for such papers and examinations.
Admissions, Expenses, and Financial Aid

THE DEGREE OF JURIS DOCTOR (J.D.)

Admissions

The small size of Yale Law School—approximately 185 in each entering class—requires an extremely selective admissions process. Admission is subject to approval by the dean, pursuant to policies promulgated by the faculty of the School and the Corporation of Yale University. Overall, the Law School seeks the most promising students, in terms of their professional and academic distinction. Students are considered for admission regardless of financial need.

An application and information brochure may be downloaded or requested through the Yale Law School Web site at www.law.yale.edu/jdrequest; or by writing to the Office of Admissions, Yale Law School, PO Box 208329, New Haven CT 06520-8329.

To apply for the class entering in September 2005, an applicant must:

1. Have received or expect to receive a bachelor’s degree (or the equivalent) from an approved college before registration day.
3. Arrange for the submission of transcripts of undergraduate and graduate schools attended to the Law School Admission Council (LSAC) for the Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS). Any new undergraduate grades received during the application process may be submitted through the LSDAS, which sends updated reports to law schools.
4. Arrange for the timely submission of at least two letters of recommendation from professors under whom the applicant has studied (preferably in high-level courses in the major field of study). Applicants who have been out of school for some time may substitute letters from employers or others who know them well. Applicants should submit letters through the LSAC letter of recommendation service, which is included as part of the LSDAS registration subscription. Please see the current LSAT/LSDAS registration book for instructions for using this service. If a recommender wishes to write specifically about the applicant’s qualifications for study at Yale Law School, rather than for the study of law in general, the letter may be sent directly to Yale. All other letters should be sent through the LSAC.
5. Complete and submit an admissions application form. The application must be postmarked or date-stamped by February 1, 2005. It is the applicant’s responsibility to make certain all items arrive at Yale in a timely fashion.

   We strongly encourage applicants to apply electronically using the LSACD or the LSACD on the Web software, which is available for purchase from the LSAC, online at www.lsac.org or by telephone at 215.968.1001.

6. Pay the nonrefundable application fee of $70.
A completed file consists of the application form, a 250-word essay, two letters of recommendation, and an LSDAS report. For applicants whose undergraduate work was outside the United States or Canada, and not at an institution with an American-style grading system (see LSDAS registration booklet for more information), a completed file contains, instead of an LSDAS report, an LSAT score report and an official certification of work done abroad.

Applications are considered roughly in the order in which they are completed. Applicants are encouraged to submit their applications as soon as possible after September 1. We suggest this early autumn date because both the Law School and the LSAC must process large volumes of material. Applicants who submit materials after December 1 should expect a longer processing time.

The Law School's admissions office notifies applicants by e-mail or postcard when their application has been received and when it is complete. Frequent phone and e-mail inquiries about application status delay consideration of applications. Applicants should not telephone to inquire about decisions unless deposit deadlines at other law schools are involved.

An applicant to whom an offer of admission is being made will be notified immediately after the decision is made. An application may be “held” for later consideration if the applicant does not quite meet the competition of those currently being admitted but has strong qualifications that indicate possible admission later in the season. A file may be read by as many as four faculty readers; therefore, few applicants receive a decision before early March.

Upon notification of acceptance, an applicant must deposit $250 before the acceptance will be deemed final and a place held for the applicant in the next class. The deposit is fully refundable if the Law School is notified by June 1 that the admitted student intends to withdraw; after that date, the deposit will not be refunded.

An accepted applicant to Yale Law School who has submitted the required acceptance deposit may petition the admissions committee for a one-year deferral. Deferral requests should be made as soon as possible after acceptance. Deferral petitions are considered and granted on a case-by-case basis. Applicants admitted from the waiting list are ineligible for deferral. In exceptional cases, such as foreign academic programs, a two-year deferral may be granted.

When a deferral is granted, the student's acceptance deposit will be credited to the student’s account upon matriculation. A further confirmation deposit will be required by March 15 of the year in which the student intends to enroll.

No person is eligible for admission who has been excluded from any law, graduate, or professional school for deficiency in scholarship or because of misconduct. Any material misstatements on the application form or any form of application dishonesty (including fraudulent practices relating to the LSAT) will be considered disqualifying misconduct by the admissions committee.

No student may commence studies as a first-year student in the J.D. program in the spring term; all new J.D. students must start in the fall term. The Law School does not have an evening division, nor is there a summer session. Yale Law School offers no online or correspondence courses.

Any requests for exceptions to the admissions and application requirements stated above should be addressed in writing to the Office of Admissions, Yale Law School, PO Box 208329, New Haven CT 06520-8329.

Personal interviews are not part of the admissions process.

Information concerning LSAC services, including the LSDAS and the LSAT, may be found in the registration booklet for the LSAT, which is usually available through college prelaw advisers, career planning offices, or directly from the Law School Admission Council (LSAC), online at www.lsac.org; Box 2000, Newtown PA 18940-0998; or telephone 215.968.1001. Additional information is contained in The Official Guide to U.S. Law Schools, published by the LSAC and the ABA.

Transfer Policy/Advanced Standing

Students who have done one year of full-time work (or the equivalent) in residence at another U.S. law school may apply to transfer to Yale. At least two years’ work must be done at Yale Law School. Credit will be granted only if the other school is approved by the American Bar Association and if the applicant maintained a weighted grade average of not less than B (or an equivalent) for all work in that school. To be considered, an applicant must have received or expect to receive a bachelor’s degree (or the equivalent) before matriculating at Yale Law School. Applicants in special programs in U.S. law schools who have completed the first year of law school while completing the requirements for a bachelor’s degree may be considered for transfer.

Application forms for transfer may be downloaded at www.law.yale.edu/jdrequest. They may also be obtained by e-mailing admissions.law@yale.edu, or by writing to the Admissions Office, Yale Law School, PO Box 208329, New Haven CT 06520-8329.

Transfer applications must be filed by July 1. A completed file includes an application form, a 250-word essay, an LSDAS report, law school transcripts, and at least two letters of recommendation from law school professors. LSDAS reports should be updated to reflect the applicant’s complete undergraduate record. Spring-term law school grades must be received by Yale Law School before decisions can be made. Please see the application form for further information. Decisions on transfer candidates will be made during the first week of August.

Normally, applicants from foreign law schools should apply for admission to the first year of the J.D. program. Requests for advanced standing based on work done outside the United States should be made to the associate dean in charge of student affairs after an offer of admission to the first-year program has been made.
Visiting Students

In special circumstances, a student enrolled at another law school may apply for admission on a full-time, nondegree basis. Visiting students may attend for a term or a year, earning credit toward a degree at their own institutions. The admissions committee considers past academic performance as well as the special circumstances in deciding about such requests.

Students who wish to apply as visiting students should submit their application to the Admissions Office in an envelope marked “Visiting Student Request.” A complete application for visiting students contains an application form, a 250-word essay, an LSDAS report, a law school transcript, two letters of recommendation from law school professors, and a cover letter explaining the applicant’s reason for visiting. LSDAS reports should be updated to reflect the applicant’s complete undergraduate record.

A visiting student must have permission from his or her degree-granting school to earn credit for course work at Yale. Any conditions imposed by that school must also be communicated to the associate dean in charge of student affairs. The student must pay full tuition to Yale Law School and is eligible to apply for federal and supplemental loans, but is not eligible for Law School scholarship money. The student may have limited or restricted access to participation in student-run journals and may have a lower priority than Yale Law students in limited-enrollment courses.

Financing Law School

Quality legal education is expensive, and the Law School draws on the University, alumni, and friends to keep annual tuition well below the per student cost of education. Through a combination of loan, grant, and postgraduate loan forgiveness programs, the School seeks to reduce further the burden of education costs on those students demonstrating financial need. Approximately three-quarters of the student body now receives some form of financial assistance. Extensive assistance to meet the cost of loan repayment for graduates is provided through the Career Options Assistance Program. Yale Law School is also an approved program for educational benefits from the Veterans Administration.

Tuition and Expenses

Tuition is $18,245 per term, including mandatory fees. The total yearly bill is $36,490, not including other necessary expenses such as books, food, housing, hospitalization insurance fees, etc. Information on housing costs can be found on page 131. Bills are payable before the beginning of each term at the University Office of Student Financial Services.

The $250 deposit required in the spring will be credited on the tuition bill if the student registers in the fall. If the applicant withdraws by June 1, the deposit will be refunded. After that date, the deposit will not be refunded. A student receiving an admission deferral (see page 102) will, upon matriculation, receive tuition credit for all deposits, but such a student will forfeit admission deposits if the student withdraws after June 1 of the year in which the deposit was made.

Students will be charged a special roster fee of $100 per term to be maintained on the school records during periods of nonattendance.

Because of changes in federal regulations governing the return of federal student aid (Title IV) funds for withdrawn students, the tuition rebate and refund policy has changed from that of recent years. The following rules became effective on July 1, 2000.

1. For purposes of determining the refund of federal student aid funds, any student who withdraws from Yale Law School for any reason during the first 60 percent of the term shall receive a pro rata rebate of tuition.

2. For purposes of determining the refund of institutional aid funds and for students who have not received financial aid, the following shall apply:

If a first-time student withdraws for any reason on or before the first day of classes in the first term at Yale Law School, tuition will be rebated in full (excluding, after June 1, 2004, the nonrefundable admission deposit). If the student withdraws on or before November 22, 2004, in the fall term (i.e., during the first 60 percent of the student’s first term), tuition will be rebated pro rata.
For all other students who withdraw:

- tuition for a term will be rebated in full if the withdrawal occurs during the first tenth of the term (in the fall, on or before September 17, 2004; in the spring, on or before February 3, 2005);

- 50 percent of tuition for a term will be rebated if the withdrawal occurs after the first tenth but during the first quarter of the term (in the fall, on or before October 5, 2004; in the spring, on or before February 19, 2005);

- 25 percent will be rebated if the withdrawal occurs during the second quarter of the term (in the fall, on or before November 11, 2004; in the spring, on or before March 27, 2005).

- There will be no rebate for withdrawals after midterm.

The estimated minimum amounts required for all expenses for the academic year, including tuition, are stated in the section on financial aid (page 108).

STUDENT ACCOUNTS AND BILLS

Student accounts, billing, and related services are administered through the Office of Student Financial Services, which is located at 246 Church Street. The telephone number is 203.432.2700.

Yale Charge Account

Students who sign and return a Yale Charge Card Account Authorization form will be able to charge designated optional items and services to their student accounts. Students who want to charge toll calls made through the University’s telephone system to their accounts must sign and return this Charge Card Account Authorization. The University may withdraw this privilege from students who do not pay their monthly bills on a timely basis. For more information, contact the Office of Student Financial Services at 246 Church Street, PO Box 208232, New Haven CT 06520-8232; telephone, 203.432.2700; fax, 203.432.7557; e-mail, sfs@yale.edu.

Yale Payment Plan

The Yale Payment Plan is a payment service that allows students and their families to pay tuition, room, and board in eleven or twelve equal monthly installments throughout the year based on individual family budget requirements. It is administered for the University by Academic Management Services (AMS). To enroll by telephone, call 800.635.0120. The fee to cover administration of the plan is $65. The deadline for enrollment is June 18. For additional information, please contact AMS at the number above or visit their Web site at www.tuitionpay.com/.
Bills

A student may not register for any term unless all bills due for that and for any prior term are paid in full.

Bills for tuition, room, and board are mailed to the student during the first week of July, due and payable by August 1 for the fall term; and during the first week of November, due and payable by December 1 for the spring term. The Office of Student Financial Services will impose a late charge if any part of the term bill, less Yale-administered loans and scholarships that have been applied for on a timely basis, is not paid when due. The late charge will be imposed as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>If fall-term payment in full is not received</th>
<th>Late charge</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>by August 1</td>
<td>$110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>by September 1</td>
<td>an additional 110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>by October 1</td>
<td>an additional 110</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
If spring-term payment in full is not received

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Late charge</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>by December 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>by January 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>by February 1</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Nonpayment of bills and failure to complete and submit financial aid application packages on a timely basis may result in the student’s involuntary withdrawal from the University.

No degrees will be conferred and no transcripts will be furnished until all bills due the University are paid in full. In addition, transcripts will not be furnished to any student or former student who is in default on the payment of a student loan.

Charge for Returned Checks

A processing charge of $20 will be assessed for checks returned for any reason by the bank on which they were drawn. In addition, the following penalties may apply if a check is returned:

1. If the check was in payment of a term bill, a $110 late fee will be charged for the period the bill was unpaid.
2. If the check was in payment of a term bill to permit registration, the student’s registration may be revoked.
3. If the check was given in payment of an unpaid balance in order to receive a diploma, the University may refer the account to an attorney for collection.

FINANCIAL AID

Applicants for financial aid must complete a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), which is available online at www.fafsa.ed.gov. A Need Access application is also required and is available online at www.needaccess.org. Applications must be submitted no later than March 15 for entering students, or April 1 for continuing students. No financial aid application will be processed unless it is completely filled out, including the required information about parents’ finances. Students who are twenty-nine years of age or older and have been independent for three years need not supply information about parental finances.

The estimated budget for a single student for travel, books, and all living costs for the academic year 2004–2005 is $13,500. The estimated budget for a married couple (no children) is $18,950. Individual cases may, of course, vary from these estimates, but all financial aid need determinations are based on these averages.

Among the goals of the aid policy are allocating scholarship resources to the neediest students and balancing graduates’ educational indebtedness. The Law School therefore uses a formula that increases the proportion of grant as total need increases. Students whose total need is relatively low will normally receive only loan assistance. While the formula varies each year, in 2004–2005 students are expected to meet $27,000–$28,500 of need with loans, typically relying on federally guaranteed loans to the maximum extent possible. The remainder of each award above the required loan portion is ordinarily met through supplemental loans and scholarship grants from the Law School.

In calculating individual financial aid awards, the student’s financial resources—including student assets, summer and term-time employment, and spouse’s and parents’ contribution—are taken into account. The Law School treats students who are twenty-nine years old or older at the time they enter the Law School and who have been fully independent of parental support for more than three consecutive years as financially independent from their parents. For students twenty-seven and twenty-eight years old at entrance, only one-half of the calculated parental contribution will be treated as a resource.

A brochure containing detailed information on financial aid policies is available from the Financial Aid Office, Yale Law School, PO Box 208215, New Haven CT 06520-8215 or online at www.law.yale.edu in the “Students” section of the Web site. The director and staff of the office are available to discuss financial aid matters.

SUMMER PUBLIC INTEREST FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

The Summer Public Interest Fellowship program (SPIF) provides funds to Yale students working at public interest, government, and nonprofit organizations. In the summer of 2003, the Law School provided fellowships for 128 students in the United States and around the world.

Student eligibility is based on financial need. Those who do not meet the needs test may still be able to receive SPIF funding or loans. In 2004, students are eligible to receive up to $6,000 through SPIF.

CAREER OPTIONS ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Yale Law School has long encouraged its graduates to consider the broad spectrum of careers available to them. In 1988, the School established the Career Options Assistance Program (COAP) to mitigate the influence of educational debts on the career choices of its graduates. COAP is one of the most generous postgraduation financial assistance programs in the country. Since its inception, more than 700 Yale Law School graduates have received more than $15 million in benefits. COAP is made possible in part through an endowment established by the C. E. and S. Foundation and the Humana Foundation of Louisville, Kentucky, which grants were made at the recommendation of David A. Jones ’60, Founder and CEO Emeritus of Humana, Inc., and David A. Jones, Jr. ’88, Vice-Chairman of Humana, Inc. COAP also receives generous funding from the estates of Hans Klagsbrunn ’32 and his wife, Dr. Elizabeth Ramsey, a graduate of the Yale School of Medicine, and the estate of Carolyn E. Agger ’38.

COAP provides grants to cover the shortfall between graduates’ educational loan payments and the amounts graduates can afford to pay from relatively modest incomes. Unlike many other loan forgiveness programs, eligibility is based upon compensation levels, not type of employment. COAP participants work in local, state, and federal government; nonprofit organizations serving the public interest; and academia. COAP assistance is also available to judicial clerks in the form of loans. Eligibility does not depend on the political or ideological orientation of the graduate, employer, or work.

COAP grants are calculated on the basis of the participant’s income, indebtedness, and an imputed loan repayment schedule. For graduates who earn less than a certain “threshold” level ($42,000 in 2004), COAP covers the entire calculated repayment for qualified educational loans. Those with incomes over $42,000 are expected to contribute 25 percent of their income in excess of that amount toward repayment. Gross income is adjusted with regard to spouses, dependents, and assets, and provisions are made for parental leave and for part-time work.

For further information, please contact the Financial Aid Office, Yale Law School, PO Box 208215, New Haven CT 06520-8215.

THE DEGREES OF MASTER OF LAWS (LL.M.) AND DOCTOR OF THE SCIENCE OF LAW (J.S.D.)

Admissions

An LL.M. applicant must:

1. If from the United States, have graduated from an approved college and have graduated with high rank from a law school that is a member of the Association of American Law Schools or approved by the American Bar Association. If from another country, have graduated with high rank from a law school or law faculty with standards substantially equivalent to those of the aforementioned American law schools. As a general rule, admission is not available to persons who have already obtained the LL.M. degree or an equivalent degree from another law school in the United States. Applicants are encouraged to plan to complete the requirements for professional certification or bar admission prior to the time they would enter the LL.M. program.

2. Submit the following materials by December 3, 2004:
   (a) a completed application form from Yale Law School and the additional materials requested in the paper or online application brochure;
   (b) résumé or curriculum vitae;
   (c) original or certified copies of college and law school transcripts (or, in the case of international students, the nearest equivalent record of grades and rank. Transcripts must be in English or accompanied by an English translation);
   (d) two letters of recommendation from law professors or other references commenting in detail on the scholastic and professional qualifications of the applicant (letters must be in English or accompanied by an English translation); books, tapes, etc. should not be submitted.
3. If the applicant's primary language is not English, establish proficiency in English. Such candidates are required to take the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL), administered at centers throughout the world by the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey. The TOEFL should be scheduled so as to insure receipt of the score prior to January 5, 2005. The admissions committee looks for a minimum score of 600 on the paper-based TOEFL and 250 on the computer-based TOEFL.

4. Pay a nonrefundable application fee of $75 or submit a note requesting a waiver of the application fee.

Applications may be obtained from the Office of Graduate Programs, Yale Law School, PO Box 208215, New Haven CT 06520-8215; or by e-mail, gradpro.law@yale.edu. Applications may also be downloaded from the Web site at www.law.yale.edu in the “Admissions” section. Early filing is recommended. Admission decisions are not made on a rolling basis. All LL.M. admissions decisions are announced in mid-March.

A J.S.D. applicant must:

1. Have achieved high standing in taking the LL.M. degree at Yale Law School and demonstrate strong aptitude for performing advanced scholarly research. Admission to candidacy for the J.S.D. is highly selective. It does not follow automatically from admission to the LL.M. program or from the award of the LL.M. degree, but rests entirely on the graduate committee’s independent judgment of the applicant’s qualifications. Admission to candidacy requires the endorsement of the graduate committee. The Yale LL.M. must have been awarded within the five years preceding the student’s application. Similarly, if the dissertation has not been completed in five years from the date of J.S.D. admission, the candidate will be withdrawn. Only under extraordinary circumstances will an extension be granted.

2. Submit:
   (a) a completed application form from Yale Law School, plus a letter of application;
   (b) a dissertation proposal;
   (c) a statement of the contingent approval of a member of the Yale Law School faculty who is willing to supervise the candidate and of two Yale Law School faculty readers;
   (d) any writings that indicate competence in research;
   (e) letters of recommendation from two members of the Yale Law School faculty;
   (f) an original copy of all college and law school transcripts in English (if applicant does not hold a Yale LL.M. degree);
   (g) TOEFL report (if English is not the candidate’s primary language).

3. Pay a nonrefundable application fee of $50.

The application and supporting materials should be submitted to the J.S.D. program, Yale Law School, PO Box 208215, New Haven CT 06520-8215, by March 16, 2005.

Expenses and Financial Aid

Tuition and estimated living expenses for graduate students in the LL.M. program are the same as for J.D. students (see pages 104–6). Tuition for resident J.S.D. candidates will be $6,082 per term. To be maintained on Law School records nonresident J.S.D. candidates are charged a $100 fee per term. A fee of $100 will be charged for each J.S.D. dissertation approved by the faculty. These fees will be billed by the University Office of Student Financial Services.

Scholarships and loan funds for graduate study, tuition, and living expenses are awarded by the Law School on the basis of the individual student’s financial need. Awards do not include funds for travel expenses. Application for financial assistance should be made along with the regular application for admission, although admission decisions are made regardless of financial need. Applicants to the graduate programs are urged to apply to sources outside Yale Law School for support.
THE DEGREE OF MASTER OF STUDIES IN LAW (M.S.L.)

Admissions

Applicants for this program must:

1. Have at least a bachelor’s degree;
2. Submit:
   (a) a completed application form;
   (b) a complete curriculum vitae;
   (c) a letter describing the applicant’s professional experience and interest in the program;
   (d) transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate work;
   (e) three letters of recommendation from persons having knowledge of the candidate’s academic ability and professional promise;
   (f) three to five examples of professional work for those applying as journalists;
   (g) TOEFL report (if English is not the candidate’s primary language).

Admission decisions are not made on a rolling basis. All M.S.L. decisions are made and announced in April. The letter of application, supporting materials, and the nonrefundable application fee of $50 should be submitted to the M.S.L. Program, Yale Law School, PO Box 208215, New Haven CT 06520-8215, by January 7, 2005.

Expenses and Financial Aid

Fees for the program are the same as for the J.D. program. Financial aid for M.S.L. candidates is designed to supplement grants from outside sources, sabbatical salaries, and personal resources.
Student Organizations and Journals, and Student Participation in Administration

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS AND JOURNALS

The American Constitution Society for Law and Policy is a national organization of law students, law professors, practicing lawyers, and others. Its goal is to revitalize and transform the legal debate, from law school classrooms to federal courtrooms, by restoring the fundamental principles of respect for human dignity, protection of individual rights and liberties, genuine equality, and access to justice, to their rightful and traditionally central place in American law.

Americans for Informed Democracy (AID) at Yale is a non-partisan educational organization that raises awareness in the U.S. about world opinions, with an aim toward promoting a more multilateral American foreign policy. AID at Yale is part of a global AID network, with representation at more than ninety universities throughout the world. Since its establishment in the fall of 2003, AID at Yale has brought together nearly a thousand young leaders and concerned citizens to discuss anti-Americanism, the compatibility of the Western and Islamic worlds, and the war in Iraq. The organization’s Web site is www.aidemocracy.org.

The Asia Law Forum provides a venue for students and faculty to discuss and debate contemporary issues of law and policy in Asia by sponsoring guest lectures, leading discussion groups, and hosting social activities.

The Yale chapter of the Black Law Students Association (BLSA) was organized to promote and protect the interests of students of African descent enrolled at Yale Law School. BLSA organizes projects and events in the areas of admissions and financial aid, placement, community services, and alumni affairs. BLSA also invites persons of interest to black students to speak at the Law School.

The Capital Assistance Project (CAP) provides people on death row, and the lawyers who represent them, with substantive legal support. Students research legal topics, write motions, petitions, and briefs, and occasionally conduct investigative work. CAP also raises awareness about the death penalty by sponsoring lectures, panels, and workshops.

The Coalition for Faculty Diversity seeks to coordinate efforts to achieve greater faculty diversity in terms of race, ethnicity, gender, and sexual orientation at law schools throughout the country and at Yale Law School in particular. The coalition seeks to increase awareness about the importance of diversity and hopes to facilitate discussions among students, faculty, and administrators on what diversity means to different people, and how greater diversity can be achieved.

The Collective on Women of Color in the Law supports women of color within the Law School, and increases opportunities for members of the Law School community to learn from the many talented women of color in legal academia.
To this end, each year the Collective sponsors the Women of Color Legal Academic Speaker Series (WOCLASS), as well as a student-led reading group, which provides participants opportunities to read and discuss articles written by women of color in the academy.

The Court Jesters: A Theatre Troupe at Yale Law School mounts a major production for the Law School community each spring. Recent productions include Aaron Sorkin’s A Few Good Men and David Mamet’s The Water Engine: An American Fable. Theater experience is optional; sense of humor, a must. The organization’s Web site is islandia.law.yale.edu/courtjester/html.

The Jerome N. Frank Legal Services Organization (LSO), which provides legal aid to individuals who cannot afford private attorneys, has a student board of directors. The student board collaborates with the clinical faculty and staff to set priorities for and manage the work of LSO. Board members also serve as teaching assistants (or “student directors”) in LSO clinics and seminars. For a fuller description of the organization’s work, see pages 86–87.

The Greenhaven Prison Project brings law students and inmates together for a seminar on legal and political issues concerning prisons. The seminar meets biweekly inside a maximum security prison and offers a rare opportunity for extensive, frank, and often intense discussion.
Habeas Chorus is Yale Law School’s own a cappella singing group. Membership is open by audition to members of the Law School community willing to rehearse once a week.

The Initiative for Public Interest Law at Yale, Inc., is a student-run 501(c)(3) corporation that provides grants to innovative public interest law projects. Founded in 1981, it currently distributes two to three grants each year. Students host fundraising activities and serve on the Initiative’s board of directors, which includes public interest lawyers, community members, and YLS faculty and staff. Students and board members together review grant applications and select recipients.

The Latino Law Students’ Association was founded to promote the academic, career, and political interests of Latina/o students at the Law School. The association meets regularly and sponsors projects in the areas of admissions, recruitment, political and community awareness, and cultural solidarity. All Latina/o law students are encouraged to participate.

Law Talk, the Community Legal Education Radio Show, is a call-in radio program that discusses legal issues of importance to the New Haven community. The show broadcasts weekly on a Yale-affiliated AM radio station. Each show explores an area of the law with a guest expert. Shows have covered diverse and offbeat topics including family law, immigration, sports, local politics, and coping with parking tickets.

The Allard K. Lowenstein International Human Rights Law Project is an organization that provides students with the opportunity to carry out human rights research and advocacy projects, usually on behalf of nongovernmental organizations. Students are encouraged to suggest and develop project ideas.

The Muslim Law Students’ Association serves as a vehicle for gathering Muslims and others interested in learning about Islam and Muslims, Islamic legal issues, and issues of concern to Muslims and other minorities.

The Native American Law Students’ Association (NALSA) is a chapter of the National Native American Law Students’ Association for Yale Law students who are interested in advancing and/or advocating for legal issues, cultural issues, and subject matter affecting Native Americans, Alaska Natives, Native Hawaiians, and American Indian Nations. Membership is open to all Yale Law School students, regardless of racial, ethnic, or religious background.

New Haven Cares operates a program of redeemable vouchers that can be used by those in need to purchase basic necessities. Vouchers may be redeemed at participating merchants to purchase food, clothing, shelter, and transportation, but not alcohol, tobacco, or cash. To ensure that vouchers are distributed widely, New Haven Cares has partnered with more than a dozen local social service agencies who work day-to-day with New Haven’s hungry and homeless.

OutLaws is an organization of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) members of the Law School community. Founded in the early 1970s, OutLaws sponsors speakers, supports activism, and participates in LGBT legal conferences and events. OutLaws is a bridge between students, faculty, alumni, and the legal profession at large. With regular social events, OutLaws provides a social forum as well. OutLaws’ Web site is www.yale.edu/outlaws.

The Pacific Islander, Asian, and Native American Law Students’ Association (PANA) is a coalition that seeks to promote community among its members and to create a more diverse educational environment. PANA presents social and cultural events and works to recruit students of color and help them to feel more comfortable at the Law School. In addition, it serves to educate the student body by organizing discussions of issues affecting people of color and the role of law in addressing these concerns. Membership in PANA is open to all members of the Yale community.

The South Asian Law Students’ Association (SALSA) is an organization dedicated to celebrating, promoting, and sharing the culture and diversity of the countries of South Asia with the Law School and the larger community. Everyone interested is welcome.

The Street Law program places law students in New Haven public schools to teach courses on legal topics, including constitutional and criminal law. The program aims to introduce New Haven students to the law in a way that is relevant to their lives and to encourage contact between law students and the community. Law students first participate in training sessions on classroom management and teaching techniques and then teach weekly classes, often in teams of two, using lesson plans and assignments they have designed.

The Student/Faculty Alliance for Military Equality (SAME) organized in the fall of 2002 when military recruiters were allowed to participate in Yale Law School’s employer interview program in response to threats by the Department of Defense to withdraw federal funding from the University. SAME coordinates and is a plaintiff group in a lawsuit challenging the statute invoked by DOD in support of their actions. SAME also performs legal research, lobbying, protests, and multi-school activities in support of law school nondiscrimination policies and in opposition to the military’s “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy.

The Thomas Swan Barristers’ Union organizes an annual mock trial competition with a civil or criminal case. Students acting in pairs prepare pleadings and a trial brief and conduct a pretrial motions hearing and the trial. Federal judges or practicing attorneys preside at the trials. A final prize trial is held at the end of the year. The competition occurs in the spring term. A preparticipation program is offered in the fall term as an introduction to trial advocacy skills. First-year students are welcome to participate.

The Temporary Restraining Order Project (TRO) provides students with the opportunity to assist domestic violence survivors with the often arduous process of seeking legal protection from abuse. Participants are trained to staff an office at family court under the supervision of the court clerk’s office and New Haven Legal Assistance attorneys.
The Morris Tyler Moot Court of Appeals is a competition managed by a board of student directors, composed of students who have previously participated in a moot court competition. Each participant in the competition writes an extensive appellate brief and presents an appellate oral argument on a case scheduled to be heard by the Supreme Court. Another case is selected for briefing and argument in the prize finals, which are held at the close of each term.

Umoja is an organization designed to promote critical thinking and create youth-initiated community action projects. It was launched in January 1999 by three Law School students who worked with a group of high school students to mobilize major public support for federal gun control legislation. It has since expanded to Santiago, Chile; San Juan, Puerto Rico; and Mexico City, Mexico. Previous community action projects have ranged from creating community newsletters on police brutality to making a film about parental responsibility.

Women and Youth in Support of Each Other (WYSE) is a mentorship program originally founded to prevent teen pregnancy and provide young women with more options at an earlier age. It has since expanded to sites in Chicago, New Haven, New York, and Boston. Mentors from YLS have worked with undergraduates to mentor girls in New Haven middle schools since 1995; the program has since expanded to include work with high school students on issues ranging from college preparedness to violence in the community.
The Yale AIDS Network brings law students together with other students in the Yale University community who are committed to creating a coordinated response to the global HIV/AIDS pandemic at the local, national, and international level through advocacy, political activism, and education.

The Yale Entertainment and Sports Law Association (YESLA) is an organization for law students interested in pursuing careers in sports or entertainment law.

The Yale Environmental Law Association (YELA) sponsors activities to advance thought, dialogue, and action on issues of environmental law and policy. Activities include speakers, panels, and brown-bag lunches on topics of current relevance; activism on matters of pressing concern; an annual career panel; and legal research and advocacy (both self-initiated and for outside groups and activists).

The Yale Federalist Society is a group of conservative and libertarian law students dedicated to fostering discussion and debate of issues of law and public policy. It is a part of the national Federalist Society. Members share a belief in judicial restraint and the use of free market forces to allocate resources in a society. Activities under its sponsorship at Yale have included debates on current legal issues and speeches by federal judges, law professors, and public officials.

The Yale Forum on the Practice of International Law brings leading international practitioners and policy makers to the Law School to speak on subjects within their expertise. The Forum seeks to advance discussion on pertinent topics of international law and policy while taking particular care to expose students to the kinds of opportunities that exist for legal practice in an international forum. In recent years, speakers have hailed from many regions of the world and diverse careers in government, academia, private practice, and public service.

The Yale Graduate Law Students’ Association (YGLSA) is an organization open to graduate fellows (LL.M., J.S.D., and M.S.L. candidates) and visiting scholars. The YGLSA members participate in lectures, discussions, and social events organized by the students themselves and the Tutor in Law of the Graduate Programs. These sessions focus on a variety of subjects, including teaching methodology, scholarship, and legal topics in both international and American law. Workshops on dissertations in progress are offered throughout the year.

The Yale Health Law Society is a student-run organization that endeavors to facilitate the discussion and debate of issues concerning bioethics, health policy, and health law. It is an inter-school organization, composed of law, medical, and public health students. Activities include evening lectures/panels with visiting speakers, brown-bag lunch discussions with local faculty, reading groups, and inter-school mixers.

The Yale Human Rights and Development Law Journal (YHRDLJ; www.yale.edu/yhrdlj) is primarily an online publication that strives to provide a broad range of perspectives on issues at the intersection of human rights and development. The journal is edited by students and advised by members of the Law School faculty, and includes articles solicited from top legal scholars, student notes, and hypertext links to notable Internet sites devoted to human rights and development topics.

YIPPIE! (Yale Incentive Program for Public Interest Employment) was founded by members of the class of 2006 to encourage YLS students to do summer public interest work by helping those students with their financial needs, and to draw together the entire law school community around Yale Law’s public interest mission. YIPPIE! coordinated events including Small Group Olympics, Speed Dating, and the Day’s Pay initiative.

The Yale Jewish Law Students’ Association hosts Shabbat and holiday meals, arranges discussions on topics of Jewish and legal interest, and sponsors legal and social action in the public interest.

The Yale Journal of Health Policy, Law, and Ethics is an interdisciplinary journal whose staff members come from all of Yale’s graduate and professional schools. The journal publishes pieces on many topics, ranging from civil rights enforcement in health care delivery to bioterrorism. Recent contributors have included Senator Ted Kennedy, Senator Bill Frist, and prominent academics and policy makers. Submissions are peer reviewed by a distinguished advisory board, and first-year editors can play a substantive role in editing the journal. The journal’s Web site is www.yale.edu/yjhple.
The Yale Journal of International Law is a student publication that contains articles and comments written by scholars, practitioners, policy makers, and students on a wide range of topics in public and private international law. Published twice a year, the journal is a primary forum for the discussion and analysis of contemporary international legal problems.

The Yale Journal of Law and Feminism is a student-run journal that publishes works concerning a broad range of legal issues as they pertain to gender, sexuality, or feminist theory. The journal combines theoretical and practical perspectives. The editors encourage submissions of articles, essays, and reviews, and also consider submissions of other genres. To reflect feminist values, the journal is nonhierarchical—all members can participate fully in editing, screening, and administrative decision making.

The Yale Journal of Law & the Humanities is a biannual publication edited by students and advised by a board of distinguished scholars. The editors of the journal include students from the Law School and several graduate departments in the University. Founded on the conviction that interdisciplinary scholarship is crucial to an understanding of both the law and our culture, the journal explores the intersections among law, the humanities, and the humanistic social sciences.

The Yale Journal of Law & Technology (www.yjolt.org) is a student-run journal that offers its readers a cutting-edge, dynamic environment in which to acquire and produce knowledge about the interface between law and technology. The journal publishes a wide variety of material, including scholarly articles, incisive think pieces, and lectures and written pieces by guests of the Law & Technology Society as well as other scholars and professionals. No technical or scientific background is necessary.

The Yale Journal on Regulation is a national forum for legal, political, and economic analysis of current issues in regulatory policy. The journal is edited, managed, and marketed by students. Membership is open to all interested students.

The Yale Law and Enterprise Forum (YLEF) imagines and encourages a legal system that promotes the dignity of the human person and the common good through free enterprise and personal initiative. YLEF invites leading entrepreneurs and thinkers to speak at Yale Law School, and is working with several community organizations to help entrepreneurs make New Haven a city of hope and opportunity. The organization’s Web site is www.ylef.org.

The Yale Law & Policy Review (YLPR) is a student-run journal dedicated to publishing in-depth scholarly articles by law professors, as well as timely policy proposals and legal analyses by judges, policy makers, and practitioners. In recent issues, YLPR authors have addressed a wide range of issues at the intersection of law and policy, including affirmative action, campaign finance reform, urban policing, education policy, and the war on terrorism. The review’s Web site is www.yale.edu/ylpr.

The Yale Law and Technology Society provides a forum for the discussion of law and technology. The society invites distinguished speakers to participate in activities at the Law School throughout the year. In conjunction with the Information Society Project (www.law.yale.edu/isp), the society publishes LawMeme (www.lawmeme.org), the Law School’s weblog for law and technology issues.

The Yale Law Christian Fellowship, affiliated with Intervarsity Christian Fellowship, is a student-led, nondenominational organization formed to encourage spiritual growth in the Law School community. Members believe that their time in law school includes an important spiritual component easily overlooked amid the stress and work. Members share the challenges of faith with one another and seek to contribute to the Law School community through speakers and weekly meetings, and to the larger New Haven community through service projects.

The Yale Law Journal publishes articles, essays, book reviews, and student notes and comments on a broad range of legal topics. A board of student editors manages and produces eight issues of the journal per year. Students are selected for membership on the journal and for positions on the editorial board through procedures established by the current board. Students are informed of the selection procedures in March or April of their first year.

The Yale Law Republicans promote conservative values, explore and discuss Republican Party philosophies, provide members with exposure to local, state, and national party officials, and conduct outreach to the political community of New Haven and Connecticut. Membership is open to any student of the Law School.

The annual Yale Law Revue is a collection of satirical songs, skits, and vignettes written, staged, and performed by law students. Almost anything is fair game.
Yale Law School Workers’ Rights Project advocates for workers’ rights in the United States and globally. In cooperation with practicing attorneys, law students work with a diverse group of labor and community organizations, as well as initiating their own projects. The goal is to serve both the immediate legal and other needs of worker organizations and to assist in the development of innovative organizing strategies.

Yale Law Women provides a forum for discussion of issues and concerns that women share with regard to teaching, classroom atmosphere, curriculum, and the outside legal community. It monitors policies of the Law School that have a particular impact on women. It seeks to develop a supportive community of women students and faculty. It offers practical information relevant to school and practice, and education on women’s legal issues through speakers and workshops.

The Yale Middle East Law Forum seeks to promote discussion on various topics on the Middle East. The forum organizes lectures, panels, conferences, and dinners at the Law School throughout the year. The organization’s Web site is http://mideastforum.law.yale.edu.

The Yale Project for Civil Rights (YPCR) draws attention to the legal practitioners who craft litigation strategies to overcome discrimination through the courts. YPCR programs are designed to spark dialogue and exchange about the scope of civil rights problems today and how best to utilize the law to challenge these inequalities.

The Yale Student Animal Legal Defense Fund educates the Yale community about important issues in animal law. Its members host speakers on current issues in animal rights and animal welfare law; carry out research projects; work with students at other law schools to establish a law journal dedicated to animal law; attend conferences around the nation; and lobby for a course in animal law to be taught at the Law School.

Youth Rights Media, with support from the New Haven Police Department, has created a ninety-minute curriculum focused on the rights and responsibilities that youth have when dealing with police officers. It covers Fourth Amendment search and seizure protections, Fifth Amendment self-incrimination protections, and the Sixth Amendment right to counsel, and explains the police grievance process. The centerpiece of the curriculum is a video developed and produced with the participation of local teenagers, police officers, and public defenders.

Students may advertise student organization events in the online Master Calendar of Events (www.law.yale.edu/calendar).
STUDENT PARTICIPATION IN ADMINISTRATION

Students participate in the administration of the Law School as follows:

1. There are ten elected representatives of the student body — three from each class and one representing the graduate fellows — entitled to be present at faculty meetings and to participate fully in the deliberation of the faculty, but without vote.*

2. Student representatives are elected for a term of one academic year, commencing with the beginning of the fall term. Representatives for the second- and third-year classes are elected during the spring of the academic year preceding their term of office. Representatives for the first-year and graduate classes are elected at the beginning of the fall term of the academic year for which they will serve. Elections for all classes are held under the auspices of the student representatives in office at the time of the election.

3. The elected student representatives, and other students selected by appropriate procedures, participate in the work of standing committees of the faculty and, where appropriate, in the work of ad hoc committees. The form and nature of such participation depend upon the character of the work of each committee. All elected student representatives serve on committees.

* This entitlement is subject to the limitation that on occasion the faculty may feel it necessary to convene in executive session. In such an event the dean will, to the extent he or she deems appropriate, advise the student representatives of the holding of the executive session in advance and invite the student representatives to present to the faculty their views on the subject under consideration; under any circumstances student representatives will be advised of the holding of such meeting promptly thereafter. It is, however, the purpose and expectation of the student body and of the faculty that the business of the faculty will normally be conducted in meetings in which student representatives participate.
The Career Development Office (CDO) assists students and graduates in identifying career objectives and obtaining employment that meets those objectives. Its approach is to assist in self-assessment and in defining career goals, as well as in teaching students and graduates the career skills that will serve them well in law school and beyond. CDO is staffed by attorney counselors who have expertise in both the public and private sectors, as well as in judicial clerkships and fellowships. Through CDO, students locate summer and full-time positions with law firms, public interest organizations, government agencies, law schools, legal services organizations, corporations, fellowship programs, judges, and others.

Because the student body is small and diverse, CDO emphasizes individual counseling and career information services to students. These services include sponsoring informational programs, maintaining a library of materials on career development, holding and sponsoring interviewing programs, publishing career guides and brochures, and counseling. CDO sponsors more than fifty programs each year, including panel discussions, lectures, and informal discussions about public interest and private sector opportunities as well as judicial clerkships and fellowships.

In addition to serving current students, CDO counsels graduates wishing to change positions or seek new opportunities. Job listings and advice are available to interested graduates on the CDO Web site at www.law.yale.edu/cdo.

In order to foster mentoring relationships between students and graduates, CDO invites graduates to serve as mentors in residence and meet individually with students seeking career advice. In addition, CDO, with the Office of Alumni Affairs, coordinates the Alumni Mentoring Network whereby students have access to hundreds of graduates who have offered to serve as career advisers.

Every fall CDO sponsors a recruitment program for second- and third-year students. Approximately 250 legal employers from all parts of the country and abroad register to interview students for summer and permanent positions. An additional twenty employers interview first-year students every spring. Yale also cosponsors two public service recruitment events and one international graduate student interview event off-campus each year. Hundreds of employers post job opportunities for Yale Law students and graduates on CDO’s Web site.

Upon graduation, virtually all Yale Law students have accepted employment. Of the members of the Class of 2003 who reported their employment, 42.5 percent accepted judicial clerkships, 47 percent accepted jobs with private law firms, 7 percent accepted public interest or government jobs, 2 percent accepted jobs in business and industry, and 1.5 percent continued their education or accepted positions in academia. After taking into account the first jobs taken by students after their judicial clerkships, the total percentage of graduates in public service typically rises to 15 percent.
Geographically, New York City, Washington, D.C., San Francisco, and Los Angeles are the most popular destinations for Yale Law School graduates, but members of the Class of 2003 accepted employment in thirty different states.

Nearly all first- and second-year law students who seek summer legal employment are able to secure positions with law firms, government agencies, public interest organizations, legal services organizations, or judges. Through Summer Public Interest Fellowships, the Law School ensures that everyone who needs funding for summer public interest or government work—in the United States or abroad—receives it.

All graduates since 1988 are eligible for the Law School’s loan deferral and forgiveness program, the Career Options Assistance Program. COAP provides full, need-based loan repayment to graduates earning approximately $42,000 or less a year and partial repayment for many alumni earning above that amount. See pages 109–10 for further details.

The Law School has long taken a vigorous stand against any discrimination on grounds of age; color; handicap or disability; ethnic or national origin; race; religion; religious creed; gender (including discrimination taking the form of sexual harassment); marital, parental, or veteran status; sexual orientation; or the prejudice of clients. Accordingly, all employers using Yale Law School’s placement services are required to abide by this policy.
The Lillian Goldman Library is located within the heart of the Yale Law School complex, providing the Law School community with ready access to one of the world's finest collections of printed legal materials. These collections are complemented by access to a growing array of online sources, as well as the strong interdisciplinary collections housed nearby at more than twenty-five other campus libraries, including the Sterling Memorial Library and the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library. The law library supports the needs of twenty-first-century legal researchers by integrating access to print and online sources throughout the library.

The law library's print collections include an especially rich assortment of texts and treatises emphasizing law and the social sciences, reflecting Yale's traditionally broad approach to the study of law. The long-standing international interests of the Law School are also supported by a 200,000-volume foreign and international law collection. Basic U.S. materials include the reported state and federal court decisions, published statutes and administrative rules, regulations, and decisions, together with related finding aids. The domestic law materials for countries other than the United States consist of primary and secondary sources for most European jurisdictions and a number of other countries, collected both in English and the vernacular, with an emphasis on English language materials for secondary sources. To keep printed law current, the library maintains approximately 10,000 active serial titles and receives nearly every newly published academic press title in law. The library’s rare book collections have strong holdings of English legal history sources, including a superb collection of Blackstone editions.

Research at Yale is supported further by the diverse collections of other campus libraries, which hold more than ten million volumes of books and serials, spanning nearly all areas of human knowledge. These libraries are fully available to all members of the Yale Law School community.

The library's information technology services department provides members of the Law School community with easy, integrated access to legal information in all formats. The library organizes access to its large selection of online resources through a series of Internet-based Web pages. Its online catalogue, MORRIS, enhances access to printed collections and includes all of the library's bibliographic records, some with links to online versions of the same documents. MORRIS also provides access to the major legal periodical indexes and provides convenient links to the online catalogues of the Yale campus libraries as well as other major and regional law libraries. Full-text sources of digitized legal information include the major commercial services, such as LEXIS and WESTLAW, supplemented by Internet-based resources, including a growing number of digitized documents loaded by the library.
Library hours and services are structured to meet the research demands of the Yale Law School community. Services are provided by a professional staff of librarians, lawyers, and computer specialists who offer training, support, and advice to library users in their efforts to find information. Individual reference support is offered most weekdays until late evening and at reduced hours on weekends. In addition, professional librarians offer a wide array of legal research training programs throughout the year.

Interlibrary loan, document delivery, and paging services further supplement the needs of researchers. For materials not available at the Lillian Goldman Library, the library provides free interlibrary borrowing services for members of the Law School community, and the rich resources of the other Yale campus libraries are made readily available to Yale Law School users through a free campus document delivery service.
Living at Yale

LIFE AT YALE LAW SCHOOL

Rules of Discipline
In 1970, the faculty and students first adopted a disciplinary code that describes the basic rights and duties of members of the Law School and provides a set of procedures governing alleged violations of the code. Copies of the current code are available in the registrar’s office. In addition, all students are admitted subject to the statutes and rules of the University.

Dormitories and Housing
The Law School dormitories reopened in the fall of 2000 after a complete renovation. Annual rentals in the Law School dormitories range from $4,885 to $6,350 for the academic year. Each room is fully furnished; students are required to supply their own towels, bed linens, blankets, pillows, and lamps. The rooms are assigned by lottery. Also included in the lottery are a few rooms elsewhere on the University campus.

The University seeks to assist in locating housing for students who cannot be accommodated in the dormitories. Such students should seek housing well before matriculation, since there is limited University housing for Law School students. The Graduate Housing Office has dormitory and apartment units for a small number of graduate and professional students. Students may access information about University accommodations outside the Law School on the Web at www.yale.edu/graduatehousing. This site includes facility descriptions, floorplans, and rates. For further information on graduate apartments, contact Betsy Rosenthal at 203.432.8270, fax 203.432.0177, or betsy.rosenthal@yale.edu. For graduate dormitory information, contact Beverly Whitney at 203.432.2167, fax 203.432.4578, or beverly.whitney@yale.edu.

The University’s Off-Campus Housing service, limited to current or incoming members of the Yale community, may be accessed from any computer at Yale through the intranet at www.yale.edu/offcampushousing. Call 203.432.9756 to obtain the necessary passwords to access the system from other areas.

Dining Hall
The newly renovated Law School Dining Hall opened in January 2001 with expanded hours and services. The dining hall offers a salad and sandwich bar, an expanded grill menu, pizza, hot food bar, daily specials, snacks, and beverages. Continental breakfast is offered at 8 A.M., lunch service begins at 11:30 A.M., and dinner service begins at 5:15 P.M. The servery is open for snacks and beverages until 9 P.M. The Law School offers an optional pre-purchased meal plan, or items may be purchased with cash or charged to a bursar account. The dining hall is closed on Saturday and Sunday; alternative facilities are available nearby on those days.
Computers
For student use, the Law School has a computer cluster with Windows XP computers and high-speed laser printers. The computers are networked and run a standard suite of software. Each student is allotted $50 of printing on the laser printers per academic year, and may purchase additional pages.

E-mail and dial-in Internet accounts are established for each entering student. Students can access their e-mail from the computer cluster, from home with a computer equipped with a modem, and on-campus with a laptop computer equipped with an Ethernet card. More than 800 Ethernet jacks are available in the Law School’s classrooms and library for student use. In addition, wireless Ethernet access is available. For more information, please see www.law.yale.edu/wireless.

Information Technology Services assists students with questions and concerns about computer hardware or software. For information check the Information Technology Services Web page at www.law.yale.edu/its or contact the director of Information Technology at 203.432.4044.

Child Care
The YLS Early Learning Center is an independently operated childcare center run for the benefit of Yale Law School students, faculty, and staff. Open all day and year-round, it accepts children from three months through three years of age. Children of students, faculty, and staff of Yale Law School have priority in the assignment of spaces. For students on financial aid, the Law School makes loans available to cover the center’s tuition. For further information about the center, please contact the YLS Early Learning Center at 203.432.7640.

Security in the Law School
As in most urban institutions, security from fires, thefts, and personal attacks is a concern of the Law School. Security affairs are administered by a joint faculty-staff-student committee working in conjunction with Yale security and fire prevention personnel.

Fire extinguishers are located on each floor of the dormitories, and a detector system activates a siren. Immediate evacuation of dormitories must commence whenever the siren is activated. Doors are locked using a system that discourages key duplication, and campus police regularly patrol the Law School area.

Special buses and, when requested, security personnel escorts are provided to promote safety throughout the campus during late evening hours.

Class Cancellations
The Law School ordinarily does not cancel classes because of adverse weather conditions. Individual classes may be canceled by instructors on occasion, in which case makeup classes are scheduled.
Special Events

Numerous lectures are given by distinguished visitors invited to the Law School by faculty and students (see pages 71–73). From time to time faculty members present informal talks on their current research interests. Lectures and other public events are described in the online Master Calendar of Events (www.law.yale.edu/calendar).

LIFE AT YALE UNIVERSITY

Cultural, Religious, and Athletic Resources

A calendar listing the broad range of events at the University is issued weekly during the academic year in the Yale Bulletin & Calendar. The hours when special exhibitions and the University’s permanent collections are open to the public are also recorded in this publication. Free copies of the Yale Bulletin & Calendar are available at many locations throughout the campus, and the paper is sent via U.S. Mail to subscribers; for more information, call 203.432.1316. The paper is also available online at www.yale.edu/opa/yb&c/.

The Yale Peabody Museum of Natural History contains collections in anthropology, mineralogy, oceanography, paleontology, and some aspects of geology.

The Yale University Art Gallery contains representative collections of ancient, medieval, and Renaissance art, Near and Far Eastern art, archaeological material from the University’s excavations, Pre-Columbian and African art, works of European and American masters from virtually every period, and a rich collection of modern art. The landmark Louis I. Kahn building is closed for a two-year renovation. The hub of the museum’s activities during this period will be the adjacent Swartwout building, housing Yale’s world-renowned collections of American paintings, sculpture, and decorative arts, as well as a selection of masterworks from all other departments.

The Yale Center for British Art houses an extraordinary collection of British paintings, sculpture, drawings, and books given to the University by the late Paul Mellon, Yale Class of 1929.

There are more than eighty endowed lecture series held at Yale each year on subjects ranging from anatomy to theology, and including virtually all disciplines.

More than four hundred musical events take place at the University during the academic year. These include concerts presented by students and faculty of the School of Music, the Department of Music, the Yale Concert and Jazz bands, the Yale Glee Club, the Yale Symphony Orchestra, and other undergraduate singing and instrumental groups. In addition to graduate recitals and ensemble performances, the School of Music features the Philharmonia Orchestra of Yale, the Chamber Music Society at Yale, the Duke Ellington Series, the Horowitz Piano Series, Great Organ Music at Yale, New Music New Haven, Yale Opera performances and public master classes, and the Faculty Artist Series. Among
New Haven’s numerous performing organizations are Orchestra New England, the New Haven Chorale, and the New Haven Symphony Orchestra.

For theatergoers, Yale and New Haven offer a wide range of dramatic productions at the University Theatre, Yale Repertory Theatre, Yale Cabaret, Long Wharf Theatre, Palace Theater, and Shubert Performing Arts Center.

The religious resources of Yale University serve all students, faculty, and staff. These resources are the University Chaplaincy (located on the lower level of Bingham Hall on Old Campus); the Church of Christ in Yale University, an open and affirming member congregation of the United Church of Christ; and Yale Religious Ministry, the on-campus association of clergy and nonordained representatives of various religious faiths. The ministry includes the Chapel of St. Thomas More, the parish church for all Roman Catholic students at the University; the Joseph Slifka Center for Jewish Life at Yale, a religious and cultural center for students of the Jewish faith; Indigo Blue: A Center for Buddhist Life at Yale; several Protestant denominational ministries and nondenominational ministries; and religious groups such as the Baha’i Association, the New Haven Zen Center, the Yale Vedanta Society and Yale Hindu Council, and the Muslim Student Association. Additional information is available at www.yale.edu/chaplain/.

Established in 1949, the International Center of New Haven is a nonprofit community-based organization. The Center’s programs are based on the idea that both the international community in Greater New Haven and the local community can benefit from each other. The Center is located at 442 Temple Street, and the office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The work of the International Center is carried out by a small professional staff and by many volunteers in the community. The Center organizes lectures and special events, as well as offering English as a Second Language (ESL) classes, in addition to a number of programs including the International Community Friendship Program, ‘Round The World Women, and the International Classroom Project. The International House, a large Tudor mansion located at 406 Prospect Street in New Haven, is the venue of most of the International Center’s activities and the home of fifteen students and scholars. Rooms are available for the academic year and summer. For more information on any of these programs, or on the International House, telephone 203.432.6460, fax 203.432.6462, e-mail info@icnh.org, or visit the Web site at www.icnh.org/.

The Payne Whitney Gymnasium is one of the most elaborate and extensive indoor athletic facilities in the world. This complex includes the 3,100-seat John J. Lee Amphitheater, the site for many indoor varsity sports contests; the Robert J. H. Kiphuth Exhibition Pool; the Brady Squash Center, a world-class facility with fifteen international-style courts; the Adrian C. Israel Fitness Center, a state-of-the-art exercise and weight-training complex; the Brooks-Dwyer Varsity Strength and Conditioning Center; the Colonel William K. Lanman, Jr. Center, a 30,000-square-foot space for recreational/ intramural play and varsity team practice; the Greenberg Brothers Track, an eighth-mile indoor jogging track; and other rooms devoted to fencing, gymnastics, rowing, wrestling, martial arts, general exercise, and dance. Numerous physical education classes in dance, martial arts, aerobic exercise, and sport skills are offered throughout the year. Graduate and professional school students may use the gym at no charge during the academic year and for a nominal fee during the summer term. Academic and summer memberships at reasonable fees are available for faculty, employees, postdoctoral and visiting fellows, and student spouses.

The David S. Ingalls Rink, the Sailing Center in Branford, the Outdoor Education Center (OEC), the tennis courts, and the golf course are open to faculty, students, and employees of the University at established fees. Ingalls Rink has public skating Monday through Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. and on weekends as the training schedule permits. Up-to-date information on hours is available at 203.432.0875. Skate sharpening is available daily; however, skate rentals are not available.

Approximately thirty-five club sports and outdoor activities come under the jurisdiction of the Office of Outdoor Education and Club Sports. Many of the activities, both purely recreational and instructional, are open to graduate and professional school students. Faculty, staff, and alumni, as well as groups, may use the Outdoor Education Center (OEC). The center consists of two thousand acres in East Lyme, Connecticut, and includes cabins, campsites, pavilion, dining hall, swimming, boating, canoeing, and picnic groves beside a mile-long lake. Hiking trails surround a wildlife marsh. The OEC season extends from the third weekend in June through Labor Day and September weekends. For more information, telephone 203.432.2492 or visit the Web page at http://yalebulldogs.collegesports.com/ (click on Sports Rec, then on Outdoor Education).

Throughout the year, Yale University graduate and professional school students have the opportunity to participate in numerous intramural sports activities. These seasonal, team-oriented activities include volleyball, soccer, and softball in the fall; basketball and volleyball in the winter; softball, soccer, and volleyball in the spring; and softball in the summer. With few exceptions, all academic-year graduate-professional student sports activities are scheduled on weekends, and most sports activities are open to competitive, recreational, and coeducational teams. More information is available from the Intramurals Office in Payne Whitney Gymnasium, 203.432.2487, or online at http://yalebulldogs.collegesports.com/.

Health Services for Law School Students

Yale University Health Services (YUHS) is located on campus at 17 Hillhouse Avenue. YUHS offers a wide variety of health care services for students and other members of the Yale community. Services include student medicine, gynecology, mental health, pediatrics, pharmacy, laboratory, radiology, a twenty-three-bed inpatient care facility (ICF), a round-the-clock urgent care clinic, and such specialty services as allergy, dermatology, orthopedics, and a travel clinic. YUHS also includes the Yale Health Plan (YHP), a health coverage option that coordinates and provides payment for the services outlined above, as well as for emergency treatment, off-site specialty services, inpatient hospital care, and other ancillary services. YUHS’s services are detailed in the YHP Student Handbook, available through the YHP Member Services Department, 203.432.0246, or on the YHP Web site at www.yale.edu/uhs/.

ELIGIBILITY FOR SERVICES
All full-time Yale degree-candidate students who are paying at least half tuition are enrolled automatically for YHP Basic Coverage. YHP Basic Coverage is offered at no charge and includes preventive health and medical services in the departments of Student Medicine, Internal Medicine, Gynecology, Health Education, and Mental Hygiene. In addition, treatment for urgent medical problems can be obtained twenty-four hours a day through Urgent Care.

Students on leave of absence or on extended study and paying less than half tuition are not eligible for YHP Basic Coverage but may enroll in YHP Student Affiliate Coverage. Students enrolled in the Division of Special Registration as nondegree special students or visiting scholars are not eligible for YHP Basic Coverage but may enroll in the YHP Billed Associates Plan and pay a monthly premium. Associates must enroll for a minimum of one term within the first thirty days of affiliation with the University.

Students not eligible for YHP Basic Coverage may also use the services on a fee-for-service basis. Students who wish to be seen fee-for-service must enroll with the YHP Member Services Department. Enrollment applications for the YHP Student Affiliate Coverage, Billed Associates Plan, or Fee-for-Service Program are available from the YHP Member Services Department.
All students are welcome to use specialty and ancillary services at YUHS. Upon referral, YHP will cover the cost of these services if the student is a member of YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Care Coverage (see below). If the student has an alternate insurance plan, YHP will assist in submitting the claims for specialty and ancillary services to the other plan and will bill through the Office of Student Financial Services for noncovered charges and services.

Health Coverage Enrollment

The University also requires all students eligible for YHP Basic Coverage to have adequate hospital insurance coverage. Students may choose YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage or elect to waive the plan if they have other hospitalization coverage, such as coverage through a spouse or parent. The waiver must be renewed annually, and it is the student's responsibility to confirm receipt of the waiver form by the University's deadlines noted below.

YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage

Students are automatically enrolled and charged a fee each term on their Student Financial Services bill for YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage. Students with no break in coverage who are enrolled during both the fall and spring terms are billed each term and are covered from September 1 through August 31. For students entering Yale for the first time, readmitted students, and students returning from a leave of absence who have not been covered during their leave, YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage begins on the day the dormitories officially open. A student who is enrolled for the fall term only is covered for services through January 31; a student enrolled for the spring term only is covered for services through August 31.

For a detailed explanation of this plan, see the YHP Student Handbook.

Waiving the YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage: Students are permitted to waive YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage by completing a waiver form that demonstrates proof of alternate coverage. Waiver forms are available from the YHP Member Services Department. It is the student’s responsibility to report any changes in alternate insurance coverage to the YHP Member Services Department. Students are encouraged to review their present coverage and compare its benefits to those available under the YHP. The waiver form must be filed annually and must be received by September 15 for the full year or fall term or by January 31 for the spring term only.

Revoking the Waiver: Students who waive YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage but later wish to be covered must complete and send a form voiding their waiver to the YHP Member Services Department by September 15 for the full year or fall term, or by January 31 for the spring term only. Students who wish to revoke their waiver during the term may do so, provided they show proof of loss of the alternate insurance plan and enroll within thirty days of the loss of this coverage. YHP premiums will not be prorated.
YHP Student Two-Person and Family Plans

A student may enroll his or her lawfully married spouse or same-sex domestic partner and/or legally dependent child(ren) under the age of nineteen in one of two student dependent plans: the Two-Person Plan or the Student Family Plan. These plans include coverage for YHP Basic Coverage and for coverage under YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage. YHP Prescription Plus Coverage may be added at an additional cost. Coverage is not automatic and enrollment is by application. Applications are available from the YHP Member Services Department or can be downloaded from the YUHS Web site (www.yale.edu/uhs/) and must be renewed annually. Applications must be received by September 15 for full-year or fall-term coverage, or by January 31 for spring-term coverage only.

YHP Student Affiliate Coverage

Students on leave of absence or extended study or students paying less than half tuition may enroll in YHP Student Affiliate Coverage, which includes coverage for YHP Basic and for the benefits offered under YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage. Prescription Plus Coverage may also be added for an additional cost. Applications are available from the YHP Member Services Department or can be downloaded from the YUHS Web site (www.yale.edu/uhs/) and must be received by September 15 for full-year or fall-term coverage, or by January 31 for spring-term coverage only.

YHP Prescription Plus Coverage

This plan has been designed for Yale students who purchase YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage and student dependents who are enrolled in either the Two-Person Plan, the Student Family Plan, or Student Affiliate Coverage. YHP Prescription Plus Coverage provides protection for some types of medical expenses not covered under YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage. Students are billed for this plan and may waive this coverage. The waiver form must be filed annually and must be received by September 15 for the full year or fall term or by January 31 for the spring term only. For a detailed explanation, please refer to the YHP Student Handbook.

ELIGIBILITY CHANGES

Withdrawal: A student who withdraws from the University during the first ten days of the term will be refunded the premium paid for YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage and/or YHP Prescription Plus Coverage. The student will not be eligible for any YHP benefits, and the student’s YHP membership will be terminated retroactive to the beginning of the term. The medical record will be reviewed, and any services rendered and/or claims paid will be billed to the student on a fee-for-service basis. At all other times, a student who withdraws from the University will be covered by YHP for thirty days following the date of withdrawal or to the last day of the term, whichever comes first. Premiums will not be prorated. Students who withdraw are not eligible to enroll in YHP Student Affiliate Coverage.
Leaves of Absence: Students who are granted leaves of absence are eligible to purchase YHP Student Affiliate Coverage during the term(s) of the leave. If the leave occurs during the term, YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage will end on the date the leave is granted and students may enroll in YHP Student Affiliate Coverage. Students must enroll in Affiliate Coverage prior to the beginning of the term during which the leave is taken or within thirty days of the start of the leave. Coverage is not automatic and enrollment forms are available at the YHP Member Services Department or can be downloaded from the YUHS Web site (www.yale.edu/uhs/).

Extended Study or Reduced Tuition: Students who are granted extended study status or pay less than half tuition are not eligible for YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage and YHP Prescription Plus Coverage. They may purchase YHP Student Affiliate Coverage during the term(s) of extended study. This plan includes coverage for YHP Basic and for the benefits offered under YHP Hospitalization/Specialty Coverage. Coverage is not automatic and enrollment forms are available at the YHP Member Services Department or can be downloaded from the YUHS Web site (www.yale.edu/uhs/). Students must complete an enrollment application for the plan prior to the start of the term.

For a full description of the services and benefits provided by YHP, please refer to the YHP Student Handbook, available from the YHP Member Services Department, 203.432.0246, 17 Hillhouse Avenue, PO Box 208237, New Haven CT 06520-8237.

REQUIRED IMMUNIZATIONS

Measles (Rubeola) and German Measles: All students who were born after December 31, 1956, are required to provide proof of immunization against measles (rubeola) and German measles (rubella). Connecticut state law requires two doses of measles vaccine. The first dose must have been given after January 1, 1969, and after the student’s first birthday. The second dose must have been given after January 1, 1980. These doses must be at least 30 days apart. Connecticut state law requires proof of one dose of rubella vaccine administered after January 1, 1969, and after the student’s first birthday. The law applies to all students unless they present (a) a certificate from a physician stating that such immunization is contraindicated, (b) a statement that such immunization would be contrary to the student’s religious beliefs, or (c) documentation of a positive blood titer for measles and rubella.

Meningococcus (Meningitis): All students living in on-campus housing must be vaccinated against Meningococcal disease. The law went into effect in September 2002, meaning that all returning students who plan to live in University housing must be immunized or show proof of immunization within the last five years. Students who are not compliant with this law will not be permitted to register for classes or move into the dormitories for the fall term, 2004. Please note that the State of Connecticut does not require this vaccine for students who intend to reside off campus.
Students who have not met these requirements prior to arrival at Yale University must receive the immunizations from YHP and will be charged accordingly.

Resource Office on Disabilities

The Resource Office on Disabilities facilitates accommodations for undergraduate and graduate and professional school students with disabilities who register with and have appropriate documentation on file in the Resource Office. Early planning is critical. Documentation may be submitted to the Resource Office even though a specific accommodation request is not anticipated at the time of registration. It is recommended that matriculating students in need of disability-related accommodations at Yale University contact the Resource Office by June 1. Returning students must contact the Resource Office at the beginning of each term to arrange for course and exam accommodations.

The Resource Office also provides assistance to students with temporary disabilities. General informational inquiries are welcome from students and members of the Yale community and from the public. The mailing address is Resource Office on Disabilities, Yale University, PO Box 208305, New Haven CT
The Resource Office is located in William L. Harkness Hall (WLH), Rooms 102 and 103. Access to the Resource Office is through the College Street entrance to WLH. Office hours are Monday through Friday, 8.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. Voice callers may reach staff at 203.432.2324; TTY/TDD callers at 203.432.8250. The Resource Office may also be reached by e-mail (judith.york@yale.edu) or through its Web site (www.yale.edu/rod/).

The Office of International Students and Scholars

The Office of International Students and Scholars (OISS) coordinates services and support to Yale's international students, faculty, staff, and their dependents. OISS assists members of the Yale international community with all matters of special concern to them and serves as a source of referral to other university offices and departments. OISS staff provide assistance with employment, immigration, personal and cultural adjustment, and family and financial matters, as well as serve as a source of general information about living at Yale and in New Haven. In addition, as Yale University's representative for immigration concerns, OISS provides information and assistance to students, staff, and faculty on how to obtain and maintain legal status in the United States. OISS issues the visa documents needed to request entry into the United States under Yale’s immigration sponsorship and processes requests for extensions of authorized periods of stay in the United States, school transfers, and employment authorization. All international students and scholars must register with OISS as soon as they arrive at Yale, at which time OISS will provide information about orientation activities for newly arrived students, scholars, and family members. OISS programs, like the monthly international coffee hours, daily English conversation programs, and orientation receptions for newly arrived graduate students and postdocs, provide an opportunity to meet members of Yale’s international community and become acquainted with the many resources of Yale University and New Haven.

OISS maintains an extensive Web site (www.oiss.yale.edu/) with useful information for students and scholars prior to and upon arrival in New Haven. As U.S. immigration regulations are complex and change rather frequently, we urge international students and scholars to visit the office and check the Web site for the most recent updates. International graduate students, postdocs, and visiting scholars can get connected with OISS by subscribing to one or both of the OISS e-mail lists. OISS-L is the electronic newsletter with important information for Yale's international community. YaleInternational E-Group is an interactive list through which over 1,000 international students and scholars keep each other informed about events in the area. Check the Web site for more information. To subscribe to either list, send a message to oiss@yale.edu.

Spouses and partners of international students and scholars will want to know about ISPY – International Spouses and Partners at Yale. Information about ISPY and other OISS programs can be found on the OISS Web site.

The Office of International Students and Scholars, located at 246 Church Street, Suite 201, is open Monday through Friday from 8.30 a.m. to 5 p.m., except Tuesday, when the office is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Alumni, Yale Law School Fund, and Endowment Funds

ALUMNI

Alumni of Yale Law School play a large role in the greater Law School community. They renew social ties with one another and network with other Yale Law School alumni practitioners. They refresh their knowledge of legal scholarship in different settings and at different times during the year. Graduates gather in New Haven for the annual Alumni Weekend; they attend faculty talks in connection with the Association of American Law Schools; and they meet in their own localities for a variety of activities and events. The Law School’s Master Calendar notes the frequent alumni events both here and away from New Haven at www.law.yale.edu/calendar. To further communication among members of the Law School community, the Yale Virtual Station (www.aya.yale.edu/vys) allows alumni to have a lifelong e-mail alias address.

A wonderful innovation for the Yale Law School community is the online Alumni Mentoring Network (AMN), which is accessible via the Career Development Office Web site (www.law.yale.edu/cdo). AMN offers both alumni and current law students the opportunity to seek out hundreds of graduates who have offered to provide career-related advice. AMN members can be searched by name, area of expertise, employer type, geographic location, and more. Through the Web site, alumni can now join the network, current AMN members can update their information, and both alumni and students can search for mentors online. For more information about AMN, including password information for searching the network, please call 203.432.1690 or send an e-mail to ylsalum@pantheon.yale.edu.

All graduates of the Law School are invited to annual Alumni Weekends, which take place at the Law School in the fall for three days of events, including talks, panel discussions, and meals. Current students greet and direct alumni to the various events. Graduates celebrating their reunions (5th, 10th, 15th, etc.) reconnect with classmates at special Saturday reunion dinners in local dining halls and Sunday brunches at the homes of faculty or other alumni. The theme for Alumni Weekend 2004 is “How Should a Yale Law School Education Address Global Issues?” In addition to panel discussions and talks on this theme, former Dean Anthony T. Kronman ’75 will receive the Yale Law School Association’s Award of Merit.

The Yale Law School Association consists of all graduates and was founded to strengthen the connection between them and the Law School. The association is headed by an executive committee consisting of approximately 180 alumni. Sixty of these graduates serve for four-year terms. A nominating committee selects twenty new members each year. The executive committee is diverse in areas of expertise and class years, and its members come from all over the United States and abroad. Meetings take place twice a year at the Law School: in the fall on the Friday of Alumni Weekend and in the spring. In addition to informal discussion about some aspect of the Law School’s curriculum, a panel or speaker introduces the meeting’s topic. Recent executive committee meetings have considered such subjects as the Global Constitutionalism Conference, the World Fellows Program, and the future of legal education. The present officers of the association’s executive committee are: Chairman, Max Nathan, Jr. ’60; President, Rhonda J. McLean ’83; Vice Presidents, Elliot H. Brown ’75, John M. Duff, Jr. ’66, Akosua Barthwell Evans ’90, James D. Miller ’75, Stanley E. Tobin ’58; Secretary, Jay W. Freedman ’67; and Treasurer, Jennifer G. Newstead ’94.

In more than fifteen states and cities across the United States and abroad, Yale Law School local associations provide social, intellectual, and professional opportunities for graduates. Whether it is a wine-tasting in Washington, D.C., a panel in Chicago on choosing judicial candidates, a large group of alumni enjoying fellow graduate John Weidman’s musical Contact in New York City, a beach party in Los Angeles, an informal get-together to greet recent graduates in Boston, or a dinner to greet the dean in Paris, Yale Law School alumni maintain important ties with each other and with their alma mater. For further information, please contact the associate dean for alumni affairs at ylsalum@pantheon.yale.edu; 203.432.1690.

YALE LAW SCHOOL FUND

The Yale Law School Fund was established in the late 1940s as the means of raising annual contributions for the Law School from alumni and friends. The fund now operates with its own officers and directors, who supervise an organization of class agents and class reunion gift committees throughout the United States. The Yale Law School Fund’s annual receipts have grown from $8,000 in 1949 to nearly $10 million in 2002–2003. The chair of the Yale Law School Fund for 2003–2004 is Curtis H. Barnette ’62; the vice chair is Gandolfo V. DiBlasi ’78; the chair of the board of directors is Robert Todd Lang ’47. The executive director of the Yale Law School Fund is Leslie D. West.

ENDOWMENT FUNDS

The Law School has the following endowed professorship, library, lecture, scholarship, fellowship, and prize funds. The date of the gift and the name of the donor are given in each instance.

Professorships

Simeon E. Baldwin Professorship (1896 and 1927). A gift and bequest of Professor Simeon E. Baldwin, B.A. 1861, for “a Professorship of Roman Law, Comparative Jurisprudence, or other branch of advanced legal education, as the faculty of the Law School may recommend.”

Alexander M. Bickel Professorship of Public Law (1979). Gifts from various individuals, news organizations, and others in memory of Sterling Professor Alexander M. Bickel, a member of the faculty from 1956 until his death in 1974.

David Boies Professorship of Law (2003). Established in honor of David Boies, a member of the Yale Law School Class of 1966, distinguished trial and appellate lawyer, by his friends and partners. To be held by a member of the faculty of outstanding scholarly achievement whose writing, teaching, and public service exemplify the qualities of intelligence, imagination, and judgment that have been the hallmark of David Boies’s exceptional career in the law.

The George W. and Sadella D. Crawford Professorial Lectureship (1997). A fund supporting either a professorship, a fellowship, or a lectureship. Established through a generous bequest from Dr. Charlotte Crawford Watkins of Washington, D.C., Ph.D. Yale 1937, professor of English at Howard University, in memory of her father, George W. Crawford (LL.B. 1903), 1877–1972, a child of former slaves who became a founding signatory of the NAACP and a trustee of Talladega College. He was in addition one of Connecticut’s leading attorneys, serving as corporation counsel for the City of New Haven and judge on the New Haven Probate Court.

Elizabeth K. Dollard Professorship of Law, Medicine, and Psychiatry (1990). Established by a gift from the Elizabeth K. Dollard Charitable Trust, in memory of Elizabeth K. Dollard, J.D. 1939, for teaching and research that explores the intersection of law, medicine, and psychiatry.

Wellesley College, M.B.A. 1978 Harvard University. To support the appointment to the faculty of distinguished individuals of global perspective.

Allen Duffy/Class of 1960 Professorship (1990). Created through the generosity of David A. (J.D. 1960) and Betty Jones and members of the 1960 graduating class, on the occasion of their thirtieth reunion, to honor the memory of deceased classmate Allen Duffy, J.D. 1960, a highly respected New Haven practitioner.

Charles S. Mechem, Jr. Fellowship (1989). A grant from Charles S. Mechem, Jr., LL.B. 1955, to foster an understanding of decision making in the business environment, through lectures and other presentations by senior corporate executives.

John M. Olin Distinguished Lecture Series (1984). This grant was awarded in 1984 by the John M. Olin Foundation to the Center for Studies in Law, Economics, and Public Policy. The purpose of the grant is to support lectures on important issues of public policy.

John R. Raben Fellowship (1975). Established in memory of John R. Raben, LL.B. 1939, by a gift from the law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell and augmented by his friends. Provides a fellowship to a person with a mature and highly developed skill pertinent to legal problems of the issuance, distribution, and trading of securities or of accounting for business enterprises, and will bring to the School an individual with the high qualities of intellect, integrity, and leadership exemplified by John R. Raben.

Irving S. Ribicoff Fund (1996). A gift of endowment from Belle Ribicoff, wife of Irving S. Ribicoff, L.L.B. 1939, to support fellowships for Law School graduates pursuing an academic career; visiting lecturers from the profession; curriculum development by faculty, and research and other investigative work by students, in issues having to do with lawyers’ responsibilities to their clients and to the public good.

Sherrill Lectures (1927). This fund was established by a gift from General Charles Hitchcock Sherrill, B.A. 1889, L.L.B. 1891. The income from this fund is made available to provide lectures on international law and relations.

Storrs Lectures (1889). Through the gift of the Misses Eliza T. and Mary A. Robinson in memory of their great-uncle, the Honorable William L. Storrs, B.A. 1814, at one time Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut and professor in the Law School, a fund was established to provide for a course of lectures dealing with fundamental problems of law and jurisprudence. These lectures are given by an American or foreign jurist or scholar who is not ordinarily a member of the regular faculty of the Law School.

James A. Thomas Lectures (1989). Established in honor of Dean James A. Thomas ’64 and his many years of service to the Law School, to provide for a lecture by a scholar whose work addresses the concerns of communities or groups currently marginalized within the legal academy or society at large.

Judge Ralph Winter Lectureship on Corporate Law and Governance (2002). To support lectures on corporate law and government and related topics.
